REVIVAL SERVICES

Large Congregations Listen To Evangelists Hart and Magann.

Opening Services of the Revival at the First Methodist Church---Fine Singing by a Large Chorus.

The series of special meetings under the leadership of Messrs. Hart and Magann was opened at the First Methodist church on Sunday. Large congregations greeted the evangelists at both the morning and evening services, and the local church workers were much pleased with the evident interest manifested. The opening service of the series proved that the evangelists were equal in all respects to any who have ever visited our city. Mr. Hart is a preacher of great power. He is a man of deep spirituality, great earnestness and strong personality. His delivery is very rapid and requires close attention. His sermons are filled with short, pointed sayings which bear the truth to the hearer in a form which will long be remembered. The addresses on Sunday were especially to the church members. In the morning Mr Hart spoke from the text, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." He emphasized the need of spiritual power as the one means by which the kingdom of God could be built up. He exhorted his congregation to seek the fulness of the Spirit's power that they might be used of God. The evening congregation numbered fully a thousand people. Mr. Hart spoke along similar lines to his address in the morning. Mr. Magann is proving himself a musical director of great ability. The book which is to be used in the meetings is one of which he is the author. The large choir under his direction sang with great power. Mr. Magann has a rich baritone voice and his solos will delight the music lovers of the city.

Week day services are to be held at 2@30 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. every day except Saturday.

At the Monday afternoon service Mr. Hart stated that the general topic of his Bible readings for the first week would be, "The Highest New Testament Type of Experience and Life." The special topic of the day was "Sin." He showed that Christ did not come to the world as a healer of the sick, nor as a worker of miracles, nor as an example of a perfect man, nor as a teacher, but that his mission was to save from sin. All else in His life was incidental to this mission.

In the evening the church was well filled again, a noticeable feature of the congregation being the large proportion of men present. The sermon of the evening was based upon four words, "Prepare ye—tarry ye." The evangelist declared that if the work which was to be done during the coming weeks was to be of a deep, lasting nature, there must be thorough preparation on the part of the individual church members. He gave many illustrations from his own large experience in revival work to prove that when the church is entirely consecrated to the work, multitudes will be seeking salvation.

Post Office Matters.

Many patrons of the office believe that a penny stamp on a package of papers, is sufficient. Such is not true as one penny only carries one paper to its destination and hundreds of papers are held for postage until the party addressed can be notified to forward additional postage that the paper may be forwarded to its rightful owner.

The outgoing mail at the post office was the heaviest the Christmas just passed of any time in its history. The receipts for the last fifteen days in December running three hundred dollars ahead of the same period last year.

Expert Hired.

Expert Accountant J. J. Farrell of Syracuse has been engaged by the Board of Supervisors to investigate the books in the County Treasurer's office. Mr. Farrell will commence his work on Monday at which time it is expected that the experts from the Comptroller's office will have concluded their labors. It was practically the unanimous opinion of the Board that an expert from outside the county be engaged to do the work.

MARRIED.

A very pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Whittemore of Volney Christmas night, when their niece, Miss Lizzie Hendrick, became the wife of Mr. King Sheffield of Scriba. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The bridal couple, attended by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whittemore, entered the spacious parlors as Mrs. Kingsbury of Lansing played the wedding march. In the presence of about fifty guests, the Rev. W. H. Pullen, using the impressive ring ceremony, made the young couple husband and wife. Caterer George Hall and his helpers served the wedding supper, after which Mr. and Mrs. Sheffield departed for their wedding tour.

Current Events Club.

The regular meeting of the Current Events club occurred on Monday evening, Dec. 22, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Bacon. A motion prevailed that, as the next meeting date would fall upon Jan 6, the first night of the week of prayer, to omit that meeting. Consequently the next meeting will occur on Monday evening, Jan. 20, at the home of Prof. and Mrs. J. R. Fairgrieve. The leaders will be Rev. J. G. York and Mr. John Hunter.

Messrs. A. W. Wiltsie and E. R. Redhead had charge of the program at the last meeting and there was an interesting discussion of the world wide matters of moment. The sailing of the United States Armada to the Pacific was discussed. Especial attention was paid to the trip of the fleet in its relations to Japanese conditions. A history of our means of transportation was given, showing greater and more systematic improvements must be made to our great waterways.

Mr. Redhead referred to the trial of General Stoessel and the bitter party divisions in Russia. It is expected that the recent appalling mining disasters are likely to lead to legislation looking toward the lessening of the dangers surrounding the toilers in the earth. Considerable was said relative to the Republican presidential possibilities.

Assembly Committee.

Assemblyman F. G. Whitney has been assigned the chairmanship of the Excise Committee. He is second on the Judiciary Committee and fifth on the Ways and Means Committees. These are all committees of importance in the Assembly.

Italian Caught by Chief Ross.

Alfonso Mule, an Italian on Monday morning slashed the throat of John Robinson, a bartender in an Oswego saloon. The assailant escaped. On Monday afternoon Chief Ross was enroute to Fulton from Oswego, recognized Mule from the description he had and in conjunction with Officer Hartigan arrested him and brought him to police headquarters. The Oswego police were notified, a patrol came to Fulton and carried Mule back to Oswego last evening.

Palermo Telephone Company.

The Palermo Telephone company has just completed in that town thirty-two miles of telephone, having connection with the Oswego County Independent Telephone company's line, known as the Palermo exchange. The line was built by Glen D. Trimble with money furnished by the officers and patrons of the line. G. D. Trimble is president of the Palermo company.

More Than Half a Million Dollars.

Cheese buyers Peach and Trimble during the year 1907 paid out $514,000 for Oswego county cheese, selling in New York, Boston, Cleveland and other cities. They deposited $70,000 with the Citizen's National bank, and $440,000 with the Pulaski bank, their home office. Mr. Trimble has charge of six cheese factories, doing a business of a hundred thousand dollars. He also manufactures and sells 90,000 cheese boxes and runs a general store in Palermo. Messrs. Peach and Trimble will buy cheese the coming season, paying the highest market prices.

Lippincott's makes a specialty of humor, not only in its widely quoted department, "Walnuts and Wine," but in its fiction. Several of the stories in the January issue are very funny.

Generally the Case.

"I wish you would mention this to Jinks. It is highly important."

"I'll mention it to him today."

"But how do you know you will see him today?"

"I'm bound to bump into him. I owe him money."—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

DIED.

The remains of Mrs. Jane Penner, widow of the late Delos Penner, were brought to this city on Thursday for interment in Volney. The deceased was an aunt of Mrs. Orlando Cole, who resides on the Whitaker road.

Richard N. Hoff, aged 87, died on Tuesday morning at his home in Third street after years of ill health and months of invalidism. The deceased was born in Montgomery county and was the youngest of eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Abram Hoff. The father died when the deceased was but two years old. When he was 14 years of age he learned the millers trade which he followed all his life until ill health prevented. In 1870 Mr. Hoff bought the flouring and feed mill in this city which still bears his name although it has has been sold to Mr. E. R. Redhead. In 1853, Mr. Hoff was united in marriage to Miss Mary Bradt. Mrs. Hoff and an adopted son, Bert Hoff, of Buffalo, are the immediate surviving relatives. The funeral services will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late home and interment will be made in Mt. Adnah.

Everett D. McCoon, aged 19, son of Mr and Mrs. Fremont McKoon, died on Saturday at the parents' home after a long illness of tuberculosis. The young man was a favorite with his associates, being of an unusually happy nature. He was bright and quick in his studies and had the grim messenger spared him he would have graduated from the Fulton High School in June. He is survived by his parents, two brothers, Dana O., and John J., and two sisters, Mary M. and Helen T., all of this city. The funeral which was largely attended, was held from the home of the grandmother, Mrs. Mary O'Brien, on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and from the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 9:30 o'clock, the Rev. J. L. Lindsman officiating. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

The remains of Gen. Albert Lindley Lee of New York city were brought to this city on Thursday for interment. They were accompanied by Mrs. George A. Sanders of Springfield, Ills., Mr. Albert Lee, New York city; Mr. Herbert Hall, Brooklyn, Mr. Walter Cobb, Chicago, Ills.; Mr. J. J. Watts, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kellogg, New York; Mrs. Charles Kellogg, Chittenango; Mrs. Lydia Trowbridge, Mexico, and Mr. and Mrs. Ira N. Lee, Syracuse. The New York Tribune of January 1, in speaking of General Lee's demise said:

"Brigadier General Lee was born in Fulton, Oswego County, N. Y., on January 16, 1834, son of M. Lindley and Ann Lee. He was graduated at the head of his class from Union College in 1853. He then came to this city, practising law here from 1855 to 1857. Moving to Kansas in the same year, he was elected judge of the Supreme Court there in 1860. At the outbreak of the Civil War he entered into the service of the Union side as major of the 7th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry. In 1862 he was promoted to colonel, and in the same year organized a regiment at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He was through all of the important battles, and was appointed and commissioned brigadier general of United States Volunteers in the fall of 1863. During the battle of Vicksburg Brigadier General Lee was shot through the face and head, but after a few weeks reported for duty.

"He resigned in 1865 and went to New Orleans, where he was the editor of a Republican newspaper. On his return to this city, in 1890, he became a partner of Robert Goodbody & Co., bankers and brokers, with offices at No. 80 Broadway.

"Brigadier General Lee travelled extensively abroad, but always came to this city to spend part of each year. Prior to the opening of the Hotel Belmont, he had made his home at the Murray Hill Hotel since the early 80's. Although not actively engaged in politics, he was always a staunch Republican. He was a member of the Loyal Legion and the Union Club."

General Lee is survived by his widow, Mrs. Victorine Lee, one son, Albert, and one sister, Mrs. George A. Sanders of Springfield, Ills. The deceased was in Fulton recently visiting relatives and while here purchased a burial plot in Mt. Adnah but the climatic conditions make it impossible to prepare the grave until Spring so the body has been placed in the vault.

City Boards Organize.

The Board of Public Works met in the Water office on Wednesday noon, January 1, and organized as stated in last week's Times. Mr. Walter Bradley became president of the Board, and Messrs. Howe and Marvin Thomson are his associates. Mr. James Flynn was appointed Superintendent of Public Works at a yearly compensation of $1,200. Michael Sullivan was appointed sewer inspector at a monthly compensation of $35. Mr. Sullivan will also be appointed jailor and jail janitor. Miss Bertha Waugh was appointed clerk to the Board at a salary of $12 per month, and Mr. Frank Campbell, who has been a popular employe for several years, was retained as assistant clerk to the Board. Taken in its entirety, very little criticism of the Board and its assistants has been heard. The least popular move that could have been made was to appoint Sullivan to such a good situation when there were hundreds of competent, taxpaying Democrats who might have received the appointment. Mr. Sullivan is a close friend of Mayor Quirk, and that accounts for the selection.

At an adjourned meeting of the Board held on Thursday it was resolved that Superintendent Flynn make requisition on the Board for materials needed in the work of his office, and President Bradley was authorized to draft a blank for that purpose.

Superintendent Flynn was authorized to secure an inventory of all properties belonging to the city. Mr. George Chauncey, the retiring president, was tendered a vote of thanks for valuable information from the last Board and for courtesies extended its successors.

Board of Health.

The Board of Health met for organization on Thursday evening. Dr. Robert Case Scott was elected president of the Board and his associates are Mr. Charles R. Bennett and Mr. J. W. Rigley. Dr. S. A. Russell has been appointed city physician. Dr. E. H. Nodyne will be appointed city meat and milk inspector and veterinary surgeon. The Board will meet this Wednesday evening.

Civil Service Commission.

The Civil Service Commission met on Monday evening and elected Mr. Leonard Taggart president of the Commission. His co-workers will be Messrs. Daniel Brannan and John J. Little. The Commission appointed Mr. L. F. Cornell secretary to the Board.

Fulton Prosperous.

The annual statement of the Fulton Savings bank published on another page, shows Fulton to be prosperous and her people placing full confidence in the stability of her savings institution. A perusal of the list of officers and directors of the bank insures a continuance of that feeling, as they are among the most successful and conservative business men in the city.

Surrogate's Court.

Ezra A. Barnes has been appointed referee to hear the evidence in a proceedings to sell the real estate of the late Albert J. Spencer, Fulton, in order to pay debts.

An order to show cause why an accounting should not be filed by Anna E. Stonika in the estate of F. G. Fitch, Fulton, has been issued. Citations were issued returnable January 6th.

The inventory of the estate of Elizabeth Morton, filed by John Morton, shows property valued at $13,329.36.

Oyster Depot.

Baltimore oysters fresh every day. A large stock. Will sell at wholesale or retail. Draper, No. 11 South First street.

Numerous Fires.

Three fires from Saturday evening at 8 o'clock until Sunday noon, was Fulton's record. The department was first called to the West side, where a fire had started in a house owned by a Mrs. Loughlin. Its origin was thought to be incendiary. On Sunday morning at 7 o'clock the department was called to a fire in the house in Cayuga street back of the laundry, owned by Mr. Walter Bradley. At noon a wooden hood over a drying machine in the Victoria mill caught fire, and had it not been instantly discovered by the watchman, serious damage would have resulted. The flames were carried up through the two-story ventilator, but were easily extinguished by the firemen.

A Coming Event.

Those who have been approached regarding the recital of Rip Van Winkle by George Kiernan, to be rendered at the Universalist church on February 22d, under the auspices of the D. A. R. for the benefit of the monument fund, evince great interest and at this early date quite a number of people have announced their intention of giving their support. The fact that the recitals of the Jefferson cycle were arranged by Mr. Kiernan with Mr. Jefferson's approval, should interest all lovers of the gentle actor. To have a loved personality renewed before one ever so slightly is a peculiar satisfaction, but judging from the exceptional endorsements of Mr. Kiernan's work an evening of rare pleasure and enjoyment awaits his hearers, for it is emphatically claimed that through a delicate suggestiveness, a hint, a sense of the great actor's presence, sweet memories of the artistic work of Jefferson are recalled.

To accomplish this must have required the deepest study and a most sincere affection for the beloved Jefferson coupled with talent of the finest quality. Mr. Kiernan's recital will occupy over two hours' time, all of the lines of the play being rendered from memory, all of the principal characters presented, and Joseph Jefferson constantly suggested in the character of "Rip."

Telephone Company Incorporates.

The Palermo Telephone company has just been incorporated with the Secretary of State to carry on operations in the town of Palermo and elsewhere in the State. The capital stock is $3,000, divided into shares of $10 each. The directors are as follows: S. C. Brown, Ray Davis and G. W. Dennis of Clifford; Dr. A. W. Greene, G. D. Trimble and Glenn D. Trimble of Palermo; E. C. Johnson and L. R. Eastman of Central Square and J. H. Mace and F. A. McCollum of Fulton.

Prohibition County Officers.

The annual meeting of Oswego county Prohibitionists was held in Oswego on Tuesday. The following executive committee was elected for the coming year: George D. Harger, C. E. Pitts, C. F. Cyrenius, F. E. Passmore, W. G. Chaffee, Oswego; George Rogers and J. S. Stevenson, Hannibal; George R. Blount, Sandy Creek, and W. A. Fuller, Granby.

Fulton's Bill in Safe Hands.

The Congressional Record shows that Congressman Knapp is mindful of the urgent necessity for a new federal building in Fulton, as this early in the session he has introduced a bill for the erection of a public building in Fulton. The measure has been referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. Congressman Knapp will use his best endeavor to have the bill reported out as early as possible.

COUNTY TREASURER'S OFFICE.

Supervisors' Committee Discover More Than $5,000 Paid Out for County Supplies Without Audit.

During the political campaign last fall, the Times vigorously criticised the business methods pursued in the County Treasurer's office by Thomas Moore, who emphatically denied the charges. Now comes the report of the special committee of the Board of Supervisors to the effect that former County Treasurer Thomas Moore paid out of the public funds last year more than $5,000 for county supplies without audit. Some of the items are worthy of consideration. One that has met with much unfavorable criticism is for $657.25 to the Oswego Knitting company, presumably for underwear furnished jail prisoners. This bill was paid without even the O. K. of any member of the supply committee and it looks as if some one will have to reimburse the county for that amount. Another item is for $305 for clothing for prisoners and still another, $40, is for shoes, and one of nearly $200 for dry goods.

The following is a list of the bills paid by County Treasurer Moore not audited by the Board of Supervisors:

The above goods, purchased during 1907 are mostly O. K'd. by Supply Committeemen Hunt, of Oswego, and Streeter, of Richland. Bills where the goods were purchased in 1906 are O. K'd. by Thomas B. Wilson, who was Supply Committeeman for that year. Many of the bills are not O. K'd. at all and but few of the bills, whether O. K'd. or not, are verified, or sworn to, as the law directs.

It is very important and in fact it is absolutely necessary to health that we give relief to the stomach promptly at the first signs of trouble—which are belching of gas, nausea, sour stomach, headache, irritability and nervousness. These are warnings that the stomach has been mistreated; it is doing too much work and it is demanding help from you. Take something once in a while; especially after meals; something like KODOL for Dyspepsia and Indigestion. It will enable your stomach to do its work properly. Sold by all druggists.

Supreme Court.

There are seventeen Fulton cases on the calendar for the term of Supreme Court which opened in Oswego on Monday. They are as follows:

State Commissioner of Excise against Harrison Wells and United States Guaranty company; Jane View vs. the city; Ellen Cooper vs. the city; Richard J. Cullen vs. Thomas Hunter and George C. Webb; Annie M. Cannine, as administratrix of Arnold Bartlett, vs. the Battle Island Paper company; Daniel W. Kelly vs. the Battle Island Paper company; Duane R. Downes against the Oswego Falls Pulp and Paper company; Herbert E. Abbott vs. the Battle Island Paper Co.; Lemuel P. Austin vs. Ezra M. Grant; Paul Clement vs. George C. Webb and Thomas Marvin; Leah M. Spencer vs. the Fulton Savings bank and Dennis Spencer and William Spencer as executors of Albert J. Spencer; Joseph Kraus vs. Edward J. Schem; Frank W. Bartlett vs. the Hunter Arms company; Joseph Sawyer vs. J. J. Parker; Cora Chetney vs. Continental Casualty company; Bernard L. Howard vs. Charles Williams; Mary E. Gaffney vs. Thomas E. Gaffney.

If a cough once gets into your system it acts on every muscle and fibre of the body and makes you ache all over. It especially affects the intestines and makes you constipated, so in order to get rid of a cold thoroughly and without delay you should not take anything that will tend to constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts on the bowels and thereby drives the cold out of the system. It contains no opiates—it is pleasant to take and is highly recommended for children. Sold by all druggists.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heartburn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz., Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities, among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of American Dispensatory; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., Author of Eclectic Medicine; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., Author of Materia Medica and Prof. in Rennets Medical College, Chicago. Send name and address on postal card to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive free booklet giving extracts from writings of all the above medical authors and many others endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient of which "Golden Medical Discovery" is composed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. They may be used in conjunction with "Golden Medical Discovery" if bowels are much constipated. They're tiny and sugar-coated.

Board of Supervisors.

The last session of the Board of Supervisors was held on Tuesday, Dec. 31, when the following business was transacted:

A committe consisting of Supervisors David, Skillen and Hunt, was appointed to arrange for the working of the prisoners in the county jails.

That the County Attorney, working with the City Attorneys of Fulton and Oswego, prepare and forward to Senator Gates and Assemblyman Whitney a bill providing for State aid in building State roads through farm lands in cities and incorporated villages in the county.

On motion of Mr. David the Carleys Mills-Parish-Colosse road plans made by State Engineer were approved. The work is to cost $21,460 and it has been decided to let the State pay the entire cost, the towns to have fifty years in which to pay the interest and principal.

Authorizing the Chairman and Clerk to look after the county matters that may arise during adjournment of the Board.

By Mr. Osterhout: Thanking Chairman Taft for uniform courtesies during the session.

By Mr. McPeak: Thanking the Clerk for his many kindnesses to members of the Board during the session. Adopted by a rising vote.

Chairman Taft named the following committees:

To look after county's interest in the new bridge: Hunt, Gregg, Kellogg, Whitney and Beardsley.

Good Roads: Barker, Kellogg, Beardsley, Hydorn, G. R. Simons, Lockwood, Howard and Chiler.

Chairman Taft thanked the members of the Board for the resolutions adopted, and Mr. Coville arose, and in a pleasant speech, in which he thanked the Board for making him County Attorney, paid the members a high compliment for their efficiency and on behalf of the Board presented Chairman Taft with a sterling silver tea set, with his monogram upon each piece.

Chairman Taft was taken by surprise, but managed to thank the Board for their handsome present. Mr. Whitney also presented Clerk Spencer with a handsome monogram ring studded with diamonds.

Mr. Spencer replied in a feeling manner, thanking the members of the Board for their expression of his services and for the beautiful gift that they had given him.

The Board adjourned without date on motion of Mr. Barker.

WHAT IS MORE BEAUTIFUL THAN MOTHER LOVE?

A mother's worries are many. She sometimes forgets her own bodily discomforts because of her overpowering love for the child. She becomes broken down, sleepless, nervous, irritable and feels tired from morning until night. Many mothers of experience can tell you that at such a time they have been relieved, benefited and strengthened and put into proper health by taking a prescription which their mothers had told them was the only woman's tonic to be taken at such times. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has enjoyed an enviable reputation for over a third of a century. In all that time it has sold more largely in the United States than any other tonic for woman's needs, and today its sales are greater than ever.

In favor of Dr. Pierce's medicines is the frank, confiding, open, honest statement of their full composition, giving every ingredient in plain English, without fear of successful criticism and with confidence that the good sense of the afflicted will lead them to appreciate this honorable manner of confiding to them what they are taking into their stomachs when making use of these medicines.

ALCOHOLIC TONICS.

A great many women feeling the need of a tonic take a cocktail, whisky, or what is just as bad, some widely advertised compound, containing a large percentage of alcohol. Doctor Pierce's medicines are guaranteed to be entirely free from alcohol or narcotics—made of roots which cannot harm the most delicate system but have a wholesome, life-giving, tonic-effect upon the system. Tonics made largely of alcohol interfere with the digestion of certain foods, and as doses increase the alcohol absorbed gets into the blood and shrinks the red blood corpuscles. As the blood feeds the nerves the nerves get improper nourishment and the mother becomes nervous. As the nerves suffer so does the skin.

Better stick to a health-giving tonic that has in the past third of a century sold more widely than any other.

OPEN AS THE DAY.

What Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of. Its ingredients are: Golden Seal root, Lady's Slipper root, Black Cohosh root, Unicorn root, Blue Cohosh root, Chemically Pure Glycerine.

Hobart A. Hare, M. D., University of Pa., says of Golden Seal—"Good in all catarrhal conditions, as uterine catarrh, leucorrhœa, etc." Prof. John King in the American Dispensatory says of Black Cohosh root—another important ingredient in "Favorite Prescription:" "By its special affinity for the female organs, it is an efficient agent in suppression, in dysmenorrhœa. It is surpassed by no other drug, being of greatest utility in irritative and congestive conditions of the appendages, characterized by dragging pains, etc."

Prof. King says of Unicorn root, "have found this plant to possess a decidedly beneficial influence in cases of lassitude with weakness or dull pain in the renal, or lumbo-sacral (small of the back) region. It is one of our most valuable agents, acting as a uterine tonic, and gradually removing abnormal conditions, while at the same time it imparts tone and vigor to the reproductive organs. Hence, it is much used in leucorrhœa, amenorrhœa, dysmenorrhœa.

A PARTICULAR PHASE

removed by it is the irritability and despondency that often attends these troubles. In those cases in which there is pelvice fullness, the aching, bearing-down organs feel as if they would fall out of the body. Its action here is very decided."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation of the bowels, loss of appetite, coated tongue, sour stomach, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

Persons subjected to any of these troubles should never be without a vial of the "Pleasant Pellets" at hand. In proof of their superior excellence it can truthfully be said that they are always adopted as a household remedy after the first trial.

One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are cathartic. They regulate, invigorate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, take one each day. To relieve the distress arising from overeating, nothing equals one of these little "Pellets." They're tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules, scarcely larger than mustard seeds.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 31 stamps. Over 1000 pages and illustrated. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Chief Ross's Annual Report.

Chief Ross has filed his annual report with the Board of Fire and Police. The report shows practically one arrest for each day of the year the number totalling 338, but that does not reveal a hundredth part of the work done by the Chief and the patrolmen. In fact the greater portion of their work does not appear on the surface in any report. They do a work of prevention of crime and disorder that is as important as the arrests they make. The members of the force are humane men and they each have to their credit many cases of calamity averted by their judicious counsellings and advice. Of course it is utterly impossible for either the chief or the patrolmen to make an arrest for suspected misconduct. They have no legal right to officially speak with the horde of young people that daily and nightly patrol our streets, fitting themselves for lives of misery and shame. If the parents or the pastors would accompany either Chief Ross or a patrolman for one evening they would know more regarding the appalling condition that exists in this city, than in any other way. It is safe to say that many parents would invoke the assistance of the police in rescuing son or daughter from impending disgrace, would they take the trouble and the time to make a few excursions as suggested.

The report of Chief Ross shows the total number of arrests made to be 338, of which 324 were males and 14 females. Of the number 156 were aliens and non-residents. There were more arrests than last year, owing to the increase in our foreign population. The report does not include the civil work done, Judge Spencer's books showing that.

Still Ahead.

A congressman says he was riding in a smoking car on a little one track road and in the seat in front of him sat a jewelry drummer. He was one of those wide awake, never-let-anyone-get-the better-of-him style of men. Presently the train stopped to take on water, and the conductor neglected to send back a flagman. A limited express, running at a rate of ten miles an hour, came along and bumped the rear end of the first train. The drummer was lifted from his seat and pitched head first against the seat ahead. His silk hat was jammed clear down over his ears. He picked himself up and settled back in his seat. No bones had been broken. Then he pulled off his hat, drew a long breath and, straightening up, said: "Hully gee! Well, they didn't get by us anyway!"

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 8, 1908

Senator Allison is quoted as looking with favor on Mr. Cleveland's revival of the old plea for pensions to our ex-Presidents. He has no specific plan, but he expects the subject will be presented in Congress and that something will come of it. Mr. Cleveland modestly disclaims any desire for a pension himself. Was Mr. Cleveland thinking of his friend Theodore Roosevelt when he referred to "conditions that may arise in the future," that would render a pension to ex-Presidents desirable? That Mr. Roosevelt may constitute the most difficult problem as an ex-President that the country has encountered is rather generally conceded; but one thing is certain, and that is that Mr. Roosevelt will find the position no more melancholy than has Mr. Cleveland. We do not think he will need, or would accept, a pension. Mr. Roosevelt is in the very prime of life, and there is nothing to prevent his duplicating Mr. Cleveland's career and coming back to the Presidency for another term. Indeed the political probabilities of Mr. Roosevelt's future are almost endless. On the whole, it cannot be said that our ex-Presidents have constituted an unhappy spectacle, of late years at least. Nor have they been compelled to resort to undignified ways of gaining a livelihood. However, we believe that the country will cordially endorse any provision that Congress may decide to make for the comfort and financial independence of those men who have once filled the highest office in our land.

President Roosevelt's determination not to stand as a candidate for another term will cause the American people to think all the better of him for keeping to the promise he made on the day of his election and for respecting the spirit of the tradition established by Washington. Mr. Roosevelt is still a young man and will have many opportunities of rendering enormous services to his country. By his present decision he has increased his popularity and influence and will retain his firm hold on the hearts of the masses in spite of the opposition of the highest financial groups. In whatever field he may select for his future activities, Mr. Roosevelt will always be a power, a strong influence for good, for he has proved himself to be more than a President; a great statesman who mapped out his policy and stuck to it, a program which was thoroughly national, rising above mere party considerations.

The annual meeting of the Oswego County Agricultural society will be held this Wednesday afternoon. The Times for two years has urged the erection of a dancing pavilion on the Fair grounds and it again respectfully calls the attention of the Board of Directors of the Association to the matter. For real fun, in measure pressed down and running over, nothing can compete with a dancing pavilion on the Fair grounds and the suggestion has met with hearty approval by many, many Fair patrons. Enough to warrant the belief that the venture would prove a paying one.

The evangelistic meetings being held in the First Methodist church every afternoon and evening, except Saturday, are giving promise of being productive of great good and the interest is hourly increasing. It is hoped and expected that the earnest young men who are conducting these meetings may cause parents to watch more closely the outgoings and the incomings of the young men and women members of their family. The facts when brought home to many parents, will stagger them. The great crying need in Fulton to-day is not so much that the saloons be closed, that the slot machines be abolished, that the streets be swept but that the growing boys and girls be more rigidly watched and their associates and conduct guarded more closely.

Hon. Peter Porter of Pennsylvania has been recognized as a Republican. Having ridden into Congress on a cow, he declined to mount the donkey.

St. Louis reports a falling off of 600 saloons in the course of a year, which only shows how quick a St. Louis saloonkeeper can make enough to retire on.

Plain fisticuffs are bad enough. It is to be hoped that Congress will refrain from introducing the mass play and the flying wedge.

Pretty nearly all the things possible have been written anent Secretary Taft's return except an illuminating interview with Boss Cox.

A New York paper wants to know "What is good money?" Well, a St. Gaudens coin, for instance, despite all that has been said about it.

There is only one cheering hope held out in connection with the forthcoming Thaw trial, and that is that there will be no further mention of "dementia Americana."

Uncle Joe Cannon can claim the unique distinction of being the only man in the House of Representatives who is entirely satisfied with the committee appointments.

It is to be hoped for his own sake that nobody will start a subscription for a house when Admiral Evans arrives in San Francisco.

Not Much News.

In the summer of 1903 an exploring expedition set out from Cook inlet, Alaska, in an attempt to climb Mount McKinley, the highest peak on the American continent. They went in with a pack of canuses through a hundred miles of tundra and then struggled for weeks over glaciers and through terrible hardships, to emerge at last on the Chulitna river, down which they rafted to civilization, as represented by Cook inlet.

As they came in, worn, ragged, almost dead from exposure and hunger, a tall old man strolled upshore with four white men's dogs, says Robert Dunn in "The Shameless Diary of an Explorer." They asked him the news of the world.

"Waal, yer know the pope's dead," he drawled, "and the cardinals held a sort of convention and elected a new pope.

"Roosevelt he's agreed to complain to the czar of Rooshia about them massacreed Jews, and some one's killed that Queen Dragon of Servia trying to jump her claim to the throne. And Rooshia's going to fight the Japs. The' ain't much happened this summer."

Old Roman Laws.

The old Roman laws, according to Colquhoun, conferred on the husband complete empery over the wife. All she owned or earned was vested in him, and he acquired the same rights over her person and property as if she were his natural daughter. The wife, on the other hand, acquired all the rights to a child and to her husband's name and succession in the event of an intestate estate, and she could exercise all the privileges to which her sex admitted. The power of the ancient Roman father over his offspring was originally perpetual, nor could the child be emancipated from the father's control during the father's life except by that parent's consent, nor did he become sui juris until the father (being himself sui juris) died, when the son was emancipated by the simple operation of the law. In those brave days the father had legal permission to scourge his children or to send them, fettered like slaves, to work on his estate or even to kill them, choosing whatsoever means for their taking off he thought proper.

COMMON COUNCIL

The organization of the Common Council was effected on Tuesday evening. Mr. T. H. Marvin, Republican Alderman from the Fourth Ward, became president of the Council. The Patriot and The Observer were appointed the official papers for the coming two years and Mayor Quirk named the following committees: Printing and Supplies, VanBuren, Crahan and Lockrowe. Property, Crahan, Wolever and Van Buren; Finance, Marvin, Wolever and VanBuren; Officers, Wolever, VanBuren and Lockrowe; Ordinances, VanBuren, Marvin and Crahan; Claims and Grievances, Crahan, Wolever and Dwyer

Mayor Quirk, in opening the meeting, made a few remarks pleading for harmony throughout the city during the two years of his term of office. Clerk Harrison read Mayor Quirk's annual message to the Council in which he touched upon points of civic interest

The Council adjourned until Feb 4.

Lack of time forbids comment upon the message or the proceedings.

CASTORIA.

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

Common Prudence.

A teacher in a down town school has for her pupils the children of Russian parents. The other day she was explaining a sum in subtraction which the little ones found difficult to understand.

"Now," said she to exemplify the proposition, "suppose I had ten dollars and went into a store to spend it. Say I bought a hat for five dollars. Then I spent two dollars for gloves, and a dollar and fifty cents for some oher things. How much did I have left?"

For a moment there was dead silence. Then a boy's hand went up.

"Well, Isaac, how much did I have left?"

"Vy, didn't you count your change?" said Isaac in a disgusted tone.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Delaware Insurance Company of Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Jan 1, 1908.

Mr. George Frederick Schenck,
Fulton, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—We feel that this year particularly you are entitled to know at as early date as possible, the exact condition of this company, and the results of its operations during the year just closed.

The Delaware has not availed itself of the privilege granted by some of the State authorities to take for its annual statement the valuation of securities as of December 31, 1906, but this is taken absolutely as of December 31, 1907.

Notwithstanding the depreciation above referred to, which amounts to $62,825, and also a growth in the business as shown by increase in the reinsurance reserve of $128,530, the surplus is now $141,722.51, and the assets of the company are $1,787,038.06.

With the compliments of the season, we remain,

Very truly yours,
J. J. SMITH,
Secretary.

The January American Boy.

Stirring stories, interesting information, valuable instruction, and encouragement along lines of right living and high endeavor make the January American Boy a noteworthy issue. The front cover page picture speaks eloquently of "Breaking Home Ties." Dr. Owens's pirate story is continued two chapters, as is also "That Dillingham Boy." Mr. Trowbridge's serial, "The Boy and the Beast," is concluded, and Mr. Tomlinson's serial, "Four Boys on the Mississippi," is begun, and promises to sustain the splendid reputation of the author as a writer for boys. A notable article is "Canal and Jungle, the Boy's Own Story of the Big Ditch at Panama," written by Hugh C. Weir, who was specially sent by The American Boy to Panama to write up the true conditions for its readers, and the boys will enjoy the snap and vim of the story. Popular Science Department begins with the new year. It is edited by Professor A. H. Verril, a noted scientist. All the regular departments devoted to boy hobbies are filled with the matter in which boys delight. Sixty-four illustrations, $1.00 a year. The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

The New Sporting Annual.

The greatest of standard authorities, the "Police Gazette Sporting Annual," published by Richard K. Fox, Franklin Square, New York, has just been issued for 1908, and the many new records have increased its size but not its price. It contains records of baseball, bicycling, trotting, jumping, football, racing, aquatics, and all athletic sports. The main feature of the book, however, is the pugilistic records, and many pages are devoted to that popular branch of sport. This great book is made doubly attractive by its high-class illustrations and photos of the champions. It is authentic and reliable, and stands to-day an authority on the subjects upon which it treats. The price is ten cents; postage two cents extra.

Justice Keeney of South Hannibal died last week.

Mr. Frank Beecher of Oneida street is removing to Syracuse.

Rev. Harry Brenner of Syracuse university has been spending a few days with Fulton friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Bale and daughter of Volney will make their home in Michigan for several months.

Miss Margaret MacNamara has been entertaining Mrs. L. MacNamara of Baldwinsville.

The annual meetings of the First National and Citizens' banks will be held on Wednesday, January 14.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Donick of Oswego Falls start for California this week. En route they will spend some time in Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lampson, who left in November for California, have arrived at their destination after visiting many places of interest en route.

Mr. William C. Hubbard will on Saturday evening install the officers of Oswego Falls grange. After the business session, the annual supper will be enjoyed.

Miss Katherine Wright, who spent some time with Miss Ruth Adams last summer, is in a hospital in Syracuse, where she underwent an operation for peritonitis on Monday. Miss Wright's home is in Pulaski, and she is a student in Syracuse university.

The will of Charles P. Jones, late of Fulton, has been admitted to probate. Mr. Jones left $3,000 real and $250 personal property to his wife during her lifetime, and at her death it goes to their adopted son, Charles Frederick Jones.

Mr. William D. Carr has resigned his position in the Citizens' National bank, and Mr. Edward C. Rogers has been engaged to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Carr's resignation. Mr. Carr contemplates accepting a responsible position at Hafia Bay.

The first letters of administration issued by Surrogate Miller at his first regular term of court on Monday were on the estate of Emma Nelson of Schroeppel, who left $2,100 personal property. Ex-Surrogate Mead was one of the spectators present at the term and the first attorney to practice before Surrogate Miller was Attorney Louis Rowe, who was Mr. Miller's opponent for the Surrogateship.

They All Want One

And why wouldn't they? It isn't every day that electric flat irons are given away. Only from now until March 1. Call up H. R. Goodelle, Electrician, 'Phone 207. He will tell you how to get one.

Mr. Harold Cary spent Sunday with Oswego friends.

Mr. Walter Bradley is in New York city on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. John Chesbro have returned from a visit with friends in New Haven.

The American Garment Cutting school will be in session in the Bee Hive block, over Rosenbloom's store, every afternoon hereafter. During the morning hours, from 9 until 12, a large line of remnants of desirable dress goods and of petticoats may be secured from Mrs. Mitchell at exceedingly low prices.

On Monday it became noised around town that the J. C. O'Brien store cat had been gathered to its fathers. Someone remarked that Decorator Knofler was "tying the can" on so many desirable articles in the store to "get a move" on them that the cat died from fright, thinking itself labeled "next." For further particulars look in the middle window, First street.

The resignation of Mr. Edward C. Rogers, who has for several years been head bookkeeper in the Victoria paper mill, necessitates a change in the office force. Mr. Burroughs becomes general superintendent in the mill; Mr. Fred Snyder, office manager; Mr. W. L. Forsyth, bookkeeper, and Mr. James Carroll, stenographer. Mr. Charles R. Bennett is superintendent in full charge of the outgoing and incoming shipments for the mill.

Palladium: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ryan of Fulton, formerly of Oswego, celebrated the twenty-second anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Ryan were married at St. Paul's church, January 3d, 1886, by the Very Rev. Dean Barry, rector. Among the beautiful gifts received was a gold rosary, the gift of Mrs. Ryan's sister, who is a nun, and who is now located in Syracuse.

Dr. A. B. Wright has been appointed medical director for the Travelers' Insurance company of Hartford, Conn. Dr. Wright has many friends in this city who will congratulate him upon this appointment to a position of such trust and responsibility. Dr. Wright is a comparatively young man, and his appointment is the more flattering in that it is recognition of ability rather than years. Mrs. Wright was formerly Miss Sylvia Stephens of this city.

It is rumored that Messrs. Mosier & Somers, of the Fulton Contracting company, have sold their interest in the company to a New York city firm, which will remove to this city and continue the barge canal construction work, while Messrs. Mosier & Somers will go to Buffalo to execute the contract work on a large armory. Inquiry at the office of the company in this city failed to secure confirmation or denial of the rumor. It is stated that Mr. DeGraff will remain in Fulton, should the change transpire.

EDWARD PEPLE,
Author of "A Broken Rosary," "The Prince Chap," Etc.

Copyright, 1906, by Moffat, Yard & Company

"I'd be glad if you would dismiss my man as soon as he arrives. Bills is his name. Woolsey Bills."

"Yes, I remember him now. Lord, what a name!" said Richard, who had seen the man at San Antonio with Croyland for a day or so before his lordship started for the ranch, sending his man back to New York.

"Yes, isn't it? So suggestive, you know, to have him always around—specially on the first of the month, you know."

"Is that why you are going to fire him?"

"No; he's a lazy beggar," returned the earl, languidly suppressing a yawn, "and a thief, too, by Jove! The last time it was four pound six and my jeweled cigar cutter. Mention it to him—he'll understand. You might say also that I have a letter from his friend Mr. Drake of Scotland Yard."

For half an hour longer Richard remained with the earl discussing the details of the explanation to Mr. Renwyck and some other matters which he could attend to for Lord Croyland. Then he arose to take his leave, promising to run up to Irvington the next morning.

"Oh, I say, Wilson," the earl called after him as he reached the door, the nurse having just entered with a warning that Mr. Williams must be left alone forthwith, "you won't forget about that beastly machine, will you?"

"Certainly not," returned the buoyant Richard and immediately became oblivious to "beastly machines" and everything else on earth except the memory of a warm, limp form that had nestled in his arms and a head of wind blown hair that cuddled against his shoulder while he rode amid that mass of cattle on that faroff Texan prairie.

On the following morning Mr. Richard Williams, dressed in his best and with a soul full of hope and foreboding, took the 10:30 local train at the Grand Central station. He chanced to be the only male passenger to alight at Irvington, and with a beating heart he walked down the platform to the exit gate, when suddenly he heard a voice say:

"Pardon me, but are you not Lord Croyland?"

Richard turned to see outside the fence a restive mare hitched to a perfectly appointed trap, in which sat an elderly man of distinguished appearance. He recognized him at once, of course. Now, the Texan had not counted upon meeting Mr. Jacob Renwyck at the station, and his plans were disarranged materially by the unfortunate contretemps. He had hoped to enter the house before his name became known, and also he had prayed that the master thereof might not be at home at the moment of his arrival. However, he must put on a bold front and trust to luck. He pushed his way through the gate and approached the vehicle.

"I recognized you instantly from your picture," said Mr. Renwyck, thrusting out a cordial hand. "Glad to see you. Jump in."

"Pardon me, Mr. Renwyck," Richard began nervously, but the other interrupted:

"No time now. The mare has the devil in her this morning. Jump in. Steady, Molly! Steady!"

Richard's mind was in a whirl. If he wished to see the daughter, he must pass the fractious father first of all, so without more ado he sprang into the trap, intending to explain as they went along. The mare reared, wheeled and started off at a lively pace. Mr. Renwyck held the lines with an expert hand and plunged into a rapid fire of small talk.

"First trip up the Hudson, I take it. Magnificent river, but of course nothing like the Rhine. That's old Walker's place over on your right. Steep hill, this, but good for Molly. Will take some of the spunk out of her, confound her! Steady, girl! Steady!"

"Pardon me, Mr. Renwyck," Richard began again, "my name"—

"Yes, yes; I know," said the old gentleman, taking a corner sharply; "name's all right. I have your letter from Carthwaite. Fine old fellow, isn't he? Had hoped to have him during your visit, but he's gone to Chicago. Hello, postman! Whoa, Molly! Anything for me?"

A letter carrier stepped from the sidewalk and handed a packet of mail. "Party by the name of Lord Croyland stopping at your place, sir?" he asked.

"Yes," replied Mr. Renwyck; "this is the gentleman. Here you are, Lord Croyland. Thanks, postman. Go along, girl!"

The bewildered Richard found several official looking envelopes handed to him and, scarcely knowing what to do with them at present, thrust them into his pocket. They had reached the crest of the hill now and swung away to the left on a level road. Richard essayed once more to straighten out his friend's affair, when his host again cut in:

"Been in this country for some time, haven't you?"

"Yes, for some time," answered Richard, sparring for an opening.

"What part of it?"

"Oh, around in spots—Texas mostly—dabbling in cattle, you know."

The old gentleman drew his mare up sharply, then let her go again.

"Texas, eh? So have I. Ever met an old skinflint, cattle king, and so on, named Bill Williams?"

The tone of Mr. Renwyck's voice indicated perfectly in what low estimation he held the aforesaid Williams.

"I—I know his son," said Richard nonchalantly.

"Umph! Any improvement on the father?"

"In a way, yes," the young man replied, with a ghost of a smile.

Really, the conversation was growing interesting! For the moment Richard forgot he was Lord Croyland, although a resentment which he could not exhibit considerably modified his amusement.

"Don't believe it!" the old gentleman asserted flatly. "No, sir," he exclaimed, with a snap of his jaw under his white mustache; no, sir! No member of that generation of vipers could ever be anything else than a—than a"—

"Snake, naturally," suggested Richard in a bitter but carefully veiled anger, his heart lodging in the very bottom of his boots at this sudden development of Renwyck's unjust hatred of his father, which, in addition, boded ill for the success of his love affair.

"That's it," continued Mr. Renwyck, with cool deliberation, nodding vigorously—"a rattler!"

"Yes," smiled Richard, the humor of the situation appealing to him in spite of its possibilities. "I've heard him called that, too, in—in a poker game."

The adventurer was sinking every moment deeper into the mire. He did not think the present instant was auspicious for declaring himself a viper, yet tell his name he must soon, for even now they had passed the iron gateway of the Renwycks' country home and were whirling up a winding avenue lined with trees. What the result of this declaration would be he could but too well imagine. His heart sank; his hopes vanished.

Suddenly into his brain there dashed a brilliant idea—nothing less than an inspiration. To avoid trouble the Earl of Croyland had coolly appropriated the name of Richard Williams. A fair exchange was no robbery by the laws of love and war, and if Richard borrowed the Englishman's title for the time being an imminent calamity might be averted. At all events, he would meet the girl he loved, which was the chief object in view, and, besides, the proposition appealed to his sense of humor. His spirits rose at once.

"Er—pardon me, Mr. Renwyck," he observed, with a faint suggestion of what he thought was the Englishman's drawling manner, "what jolly fine grounds you have! What d'ye call 'em?"

"Restmore."

"Ha, ha! Very good. Really, you know, quite up to Croyland Park."

"Think so?" said his flattered host. "I'm glad you like the place. Here we are!"

He drew the mare up sharply beneath the porte cochere and tossed the reins to a waiting groom. In a moment the pseudo noble guest was standing on a wide portico whose pillars and trellises were twined with wistaria in the season's first luxuriant bloom. From a seat on the lawn a vision in a bewildering white morning gown arose and came toward him. The Texan was conscious of an electric current turned slowly to the crowning notch of ecstasy. He saw for the second time in his life an oval face framed in dark hair, a pair of melting eyes and a nose with just that saucy tilt which seemed to dare him to plant a kiss beneath it, and a figure that he had once held in his arms. How could he have ever let it go?

"Lord Croyland," said Mr. Renwyck, indifferently enough, as if adorable girls like that were as plenty as blackberries, "allow me to present you to my daughter."

The adorable girl smiled and extended a hand, which Richard took, striving to prevent his own from trembling.

"Miss Renwyck," he murmured, looking squarely into her eyes, "you convince me that America is the very finest country in the world."

CHAPTER V.

To dive is one thing, to swim about is another, and to get safely out is still a third. Having taken the plunge, Richard Williams was now at leisure to contemplate the deeps in which he found himself. Here he was in a strange house under a borrowed name and title, with little knowledge or experience to enable him to carry off the imposition successfully. True, from his associations with the earl in Texas he could recall some of the Englishman's oddities of speech and manner, to which his own soft southern accent readily accommodated itself, but this was a flimsy scaffolding by which to build a successful fraud. Though well educated, Richard's environment had afforded him small opportunity to become familiar with the manners of polite society, and his knowledge of England and English customs, like that of many better informed Americans, was meager. On the other hand, he had plenty of common sense, much of his father's native shrewdness, a fund of ready wit, a cool courage in an emergency and in general nerve enough to brazen out the affair until such a time as he might see fit to make a clean breast of it and trust the rest to luck.

Having made his preparations for luncheon, he was pacing up and down the rooms which had been assigned to him, thoughtfully turning the matter [illegible] when a servant announced the arrival of Croyland's man Bills.

"Ah!" said Richard, very eager to encounter what might prove to be the first check and get it over with. "Show him up, please."

The servant departed, and to the adventurer came another inspiration. Here was an opportunity which, if handled delicately, might lead to brilliant results. The valet entered—a slight man of medium height, with a clean shaven face, a puttylike complexion and a pale, unemotional eye.

"M' lord"—

The man stopped suddenly, passed his hand over his mouth and stood staring at Richard, while a look of recognition slowly illumined his brain.

"Why, Mr. Williams, sir!" he burst out presently. "I thought"—

"Ah," smiled Richard, in his most innocent and beguiling manner, "so you haven't forgotten your little trip to Texas?"

"No—no, sir. An' those awful cow gentlemen, sir!" faltered Bills, with a shudder of remembrance of some practical jokes of which he had been the victim at the hands of some of the cow punchers before he left for New York and civilization.

"Good! Now, attend me carefully. Do you know anything of the reasons why your master is in New York?"

"A little, sir, but not much—some business for the Japs, for a foreign government, sir."

Richard took a thoughtful turn up and down the room, then faced the man again.

"You look rather an intelligent man, Bills, and can appreciate what I am going to say to you. Your master finds it necessary to lie low for a week or two. Understand?"

"Very good, sir."

"In the first place, Lord Croyland authorized me to discharge you immediately upon your arrival."

The servant looked up quickly, a gleam of suspicion in his fishy eye.

"Askin' your pardon, sir," he said deferentially, "but 'ow am I to know, sir, that you—that"—

"That I am acting on the level?" finished Richard. "I admire your caution. To begin with, you'll have to take my word. If this, however, has no weight, I am to freshen your memory with a little matter of four pound six and a jeweled cigar cutter. Follow me?"

The valet licked his lips and said nothing. Richard went on:

"If you still have doubts on the subject, Lord Croyland is in possession of an inquiry from a friend of yours in Scotland Yard—an inquisitive duck of the name of Drake. I dare say he's asking after your health. Well?"

"When would you have me leave, sir?" asked Bills most deferentially again, without a change of countenance.

Richard regarded the man critically.

"That's just the point, Friend Woolsey. I think I can arrange to give you a position—that is, for a time at least. How much does your master pay you?"

"Twelve pounds a month, sir, an' my keep."

"Very well," nodded Richard, "I can do the same for you, with the promise of a fat bonus for good behavior. Now, listen. I'm going to trust you and speak candidly. Lord Croyland's got to lie low—Jap—er—you know."

"'Ow long?"

"For a week or perhaps longer. I am to be Earl of Croyland. You are to attend me as my man, address me as Lord Croyland and render me such assistance as I require. Is that satisfactory?"

The valet's lips twitched, but he answered, in a level tone:

"Beg pardon, Mr. Williams, but it cawn't be done."

"Why not?" demanded Richard.

"Cawn't reconcile it with my conscience, sir."

"How much is this delicate organ of yours worth, Bills?"

"Twenty-five pounds a month, sir, an'—the bonus as you were good enough to mention, sir."

The valet had the whip hand of him, and no one knew it better than the arch conspirator; therefore he hastened to clinch the bargain before the terms thereof should rise.

"All right," he agreed, "I'll do it—on conditions. I engage you for one month, that's $125, and a like sum, if you serve me faithfully, at the end of it."

"An'—the other Lord Croyland, sir?"

"I'll square you with him all right. You know who I am"—he paused and fixed his keen gray eye upon the man, adding, as his square chin grew more dominant—"but no monkey shines! I have a sort of bonus for that too. Just please remember that I can hit a half dollar at seventy-five yards—size 44—and I won't be trifled with. I, too, have a sensitive conscience, Bills, but it has its limitations. Now, then, what do you say?"

"Very good, m' lord," said Bills, with another deferential bow.

Richard chuckled and rubbed his hands. Matters were beginning to assume a more cheerful aspect. He paced up and down for a moment or two longer, then turned to the waiting servant.

"Now, Cardinal Woolsey, we'll get right down to business. I want you to go to the city this morning and bring me a condensed history of England and a map of your jolly little island. Then I'll need some rather strenuous coaching. Did you bring the—er—I mean—my trunks?"

"Your lordship's boxes, m' lord?"

"Oh, yes, boxes, of course. Thank you. Did you bring them?"

"They are in the 'all below, m' lord. I'll 'ave 'em up immejitly, sir."

Bills turned to go, but Richard checked him.

"Wait. I haven't finished yet. On your way to town and back I want you to take a memorandum of the names of Lord—of my friends in London and here in America. I want to know about my family, where I have been and whom I have met. You understand? General information. Now get those boxes and let's have a look at my togs."

"I understand, sir."

"It's lucky," soliloquized Richard after the departure of the valet, "that Bills is such an infernal rascal or I'd have trouble with him. Yet I suppose we might be called 'birds of a feather' in this." He frowned. "Oh, well, it's the only way to win her, and if I can make her love me she'll forgive me anything."

The luggage was presently brought up and inspected critically. Richard finding with joy that the earl's clothes fitted him to perfection, and while Bills was placing them in the various drawers and closets the new Lord Croyland sought for pointers thirstily.

"By the way," he exclaimed suddenly, "there is something important which I almost forgot. I've got to run the gantlet of that table at luncheon in about half an hour, and I want you to brush me up in the matter of cutlery. Do you understand the game?"

"Yes, sir; movin' in the best circles as a gentleman's gentleman, I know all about it, sir."

"You might throw in a few lords, you know, Bills, just to keep in practice, so you won't forget."

"Yes, m' lord."

"Well, as I was saying," went on Richard, "I went to a swell dinner at Houston once and haven't stopped blushing about it yet. I squandered seven different kinds of forks before the dessert came and found myself with a choice between a butter knife and an oyster sticker to eat ice cream with. It was depressing."

Bills curbed his smile and supplied the needed information, then made himself ready to take the 12 o'clock train to New York.

"Is there anything else, m' lord?" he asked.

"Yes," said Richard, who was perspiring before a mirror; "I'd be uncommonly grateful if you'd show me how to keep this blarsted single barreled eyeglass in without bursting a blood vessel."

Animal Instinct.

A friend of mine saw two cats approaching each other on the top of a board fence. There was no room for them to pass each other, and he wondered what would happen. When they were near each other one of them stopped, turned around and retreated till it came to another board fence that joined at right angles the one they were on. The cat stepped off on this fence and waited there till the other went by. My friend thought this act showed an appreciation of the problem beyond the reach of instinct. No doubt those cats had met before, and one was master of the other. What more natural than that the defeated cat should retreat before the superior and when it came to the other fence step off upon it and let the victor pass? The action involved no mental process any more than when two inert bodies in motion meet each other and one gives way. There was no other course open to the cat. If she or he had turned back and taken to the side fence solely to accommodate the other cat, why, that were another matter.

The Gordon setter that met a train of cars upon a railroad bridge and stepped down upon one of the timbers of the bridge and stood there while the train passed gave no proof of reasoning powers. It was the only thing the dog could do. Nearly all animals know enough to get out the way of danger. If they did not, what would become of the race of animals?—John Burroughs in Outing Magazine.

How the Brahman Cleans His Teeth.

When the Brahman cleans his teeth he must use a small twig cut from one of a number of certain trees, and before he cuts it he must make his act known to the gods of the woods. He must not indulge in this cleanly habit every day. He must abstain on the sixth, the eighth, the ninth, the fourteenth, the fifteenth and the last day of the moon, on the days of new and full moon, on the Tuesday in every week, on the day of the constellation under which he was born, on the day of the week and on the day of the month which correspond with those of his birth, at an eclipse, at the conjunction of the planets, at the equinoxes and other unlucky epochs and also on the anniversary of the death of his father or mother. Any one who cleans his teeth with his bit of stick on any of the above mentioned days will have hell as his portion.—"Hindoo Manners," by Abbe Dubois.

John D. Archbold, Active Head of Standard Oil.

With the advent of John D. Archbold to leadership in the Standard Oil company there has come a change in the policy of that institution. The traditional policy of silence and secretiveness has been exchanged for one of openness and confidence. As a result the Standard is now replying to attacks made upon its conduct of its affairs and is seeking public favor, whereas in the past its policy was to ignore such assaults and to assume indifference as to what the public might think of its acts and the plan of its operations. With this change in policy it is not so difficult as it once was to learn about the comings and goings and the personal characteristics of the men at the head of the Standard's management. Mr. Archbold especially has come into the limelight now that John D. Rockefeller and H. H. Rogers have been compelled by age and infirmities to lessen their grip on the affairs of the concern in which they were so long prominent. Mr. Archbold holds the title of vice president of the company, but he is in reality its managing head at the present time. He published a statement not long since in which he undertook to put Standard Oil in a different light from that in which it has commonly been seen by the general public.

In this statement Mr. Archbold defended the policy of the company at home and abroad in its dealings with its competitors, and the general public and in speaking of its treatment of its employees he said: "It has aimed to secure the contentment of its employees by liberal and considerate treatment allied with a pension system assuring a competency for waning years. About 65,000 employees are or may become eligible for this pension, and no less than half a million men, women and children are directly or indirectly interested in the preservation of the company. It may further be declared that the rights and equities of not even the smallest of its thousands of shareholders have ever been sacrificed."

Though of small stature, Mr. Archbold is a man whose appearance is impressive, and he has a remarkable head, marked with bumps indicating strong personality. He is not quite so bald as President Rockefeller, but almost. He was born about fifty-nine years ago in Leesburg, O., and during his boyhood his parents moved to Titusville, Pa. He started in business life as a clerk in a store. Then came the oil boom, and with characteristic prescience the young man invested every dollar he could save or borrow in that business. As a young independent operator he at first fought John D. Rockefeller and his South Improvement company scheme, the first attempt at monopoly, but later came into the Standard through the Acme Oil company, a subsidiary of the trust, and for his work in its development he became one of the Standard leaders. When the first trust was organized he became one of the trustees.

Mr. Archbold has a country place at Tarrytown, not far from Mr. Rockefeller's estate, and his family consists of a son and two daughters. He is a very large giver, especially in behalf of education, and to Syracuse university he has presented more than three-quarters of a million dollars. He is a fighter, but he loves a laugh and can see the funny side of things much easier than can Mr. Rockefeller or Mr. Rogers. It has been said that he laughed his way to success. Like Mr. Rockefeller, he plays golf and is up in the parlance of the game. He is president of the Knollwood Country club, and once meeting an old acquaintance whom he knew to have recently purchased a place in the vicinity and turned gentleman farmer he asked him how he liked living in the country.

"I am delighted with the change," the friend replied. "To be out exercising in the open air every day is a revelation to me. I never before really knew what enjoyment life possessed. I put in eighteen holes yesterday and felt no fatigue whatever."

Knowing that his friend was not a member of Knollwood, he asked him where he played.

"Play what?"

"Golf."

"I never played golf."

"I understood you to say that you put in eighteen holes yesterday," said Archbold.

"Sp I did, but they are post holes. I am going to run a division fence across my pasture lot."

On Wednesday evening Miss Anita Hunter entertained a large number of her friends at her home in First street in honor of her guest, Miss Grace McDonald. The affair was a leap year party and the fair sex did all the honors for the occasion, masculinity enjoying the novelty of being fanned, asked for the next dance, etc. The spacious drawing room was arranged for dancing and an orchestra furnished the music. An elaborate collation was served the guests.

Canastota Republican: The most brilliant social function of the holiday season was given Tuesday evening by Mrs. Milton R. Joy, when she formally presented to over two hundred friends and acquaintances, her daughter, Genevieve. The house was beautifully decorated with pink and white roses, evergreens and holly, with a generous sprinkling of mistletoe. Mrs. Joy and Miss Joy stood at the entrance in the front parlor and cordially received the guests. Mrs. Joy was becomingly gowned in violet lansdown, while Miss Joy was charming in a gown of yellow mousseline silk. Holdridge & deClerq's orchestra was stationed in the lower hall and rendered many excellent numbers during the arrival of the guests, and afterward played for dancing. An attractive card room was arranged in the large upper hall for those who did not care to dance. Sumptuous refreshments were served in the dining room, after which the New Year was joyfully ushered in. The following out of town guests were present: Dr. and Mrs. Louis F. Joy and Miss Paddock of Fulton.

Appreciated the Beautiful.

That it is not always well to put on one's dowdiest garments when one goes to visit the poor is the moral of a story told in an English magazine recently. There were two philanthropists, according to the tale, one a professional and the other an amateur. The professional had arranged to take the amateur to a gathering of slum dwellers in the east end of London. At the appointed hour the amateur, who happens to be a duchess and a great beauty, appeared at the house of her friend, a dazzling apparition in court dress, tiara and jewels. "Oh, my dear," gasped the professional, falling helplessly into the nearest chair, "don't you know that we are going to one of the lowest and most squalid slums? I can't promise that you will bring any of that back with you." But the beauty only laughed. "That's all right," she said. "I quite understand you. But poor people love beautiful things. Their children especially are captivated with fine dresses and feathers. Just wait and you will see!" And the professional did see. Those poor, half starved, half naked slum dwellers had eyes for no one but the dazzling young beauty who had done them the infinite honor of coming to see them in her most beautiful frock and jewels.

Murdered by a Statue.

The death of Kenith, the half mythical king of Scotland, was one of the most curious and remarkable in history, if it may be called a historical fact. It seems that Kenith had slain Cruthlintus, a son, and Malcolm Duffus, the king and brother of Fennella. She, to be revenged, caused Wiltus, the most ingenious artist of the time, to fashion a statue filled with automatic springs and levers. Finished and set up this brazen image was an admirable work of art. In its right hand Wiltus placed a ewer and in the left an apple of pure gold finely set with diamonds and other precious stones. To touch this apple was to court death. It was so arranged that any one guilty of such vandalism would be immediately riddled with arrows shot from loopholes in the statute's body. Kenith was invited to see the wonder and, kinglike (and just as Fennella hoped), tried to pluck the imitation fruit. He was instantly riddled with poisoned arrows, dying where he fell.

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But then it doesn't really matter about growing old, if we grow in other ways, if we grow in wisdom, in kindness and patience and strength.

Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period than the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

Creative.

A certain man coming from abroad was taken up by the smart set.

"We'll make a lion of him," quoth they, "for the distinction he will thereupon reflect upon us."

But the man was too little. It takes much material to make a lion.

"Then we'll make a monkey of him," said the smart set, determined to have some exercise for their creative genius.

Nor was the world the worse off. For, after all, it is the contribution to the gayety of nations that is especially needed.—Puck.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

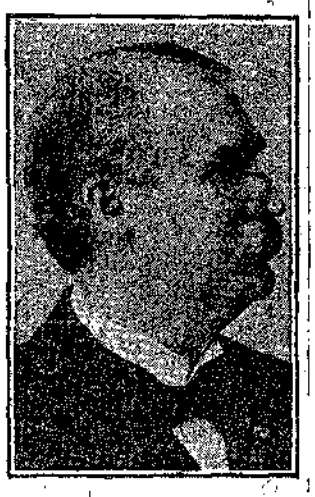
Antiracing Crusade Much Discussed—New Banking Laws.

NO INSURANCE CHANGES.

Probable Fate of Reform Bills Providing For Direct Nominations and Massachusetts Ballot Discussed by Legislators—Outlook Not Promising For Measures.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 8.—The state legislators have settled down to business now that the organization of the new assembly has been completed and the committees named.



While there is a feeling that the business of the session will be rushed and an early adjournment result, so that various members can busy themselves with the important party matters leading to the presidential conventions, etc., and to compensate for the prolonged session last year, yet it is acknowledged that the recommendations in the governor's message will be given careful consideration, as the governor's party is in the majority, and that too much haste may prove fatal to the measures introduced.

The evils of hasty legislation are too well known to be disregarded, and consequently there are members in each house that predict a long siege of work.

Probably the most engrossing topic resulting from the governor's message is that of his anti race track betting crusade. Much conjecture is heard as to the exact nature of the new measure affecting this matter that will be supported by the governor and as to the probable fate that will be meted out to it. The unqualified demand of the governor that betting be abolished and resultantly that the race tracks go out of existence has struck terror into the hearts of many of the supporters of horse racing. It is known to every one that no race track will be operated where betting is prohibited and prevented.

What Racing Followers Fear.

What the votaries of racing most fear is that some of the former advocates of racing will be won over to the

SENATOR JOHN RAINES OF CANANDAIGUA COUNTY.

(Senator Raines is the Republican leader in the senate. He served three years in the assembly, 1881, 1882 and 1885, and is now in his eighteenth year in the senate.)

governor's side by his recommendation that the agricultural societies be given money by the state to take the place of the immense sum now paid by the tax on race track receipts. The prospective loss of this sum by the agricultural societies has long been one of the most potent arguments against the abolition of the sport.

There seems to be considerable belief that an antiracing measure will not become a law. One senator of powerful influence has stated the probable fate of the bill as follows:

"The measure could undoubtedly pass the assembly, but when it gets into the senate it will find hard sledding. It must be remembered that the senate codes committee last year prevented the antiracing measure from being reported out, and, as the makeup of the upper house is the same this year, why should another bill of a like nature receive any different sort of treatment? I freely predict that at the close of the present session the antiracing bill will bear this epitaph: 'Died in Committee.'"

In the session before last a bill of a similar sort was introduced by Senator Cassidy (Rep., Schuyler county), and it died in committee.

The Wadsworths.

Speaker Wadsworth's father is a member of the state racing commission and much interested in the sport as well as being financially interested in the Kenilworth park near Buffalo, and it has been stated to be the belief in some quarters that this situation might tend to influence the consideration of the bill. Speaker Wadsworth has personally very little liking for horse races. He said a few days ago, "I would not walk across the street to see a horse race, but if it were a game of baseball—well, that's a different matter."

Money Spent to Defeat Last Bill.

Last year when the bill to prohibit race track betting was pending in the legislature the representatives of the race track at Albany received from the various racing associations these amounts to aid in preventing its passage:

Brooklyn Jockey club, $8,200.

Brighton Beach Racing association, $8,043.

Coney Island Jockey club, $3,260.

Saratoga Racing association, $2,391.

Metropolitan Jockey club, $2,391.

Westchester Racing association, $2,350.

Queens County Jockey club, $2,891.

The Jockey club, $9,421.

This amounts to $28,457, and in reports to the secretary of state the racing associations admitted these contributions to their attorney representing them at Albany last winter.

Last year was an unusually successful one financially for the tracks, and consequently it is thought that over $50,000 could be raised by the racing interests if necessary to defeat the bill.

Other Reform Measures.

The probable fate of direct nominations and Massachusetts ballot bills is also frequently discussed wherever lawmakers congregate. A canvass of members of both houses reveals that there is more sentiment against than for these measures and that some of the men who will vote for them when introduced will do so much against their own wishes, but feel that they ought to recognize the desires of their constituents.

There is a feeling among some of the legislators that the Massachusetts ballot would weaken political parties and that it would increase the expense of campaigns, and they state that the ease with which a ballot such as is now used in New York can be "cut" does away with the necessity of the radical change to the Massachusetts form, which does away with exclusive party columns on ballots.

Defeat Is Probable.

Taking everything into consideration it does not seem likely the Massachusetts ballot and direct nomination bills will become laws at this session, though the direct nomination plan is winning new converts each day, and it is certain to become a law sooner or later. Of course if there developed a situation that promised defeat of these measures and the governor sent a special message to the legislature enough opposition might be swept away to secure their passage. It all depends on how much the governor wants to see such measures become laws.

As to New Banking Laws.

The banking legislation will of course be of tremendous importance. The governor devoted more space to this subject in his message than to any other. It is thought that he will insist on having the new legislation put through the legislature in exactly the form suggested by himself and Superintendent of Banking Clark Williams and that he will be successful in so doing.

One influential senator said to the writer, "We will do exactly what the governor wants done regarding the banking laws, for he knows more about the subject than any one in the senate, but so far as racing, Massachusetts ballot and direct nominations are concerned some of us feel that we are better acquainted with the subjects in all their details than the governor and so will probably not follow all of his advice in those respects."

Blow to Insurance Interests.

The fact that the governor states that the new insurance laws do not need amending at present is a great blow to the insurance interests, which have been trying to convince members of the legislature that the new enactments were in many respects unjust. He says these laws should not be amended until experience shows "urgent necessity" for changes. Just what does or does not constitute "urgent necessity" will doubtless become a much agitated question.

The selection of Edwin A. Merritt, Jr., of St. Lawrence county as majority leader was a severe disappointment to Jesse Phillips of Allegany, as Phillips was urged for the position by many of his friends and he thought his chances very favorable.

The selection of George M. Palmer of Schoharie as minority leader was popular and a wise one on the part of the Democratic members, for Palmer is superior in ability to "Paradise Jimmy" Oliver of New York, the minority leader last year and Palmer's rival for the honor this year. Palmer is much more careful in passing judgment on legislation than Oliver.

The announcement of committees by Speaker Wadsworth, as usual, caused mixed joy and pain. Those ambitious members who did not get what they wanted find little solace in the reminder that they "may get it next year." The present is, as a rule, the only important time to politicians or statesmen. After the announcement of committees in the assembly the members made concerted attacks on the speaker in quest of patronage. Applicants for jobs were never more numerous, and some of those who rode to the capital in parlor cars will walk much of the way home.

The First Batch of Bills.

A total of more than twenty bills were introduced in both houses on the first day, one of Senator Agnew's being of particular interest, providing for a constitutional amendment to effect a raising of the governor's salary from $10,000 to $25,000.

Senator Patrick H. McCarren of Brooklyn has placed himself at the head of the attack on the policies of Governor Hughes. The senator has already made several adverse criticisms of acts of the governor, and he will head the movement against the antiracing bill and other reform measures.

New York city schoolteachers will again invade the capital, it is reported as the salary increase bill affecting women teachers will again be introduced. Members of both houses are exceedingly fearsome at the prospect, for the fair lobbyists are very determined.

WEST SIDE TRUNK SEWER

State Commissioner of Health Prohibits Its Use Unless a Disposal Plant Be Erected—Connections Must Be Discontinued at Once or a Fine of $500 and $50 Per Day will Be Imposed for Each Day the Violation is Maintained.

NEW YORK STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH,
ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 31, 1907.

Board of Public Works, Fulton, N. Y.:

Gentlemen: I wish again to call your attention to the matter of allowing any sewage to be discharged into the system tributary to the west side trunk sewer before the construction of the necessary disposal works is completed.

I have been informed upon authority that some five or more families have connected their premises with this sewer and are discharging sewage therein. These acts are in violation of the Public Health law, and the particular orders of this department contained in letters to you of Feb. 2, 1907, and May 24, 1907.

I will further explain that whether these house connections have been authorized by your Board or not, this department must hold you responsible for this sewer and any use thereof.

In view of the above facts, and the reasons set forth in my former letter to you of May 24, 1907, I wish again to call your attention to the fact that this department has disapproved any use whatever of the west side sewer until sewage disposal works, constructed in accordance with plans to be approved by this department, are completed and ready for operation, and to notify you to have the connections with said sewer above referred to disconnected at once—the penalty for non-compliance with which is $500 and $50 per day for each day the violation is maintained, in accordance with section 79 of the Public Health law.

Respectfully,
EUGENE H. PORTER,
Commissioner of Health.

The foregoing letter was presented to the Board of Public Works at a meeting held last Tuesday afternoon, and an immediate reply was sent to Commissioner Porter, requesting that a reasonable time be given the incoming members for investigation and the finding of a remedy for the deplorable conditions which exist before extreme measures are resorted to by the State officials. However, the fact remains that the use of the west side trunk sewer will have to be discontinued until the law, as interpreted by the commissioner, has been complied with.

The Board of Public Works is now confronted with a most serious problem which it is energetically trying to solve.

A line of investigation will be pursued, President Bradley states, regarding the best disposal plant that may be procured for the least possible outlay. This will consume some time. Mr. Bradley also voices the sentiment of his colleagues on the Board that they are anxious to give the citizens of the west side the use of the sewers at the earliest practicable moment, but while matters are pending, and in view of the threatened imposition of so severe a fine, it will not be possible to use the sewers

Fulton Choral Society.

The Choral Society begins its work for the present season with a rehearsal in Tucker's hall at 7:30 this Wednesday evening. Beginning with next week the regular rehearsals will be held in the Assembly room of the Public Library, by the courtesy of the Board of Trustees. The work for the present season consists of Mendelssohn's oratorio "Elijah," and members are asked to be prompt to-night in order to receive their copies before the work begins. The musical director will be Professor Grove L. Marsh of Syracuse, who has conducted the society for the three years of its existence.

Stockholders' Meeting.

To the Stockholders of Fulton Fuel and Light Company:

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting and election of directors for the Fulton Fuel and Light company not having been held on the day designated in the by-laws, a meeting of the stockholders of said corporation will be held at the office of said corporation, No. 48 South First street, in the city of Fulton, N. Y., on the first day of February, 1908, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of electing directors of said corporation and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

Dated Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1908.
C. W. TIPPY, Secretary.

FOR MEN ONLY

Great Meeting Planned for Next Sunday Afternoon.

Evangelist Hart will Speak Some Plain Truths to the Men at the First Methodist Church.

H. C. HART

On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock there will be held a meeting for men only, when Evangelist Hart will deliver his confidential talk to men. The doors will open at 2 o'clock and it is expected that the church will be crowded. Special music is being arranged for the occasion, consisting of a male quartet and solos by Mr. Magann. No boys under 15 will be admitted to the services.

This address is said to be Mr. Hart's greatest. Great crowds have heard it in other cities and the newspaper comment has been most favorable. At Bloomington, Ill., the Colosseum, the largest building in the city, was filled to hear the strong address. At Seattle the Tabernacle, seating nearly 3,000, was filled. The largest crowds of men ever gathered at a religious meeting heard Mr. Hart in Tacoma, Spokane and Walla Walla, where this address has been given this winter.

The following from a Mt. Vernon paper illustrates the character of the service:

"Mr. Hart's address was a strong arraignment of some of the evils of the present day. As he talked of those of intemperance, of gambling, of lust, and of unbelief there was the closest attention on the part of his hearers. There were no extravagant statements; no sensational disclosures. The words were plain yet the language was chaste. There was no compromise with evil, and the intense moral earnestness of the speaker, his leading characteristic, drove conviction home with power. One moment an apt illustration would find the audience in laughter; another, and they would applaud; and as he touched the tender chords of men's hearts, there were tears. Strong men not easily affected wept; yet there was no excitement, but there was an undercurrent of feeling. Many in that audience said afterwards that it was the strongest talk of the kind they had ever heard. About seventy-five men as seekers, responded to the invitation."

No man of the city can afford to be absent from this meeting. Come early and bring a friend with you.

DIED.

Mrs. Anna H. Calkins, aged 78, died on Thursday at her home in Third street. She is survived by several nephews and nieces. The funeral was held on Saturday and interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

The body of Ruth Rebecca Green, aged 60, was brought to this city on Friday for interment. The deceased died at her home in Syracuse after a long illness. She was a sister of the late Samuel Green and is survived by one brother, Caleb, of Oswego; three sisters, Mrs. Charles Banks of Minetto; Mrs. George Banks of California, and Mrs. Elizabeth Fenner of England, beside several nephews and nieces.

The death of Mrs. Myra Fuller, wife of Mr. Carl Fuller, formerly of this city, occurred at Greensboro, N. C., on Jan. 7th. Interment was made in Greensbro. The deceased is survived by her husband and three children, Mrs. O. A. Casler, Miss Bertha Fuller and Mrs. Josiah Bridge. The family removed to North Carolina last Spring for the benefit of Mrs. Fuller's health and news has been to the effect that she was improving in health.

First National Bank Election of Officers.

The forty-fifth annual election of directors of the First National Bank of Oswego was held Tuesday morning. The following were elected directors: John T. Mott, Elliott B. Mott, T. P. Kingsford, Luther W. Mott, C. A. Tanner, H. S. Kearny and C. C. Place. The officers to serve during the year are John T. Mott, president; Luther W. Mott, T. P. Kingsford and Elliott B. Mott, vice presidents; Luther W. Mott, cashier; C. J. McDowell and F. S. Thrall, assistant cashiers.

Prize Fight in Fulton.

It is not often that the police authorities let a prize fight occur in our city, but we are to have one on Friday and Saturday evenings at Church's hall, and there is no doubt but that the hall will be filled early. The fight is a reproduction of moving pictures of the famous Gans-Nelson prize fight that went forty-two rounds and was won on a foul. It takes seven reels, containing 7,000 feet of film to reproduce it. There are two illustrated songs and two songs and dances.

Messrs. William Kelly of Oswego and "Jack" Conners of Fulton will appear in character sketches.

Do not miss seeing this. The price of admission is 25 cents; ladies 15 cents. Performance commences at 8 o'clock. Special matinee Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

FOR THE MONUMENT FUND.

George Kiernan in Rip Van Winkle.

Relative to the Jeffersonian recital by George Kiernan to be rendered at the Universalist Church Feb. 22, under the auspices of the D. A. R., Fulton, N. Y., the following extract may be of interest. It appears in the East Orange, N. J., Chronicle and was written by the editor, Mr. F. W. Baldwin, who enjoyed acquaintance with Joseph Jefferson:

"There are many people in the world who firmly believe in the spiritual return of some of those who have departed this life and they base their belief not upon material evidence, but upon the intangible and indescribable impression received under certain favorable influences. Such an impression is that which has been left by the remarkable cycle of recitals given by George Kiernan of the dramatic personation of Joseph Jefferson, making it seem as though a visit had been made in person by the actor. The second recital was given last Saturday night in the Woman's Club, when Mr. Kiernan presented "Bob Acres" in "The Rivals" as only Jefferson could do it. Monday afternoon he enacted "The Cricket on the Hearth" in which he made the character of the old toymaker stand out with a clearness that made those who had been familiar with work of Mr. Jefferson feel that they had for the time been in the presence and under the influence of the actor himself, and had a person who had been familiar with the work of Mr. Jefferson been brought blindfolded into the room without a previous knowledge of the purpose, he would have been inexpressibly startled at the sound, apparently, of the departed actor."

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But then it doesn't really matter about growing old, if we grow in other ways, if we grow in wisdom, in kindness and patience and strength.

Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period than the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

The Housekeeping Instinct.

A bright little girl who had successfully spelled the word "that" was asked by her teacher what would remain after the "t" had been taken away.

"The cups and saucers," was the prompt reply.

Woman's Wit.

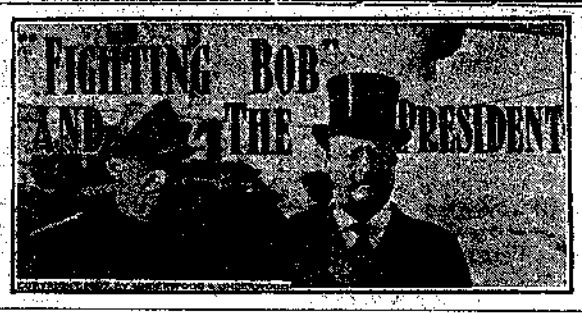
An emperor of Germany besieged a city which belonged to one of his rebellious noblemen. After the siege had lasted for a long time the emperor determined to take it by storm and to destroy all it contained by fire and sword. He did not, however, wish to injure the defenseless women; therefore, he sent a proclamation into the town, saying that all the women might leave the place unhurt and carry with them whatever they held most precious. The nobleman's wife instantly decided to take her husband, and the other women followed her example. They soon issued from the city gate in a long procession, each one with her husband on her shoulders. The emperor was so much struck with the noble conduct of the women that he spared all; even the city itself was left untouched.

Wouldn't Tip It.

A Toronto man who visited England last summer appears to think that country the champion tip taker. He says: "Well, I had tipped every man from the swell gent who seemed to own the house of commons down to the hireling who gummed the wrong labels on my luggage, and I went into the waiting room on the landing stage at Liverpool to wash my hands of everything English, and what do you think stared me in the face when I had finished? A placard saying, 'Please tip the basin.' I'll be hanged if I did!"

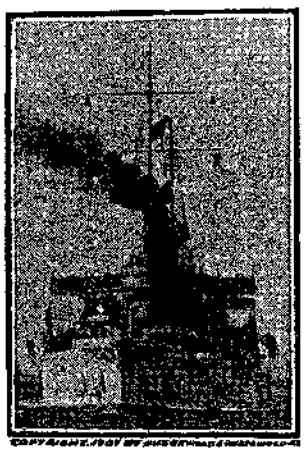
The Dream and the Reality.

Municipal jobs are usually given out as political rewards. The fitness of the applicant, his faithfulness to duty, his honesty, integrity and industry are all secondary considerations. His faithfulness and his value to party or faction are of first importance to the party managers, who really run all municipal plants. The result is indifference and extravagance, high costs of production and operation—in short, the complete annihilation of the beautiful theory of the dreamers.—Connellsville (Pa.) Courier.



Garantized Oils.

The following advertisement of olive oil is the work of a Rio Janeiro firm:



"Ours olives oils have garantized of itts quality. Diligently fabricated add filtrated, the consumer will find with them, the good taste and perfect preservation. For to escape to any counterfeit, is necessary to requiere on any bottles this contremare deposed conformably to the law. The corks and the boxes hare all marked with the fire."—Case and Comment.

The Tax Rate in Indiana.

Indiana is one of the few states that have a bureau of statistics. Its latest report shows that the tax rate in the twenty-eight cities which operate their own light and water plants is $1.96, while the rate in the other fifty-seven cities is only $1.77.

"GOODBY, old fellow, and good luck," said President Roosevelt as he grasped Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans by the hand and said farewell to him and the other officers of the great fleet now on its way to the Pacific. "Fighting Bob" and his men are doubtless looking forward to the adventures that await them in rounding the Horn and sailing up the coast of South America, but the scene at that parting will not soon be forgotten by them. The grim commander in chief of the fleet when he left his flagship, the 16,000 ton battleship Connecticut, and stepped on board the Mayflower to greet the president, the commander in chief of both army and navy, seemed to feel the serious import of the occasion and to be impatient for the farewells to be over. When Mr. Roosevelt and the rear admirals and captains of the fleet had grouped themselves before a battery of cameras and there was some fumbling among the snap shooters, this hero of many battles exclaimed: "Here, you fellows, shoot fast. I see you need some training at a navy gun."

Admiral Evans has quite a knack of coining striking phrases. Recently he was credited with saying that the fleet in going to the Pacific would be ready for either a "fight or a frolic." It was when he was starting for Cuban waters at the outbreak of the Spanish war that he made the famous remark to the effect that if he once got after the dons he would make Spanish the prevailing language in hades for the ensuing ten years. Previous to the sailing of the fleet from Hampton Roads all Japanese serving in any capacity on any of the ships were discharged. It is a coincidence in this connection that Admiral Evans himself once had a Japanese in his employ as a servant. He once told a story about this worthy.

"When I commanded the New York some years ago," he said, "I had a Jap servant with whom I was especially well pleased. He was prompt, remarkably quick to learn and took such a deep interest in everything that sometimes to amuse myself I devoted not a little attention to explaining things that he appeared not to understand. A good waiter, too, he was.

"Well, finally he disappeared. Some time later, when on the European station I made a call on a Jap battleship lying in the harbor of Marseilles. The captain met us at the gangway and escorted us to his cabin. As we were seated he suddenly turned, threw off his hat and whipped a napkin over his arm. 'The captain would drink?' he said in a tone I remembered. 'Kato!' I cried, jumping to my feet. 'The same,' he said, bowing. 'Captain Kato of the mikado's navy.'"

There was great rivalry among the officers of the navy in connection with assignments to duty in the fleet. One of the lucky sixteen commanders of battleships on this cruise is Captain Seaton Schroeder of the Virginia. He is one of the best known officers of his rank participating in the cruise. He was for some time governor of the isle of Guam, and during the period of his rule he endeavored to develop the public school system. An earthquake came along and destroyed school buildings, courthouse and jail. He tried to build some good roads, too, but met with difficulties again, among them the destruction wrought by a flood which demolished most of the bridges. He issued an order regarding the suppression of disorderly characters which occasioned comment at the time.

Captain Schroeder was appointed to the Naval academy from South Carolina in 1864 and graduated in 1868. He has seen important service in many quarters of the globe during his career and in the Spanish war was attached to the battleship Massachusetts, rendering a good account of himself.

Short Stories About People.

ERNEST NATHAN.

MUCH comment has been caused in Europe by the election as mayor of Rome of Signor Ernest Nathan, a Jew and a former grand master of Freemasons. His election was brought about by a union of other municipal parties in the Rome council against the Clericals, the aldermanic vote in his favor being 60 to 12. Much feeling has been caused in ecclesiastical quarters by the action. The new mayor is a son of Giuseppe and Sarah Nathan, who befriended the Italian patriot Mazzini in his struggles for a united Italy. This couple nursed Mazzini in sickness, and Giuseppe constituted himself his secretary and would have followed him into battle or exile. The parents of the present mayor lived at one time in London, and it was there that he was born. Later they resided at Lugano. The younger Nathan was educated at Oxford university and is a scholar of versatile attainments. He speaks the language of Dante with an elegance and precision that admit of no Roman idioms. A few years ago he became proprietor of the Liberal organ, Dovere, and he delivered in the College of Rome an address on Mazzini and his doctrine which attracted the attention and indorsement of the king, who called him in counsel as a result. It is said Mayor Nathan's hand is seen in the new scheme for the unification of taxation throughout the peninsula and in the steps that have been taken to lessen the agricultural burdens of the inhabitants of southern Italy.

Speaker Cannon of the house of representatives, lumbering down Pennsylvania avenue, leaving a trail of fragrant tobacco smoke in his wake, encountered Representative James S. Sherman of New York.

"'Mornin', Uncle Joe," said Sherman. "I congratulate you. Now Roosevelt is out of it nothing can prevent your being nominated for president."

"Jim," said the speaker as he entwisted his arm in that of the sturdy New York member, "I am reminded of old Bill Devine out in my district.

"Devine was on his way home from a political rally, and his skin fairly oozed alcohol. Passing through a field, he kicked up a rattlesnake, which emitted a warning. Bill drew himself up with dignified solemnity, eyed the reptile with lofty contempt and said:

"'Strike, darn you! You will never find me better prepared!'"

Martin W. Littleton, who will defend Harry K. Thaw when he comes up for trial a second time on the charge of murdering Stanford White, is an ex-prosecutor himself, having been district attorney of Kings county, a division coextensive with the borough of Brooklyn. He naturally occupies a position of some importance in his community and did not quite know whether to be annoyed or amused at the greeting he recently received from his client. It seems Thaw is a stickler for punctuality. A few days ago he asked Mr. Littleton to come and see him at 11 a. m. the next day. It was 11:30 when Littleton arrived.

MARTIN W. LITTLETON.

"Mr. Littleton," said Thaw, apparently greatly excited, "I requested that you call to see me at 11. It is now 11:30. Why are you half an hour late?"

Mr. Littleton eyed his client for a moment or two and then calmly replied:

"I knew I could always find you in."

Thaw made no reply.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, oftimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

German Humor.

The tendency of the German comic papers to employ continuously the same characters as "producers of mirth" is the subject of an article in a Berlin paper by Ludwig Bauer. The writer mentions as the most conspicuous of the funny figures the absent-minded professor whose habitual umbrella losing proclivities have made generations laugh. This figure had its origin at a time, he says, when the man of letters was a helpless person in the active world—a dreamer dwelling in realms away from the actual and therefore blind to his surroundings. In this form he has been represented in the comic papers. But Germany, he thinks, not the professor, has been and is being caricatured. The professor today must be a wide awake man, for science is no longer an island. These are not the days for sleep and for dreams. Another abused character is the lieutenant who, having his foe to fight, is always shown as making conquests where Amor has command. The old maid is another of the stock figures, and one of equal importance is Mr. Newlyrich. Of the latter it is said: "He is always full of fear and suspicion. He knows that he has been misplaced, and he sways from side to side like a timid rope walker. This makes him really funny, and we must laugh at his antics."

If a cough once gets into your system it acts on every muscle and fibre of the body and makes you ache all over. It especially affects the intestines and makes you constipated, so in order to get rid of a cold thoroughly and without delay you should not take anything that will tend to constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts on the bowels and thereby drives the cold out of the system. It contains no opiates—it is pleasant to take and is highly recommended for children. Sold by all druggists.

The Quest of Truth.

It is a good deal easier to poke fun at history than to write history meriting credence. Mr. Bodley when writing his "France" experienced the force of this in a curious way. He shut himself up in France for years to get the atmosphere and the knowledge necessary for his work. One of his trials arose over some question of electoral jurisprudence. It was not of international importance, but still interesting to students of comparative procedure. Therefore he wrote to a deputy who is a parliamentary expert to clear up the obscurity in which the text books involve the point and incorporated his reply in the text of the book. Later, being invited by an experienced mayor to be present at a poll over which he presided, Mr. Bodley put the question to him and received a quite different reply. Finally the author referred the point to a senator of indisputable authority, who showed that the deputy and the mayor were both wrong.—St. James' Gazette.

Storm Heroes of Our Coast.

This lecture by Hon. Arthur K Peck on the United States Life Saving Service will be given this (Wednesday) evening as the fourth number of the Public Library Entertainment course.

The particular merits claimed for this lecture are that it is upon a timely topic of intense interest; that it is instructive for the heroic work of rescue by the surfmen is little understood; that the whole story is a fascinating, thrilling narrative; and the illustrations both from a photographic and artistic standpoint are really wonderful. The collection, one which has no duplicate, and the difficulties of illustrating a subject dealing with scenes of action in a storm, have been met only by years of patient search for the real photographs.

In all 175 views photographically perfect and colored by the leading colorists of this country are used to supplement the lecture.

Entertainment begins promptly at 8 o'clock.

Tobacco Growers' Meeting.

The regular annual meeting of the New York State Tobacco Growers' Association will be held January 25th at 10:00 a. m. at the city hall, Baldwinsville. The proposed plan of giving prizes for the best exhibitions of samples of native tobacco has been abandoned, but there will be an interesting and instructive exhibition of wrapper and filler tobaccos grown in the Onondaga district, with a statement of the yield per acre and the fertilizers used to produce them. Notwithstanding the unfavorable season for producing tobacco, growers are urgently requested to bring samples of their crops

Mr. Harris will speak on the results of the government experiments in the district during the past season and a number of other speakers are expected to be present. It is proposed to make the meeting one of general discussion and mutual exchange of ideas and experiences.

Everybody come.

F. W. FENNER, President.

It is very important and in fact it is absolutely necessary to health that we give relief to the stomach promptly at the first signs of trouble—which are belching of gas, nausea, sour stomach, headache, irritability and nervousness. These are warnings that the stomach has been maltreated; it is doing too much work and it is demanding help from you. Take something once in a while; especially after meals; something like KODOL for Dyspepsia and Indigestion. It will enable your stomach to do its work properly. Sold by all druggists.

Foster Theatre.

That old saw of "Be good and be who will be clever" is all right of course, but in these days it should read "Be good, if you can, but you must be clever" if you want an audience. It is many seasons since a comic opera has been put out, but we are blessed by not only a new one but a clever one, written by Charles Felton Pidgin, who also wrote the novel The Toymakers. The music is just as snappy and sparkling as the words and the whole opera is pleasing and melodious. "The Jollities" are a happy company of singers, comedians and dancers and will give a clean, wholesome presentation at the Foster Theatre on Thursday evening, January 16th for one night only.

The main feature of this comic absurdity is an electric doll that is brought to life by its owner, an old toymaker, who has spent life and fortune in its construction and finally brings it to life, whereupon the droll performances cause the most ludicrous situations upon the stage and furnish great fun for the audience who are kept in a happy mood by Miss Daisy Dane, the village belle, who unknown to the inventor takes the place of his beautiful doll

"The Jollities" company have been enlarged, a chorus having been added since its last appearance here.

County Taxes Due.

Mild Hazing.

The proprietor of a plumbing establishment downtown has a poor opinion of goat imitations. A young man, dapper and twenty, came into his plumbing shop and asked to see an expensive porcelain bathtub. The proprietor explained at length the good qualities of a certain make.

"This seems to be an excellent one," said the young man.

Without warning he jumped into the bathtub, drew his coat closely around him and exclaimed: "Quick, turn on the water! I want to try it."

The proprietor thought he was insane and, soothing his head, said, "There, there, you're all right."

"Yes," the young man gurgled, splashing in the imaginary water; "it's very comfortable."

Then he began to squirm and splutter.

"Quick, quick!" he cried. "Turn off the water! I'm drowning!"

"Wait till I reach the faucet," said the proprietor softly, side stepping to the telephone.

Just at this moment two other young men, a trifle older, entered.

"Well, Bobby, had your bath?" they inquired.

"Yes."

"Then come down to the vegetarian restaurant and order a side of roast beef."—New York Globe.

Dickens and His Beard.

Frith painted Charles Dickens' portrait when the novelist began to grow a beard and told this anecdote of the occasion.

"Well, one day when Dickens was sitting the servant came up to tell me Sir Edwin Landseer was below. Dickens said, 'Let's have him up; he hasn't seen my beard and mustache yet.' Charles Landseer and Edwin had been abroad for some time together in Italy, and they hadn't all met for months. Edwin came up and took no notice of the beard, and at last Dickens said: 'Well, Lanny, what about all this? D'you like it? Think it's an improvement?' 'Oh, a great improvement,' Landseer said quite gravely. 'It hides so much of your face.' Dickens wasn't the least offended. He'd let 'Lanny' say anything."

Good as a Corksorew.

"Do you know how to take a tight cork out of a bottle without a corkscrew?" was asked by a woman the other day at a gossip party. "It's a mighty good thing to know in an emergency.

"My sister and I were coming back from the mountains, and she got faint on the cars. I had a bottle of aromatic spirits of ammonia in my bag, but when I tried to get the cork out I simply couldn't make it budge.

"'Let me take it out for you,' suggested a man across the aisle.

"Then, borrowing my pocketknife and using his own with it, he removed the cork in a jiffy. He inserted the blades on opposite sides between the bottle and the cork, each one turned in a different direction. Then when the blades were firmly pushed in he simply pressed the two together, gave them a wrench sideways, and the cork came out without any trouble. I have since tried it on larger bottles with success. It is a trick worth knowing."—Exchange.

Many years ago De Scott Evans, the artist, took a trip to Jamaica, and upon his return to New York he exhibited a number of pictures that he had painted during his outing.

One day a man who had been looking through the studio stopped before a certain picture and asked:

"What does this represent?"

"That," said Mr. Evans, "is a scene in Jamaica."

"Jamaica?" echoed the visitor. "That's strange. I don't remember ever seeing anything like that in Jamaica."

"You have been there, then, have you?" the artist inquired.

"Oh, yes! I live there."

"Well, you surely must be acquainted with this place then. It is a street scene in the principal town of the island."

The man from Jamaica looked at Mr. Evans for a moment as if he thought the latter must be daft. Then he emphatically declared:

"I live in Jamaica, and there isn't a street in the town that bears the remotest resemblance to that picture."

The mention of Jamaica as a town cleared away the mist.

"I see," said Mr. Evans, "you live in Jamaica, N. Y., don't you?"

"Yes," replied the suburbanite. "Is there another Jamaica anywhere?"

"I wonder if local mariners appreciate the optical illusion which the statue of Liberty presents to a man arriving in this port for the first time," said the skipper of an East Indian tramp, who a few days before had entered New York harbor upon his first voyage here. "I saw the statue before I got to the Narrows, and it seemed as if it were just about where quarantine is. Later the thing seemed about abeam of the Kill von Kull. It kept getting farther and farther away, until I finally wondered whether I should ever bring it abeam. I suppose its great height accounts for this."—New York Post.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

The keenest interest was manifested throughout the city for the two weeks prior to the organization of the new Common Council, which was effected on Tuesday evening of last week. The simple announcement in the papers, giving the result, did not convey any information to the outside world anent the causes which produced the effect. But few knew how Mr. Thomas H. Marvin, Republican alderman from the Fourth ward, became president of the Democratic Council, nor how the Patriot became the official paper at 8 o'clock, when at 7:50 o'clock four out of six aldermen pledged their allegience to The Times.

After the first conference was held by the new Board, the Times found that without Mr. Marvin's co-operation there would be a tie vote for it as the official paper. Not wishing to permit its friends to stand with the minority and incur the displeasure of the Mayor, the editor called Mr. Marvin on telephone and asked him to reply in the negative or affirmative, whether or not he would be friendly to the Times. Telling him that in case he would not, the other aldermen would be requested not to vote for this paper. Mr Marvin evaded the question for a moment and then said that he would vote for the Times. Several very good friends of the Times in both parties called upon Mr. Marvin and to them he expressed his determination to stand pat with his party and the paper which stood by him in the last election.

It had been conceded by nearly every one that the president of the Council should be one of the three Democratic aldermen, that, in the event of the Mayor's absence the party would have what it intended, a Democratic Mayor. Mr. Andrew Dwyer, alderman from the Second ward, which gave the Mayor the largest majority in the city, was admitted by Aldermen Lockrow and Wolever to be the logical candidate, and Mr. Dwyer had early announced his candidacy for the position. Whenever Mr. Dwyer was asked as to his preference he would state that when he voted for the president he would vote for a Democrat and he did not waver in that determination. Nor was there the slightest doubt expressed that Mr. Dwyer would fail to make good his word.

About a week ago rumors were circulated that Mr. Marvin was not playing altogether true with his Republican colleagues on the Board, but the rumor was stamped as false by the men in the Fourth ward who were responsible for his nomination and election.

Late Tuesday afternoon, prior to the first formal session of the new Board, the editor of the Patriot gave out the statement to a few choice spirits that Mr. Marvin was to become president of the Council and that he had promised to vote for the Patriot for the official paper. The news spread like wild fire and having reached the ears of several friends of Mr Marvin's who met him in the Citizens Club just before 8 o'clock, they asked him regarding the rumor. Mr. Marvin reiterated his oft-repeated pledge to stand with his party and for the Times, but he was uncommunicative when approached upon the subject of the presidency of the Council. Even then faith in his word was unshaken. When the Council met in the chambers the first business transacted was the electing of a president. Alderman Crahan of the First ward nominated Mr. Marvin, and upon the axes and nayes being called for, Aldermen Marvin, VanBuren and Crahan voted aye. Aldermen Wolever, Lockrow and Dwyer, nay, and the Mayor broke the tie in favor of the Republican alderman from the Fourth ward. The matter of the official paper next occupied the attention of the aldermen. Alderman Crahan introduced a resolution that the Patriot be appointed the official paper for the east side, and upon the ayes and nayes being called, President Marvin and Aldermen Crahan and VanBuren voted aye and Aldermen Lockrow, Wolever and Dwyer voted nay. It would thus appear that the selection of the Patriot was contingent upon Mr Marvin's elevation to the presidency over the head of the Democratic Alderman from the Second ward to whom the position rightly belonged and to whom the Republican majority on the Board conceded it. President Marvin also became chairman of the finance committee, the most important on the Board.

The Times has no quarrel with Mr. Marvin for what he did. He had a perfect right to vote as he did, providing he was not pledged to do otherwise. What the Times does criticise is the manner in which he attained the end sought. Had he said from the first that he was opposed to the Times and whatever other moves his colleagues desired on the Board, he could have still retained the respect of his friends. The Times did not lose anything in the deal, as it actually costs more to publish the official proceedings than the city pays for them. The editor of The Observer figured it out last week and can confirm that statement. The Times would also assure Mr. Marvin that it is in possession of the fact that two weeks ago he approached a friend of the Times and stated that the sooner this paper was killed the better it would be. That the Times created more mischief in Oswego county than all the other papers. The Times would tell Mr. Marvin that it is pleased that he feels as he stated. It is against graft, dishonor, liars, party leeches and shams and pretenses—whether religious, social or political; that it was and will continue to war while it is under its present editorship.

The Times far prefers to take defeat in the company of the men who counted their word of more value than empty political honor; than to have secured the appointment under the circumstances which surrounded the Patriot's accession. The Second ward may well repose full confidence in its representative. Alderman Dwyer was tried and tempted but he remainded loyal to his party and to his word, in even the smallest detail. He was unshaken throughout all the intrigue which surrounded him. Aldermen Wolever and Lockrow, too, measured right up to their party standard, and their wards and their party are satisfied with them. One Democratic Alderman, in explaining to his constituents why he voted a Republican into the presidency, is reported to have said "because they hadn't a Democrat they could trust."

In the organizing of the Council it would apear that the Times lost nothing, the Democrats lost all save honor and Mr. Marvin lost everything except the presidency of the Democratic Council.

Under an Oswego date the Syracuse Herald announced on Sunday that Hon. N. N. Stranahan was rapidly regaining his health and that he would return to Fulton in the spring. The news seems too good to be true, because eight weeks ago Mr. Stranahan resigned the collectorship of the Port of New York because his health did not improve, and very recently New York papers had dispatches to the effect that Mr. Stranahan's condition prevented his sailing for New York from England, although his passage was booked. This latest news will be very pleasing to Mr. Stranahan's friends, if true.

There is a pretty, ancient tradition that the angels in heaven weep whenever a star falls. There is a modern truism that men smile sardonically when they see a fellow creature fail through desire for political advancement—whenever they see him barter his honor for political preferment.

The Times Told You So.

Last summer, when The Times first announced that matters at the County Treasurer's office in Oswego were far from satisfactory, and that the requirements were not being legally complied with, a mighty shout went up throughout Oswego county. Not one other paper of either party investigated the statements and The Times was threatened with a libel suit. These discouraging facts did not prevent The Times continuing in the course it had mapped out, its purpose being to arouse the taxpayers to a realization of true conditions and to secure their protection by a more modern and painstaking conduct of the important offices in the county. Not one charge of dishonesty did it bring against the County Treasurer. The charges it brought were of carelessness and a disregard for the legal safeguards surrounding the conduct of the office.

The Palladium of Saturday gives proof that The Times was right in its attitude prior to the last primaries and election. It states that during the years between 1900 and 1907, the County Treasurer paid out $29,085.25 for goods and supplies ordered by supply committeemen without the bills being first presented to the Supervisors for audit. Some of the bills were O. K'd by a committeeman, some by no one at all, and in many instances the bills were not even verified.

In 1900 these bills amounted to $1,633.46; 1901, $2,702.77; 1902, $1,629.61; 1903, $3,479.29; 1904, $6,453.19; 1905, $4,628.17; 1906, $3,267.39; 1907, $5,231.83.

Every year the Board of Supervisors' Journal contains what is known as the report of the miscellaneous committee, which is the auditing committee of the Board, and the taxpayers have been laboring under the impression that the accounts contained therein were all the charges against the county. The people did not know anything about this practice of paying bills by the County Treasurer without their first being audited, that is, the general public didn't. Therefore it was impossible to understand the necessity for county bonds.

In one year the county paid for 19½ barrels of soap for the county jail, and a bill of $48.05 for smoking and chewing tobacco for jail use in one year has caused considerable comment. A year ago or more the Supervisors discovered that matters were not being legally conducted in the Treasurer's office and since that time there has been a continuous effort to ascertain the true status of affairs. It is strange, but very true, that the only men who have fought an investigation and have tried to impede the wheels of justice to the taxpayers, have been the men who are foremost in the alleged "purification of politics" league throughout the county. Republicans discovered the condition; Republicans are demanding that the truth be known. A Republican paper first published the facts and called attention to the necessity for action.

The expert hired by the Board of Supervisors to investigate the County Treasurer's office will undoubtedly commence his labors to-day. As soon as he makes known his report, The Times will give the result to its readers.

A Political Forecast.

[Oswego Palladium, Jan. 15.]

The Syracuse Herald says: Information has come from England that N. N. Stranahan, former Collector of the port of New York, is rapidly regaining his health and will return to his home in Fulton in the Spring, where he is a member of the law firm of Mead, Stranahan & Gaffe.

In certain political quarters it is believed that Mr. Stranahan will exert considerable influence toward harmonizing the affairs of the Republican party. Organization men, however, chuckle at the suggestion. The big four has been dissolved since "Stran" left and they don't look for its reorganization.

Gossip among those claiming to be well informed today had it that Jefferson and Oswego county had gotten together and would name a Congressman to succeed Charles L. Knapp, of Lewis county, this year. The slate, according to report, is that Judge Stowell for Congress and Isaac Hunt for State Committeeman with the additional understanding that Senator Cobb is to be returned as the representative of the Oswego-Jefferson district for an indefinite period.

All who partook of the Dutch lunch served at the last social session of the Chamber of Commerce will want to be present at the meeting to be held this evening, when a similar menu will be served after the business session.

A committee composed of Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mrs. D. L. Lipsky, Mrs. G. E. Mason, Mrs. G. W. Brooker and Miss Sara Lewis are perfecting plans for a leap year party to be given in Church's hall on Thursday evening, Jan. 23. Kapp's Orchestra from Syracuse will furnish music for the occasion. The party gives promise of being an exceedingly enjoyable social event.

The revival services now being held at the First Methodist Church under the direction of the First and State Street Churches are drawing large congregations both afternoon and evening. The singing by the chorus choir under the direction of Mr. Magann is much enjoyed. The sermons of the first week were exclusively to the members of the church and as the result of the searching exposition of the scriptures many Christians concluded that they were not living up to their privileges and have been to the altar seeking a richer Christian experience.

Sunday was a great day for the churches in spite of the inclement weather. At the State Street Church Mr. Magann preached in the morning and proved his ability as a preacher as well as a singer. At three o'clock a Christian workers conference was held, and at that service Mr. Hart spoke on the need of personal work in reaching unconverted friends. The evening service was attended by fully a thousand people, who listened with close attention to the sermon on "Shame." This was the first sermon addressed especially to the unconverted and at the close a large number came to the altar seeking the forgiveness of sin.

On Tuesday a large number of the church members spent the day in a house to house canvass of the city inviting people to the services. The entire city was covered in this manner. The sermon on Tuesday evening was on the subject "Hell," and Mr. Hart showed the teaching of the Bible on this debated subject. It is expected that the church will not hold the people on Thursday night when Mr. Hart speaks on "The Lance, Cards and Theatre." His utterances on this subject in other sermons leave no doubt but that he will handle these forms of amusement without gloves.

Annual Mark-Down Sale of Garments and Furs

You Can Buy Now at an Average of One-Half Off!

At the end of the season each year we get all of the sample garments and surplus stocks from the manufacturers who supply us with the select, refined goods for which we are famous. The prices we pay are ridiculously low---not enough in most cases to pay for the cloth alone, but we take everything, leaving the makers no small lots to worry about. Thats why we can offer you such unprecedented bargains NOW. In addition to this it is our custom at the end of the season to make EXTRAORDINARY reductions on every garment in our own regular stock. This includes ALL Suits, Coats, Waists, Skirts, Furs, Hats and Children's Garments. We have had an exceptionally satisfactory year's business in spite of the prevailing conditions and the question now is not how much we lose but how much we sell. The values are by far the best ever offered here or elsewhere in this section of the state. This is a strong assertion but the facts warrant it. Everybody knows that Witherill statements like Witherill goods are to be depended upon and everybody must be interested in reductions like these:

CHAPTER VI.

At luncheon Richard was presented to Mrs. Renwyck, nee Corrigan, a kindly disposed middle aged woman of ample proportions, whose money had enabled her to marry above her and who had since been desperately endeavoring to live up to the obligations of her position. To her a lord was a lord, indeed, and at first she was rather inclined to stand in awe of the Earl of Croyland's title, but before luncheon was over she had lost her nervousness and was beginning to feel toward him as though he were a real American. Miss Harriet Renwyck was charming, sitting opposite Richard, who, having crossed his first bridge with flying colors, grew more confident, though careful not to overact his role. Thanks to the instruction of the exemplary Bills, he was steering a safe course among the forks too. The Texan discussed America with his host, who admitted candidly that Richard's views were broader than those of any Englishman he had ever known. Concerning the present policy of Great Britain Mr. Renwyck found his guest strangely reticent. The conversation then turned upon various topics, social and personal, ending in horseflesh, which with Mr. Renwyck was a passion.

"Lord Croyland," he said, "I'm really worried as to what to do with a horse of mine called Hawk. He is demoralizing my whole stable."

"And what is the trouble with Hawk?" Richard asked.

"Everything," exclaimed his host. "A magnificent animal, but a very devil. I beg your pardon, Mrs. Renwyck, but it's true. Why, sir, there isn't a man on my place who dares to put his leg across his back."

"Ever try an outsider?" asked the guest, forgetting his part in his interest in the horse.

"Yes," returned Mr. Renwyck. "There was a jockey up here last week. I offered him $20 for every minute he kept the saddle. By a stop watch he earned about 10 cents and told me that he wouldn't have the beast for a precious gift."

"Too bad," murmured Richard. "Really, I should like uncommonly well to try him."

"You!" cried Mr. Renwyck in genuine surprise. He paused to laugh. "I know you Englishmen are pretty good horsemen, Lord Croyland, but I'll tell you what—if you ride Hawk for half an hour without a spill I'll make you a present of him."

"Done!" said Richard.

"On conditions," added the other craftily.

"And those?"

"If you fall you'll buy him at my own price."

"Done again!" said Richard quietly.

But here Mrs. Renwyck and her daughter protested vigorously. They would not have their guest murdered before their eyes for a foolish wager. There were other horses in the stable of which Lord Croyland might have his pick, so why jeopard life and limb on this crazy, cranky brute that had proved himself so dangerous? After much discussion the matter was compromised. They would inspect the horse after luncheon and then decide. Mrs. Renwyck believed that her guest after once seeing the animal would change his mind.

To Richard, who had been born in the saddle, so to speak, without reflecting on his mother, the prospect of conquering Hawk was as wine on a thirsty toper's tongue. Since leaving Texas his very knees had pined to grip a horse's barrel, and now it was with the greatest difficulty that his rising spirits were held in check.

Miss Harriet was divided between fear of an almost certain accident and the wish to see this young man ride. There was something about this easy, loose knit figure which inspired confidence. There was something, too—just what she could not say—that recalled a memory of plunging cattle, a face that loomed through clouds of dust, a steady arm that swept her from the saddle, and then—oh, nonsense! She liked this smooth shaven Englishman, and yet—she could like an unshaven cowboy too.

When they finished luncheon they repaired to the paddock, and Hawk was led from the stable, two grooms hanging warily to the double halter straps. He was a powerful roan, with a glossy coat and massive shoulders. The small head told of blood and spirit. The ears lay back, and the white of his eyes gleaming wickedly seemed to bear out Mr. Renwyck's statement as to his nasty temper.

"Umph!" said Richard critically. "Looks as if he wanted to put the gloves on with us, doesn't he?" He stepped forward, running his hand along Hawk's muscle quivering withers. "Jumper?"

"Yes, sir," returned the appreciative head groom; "four foot eight, sir, with a clean hoof."

Richard nodded.

"Just saddle him, will you, my good man? I fancy Hawk and I will hit it off together nicely."

The horse was led into the center of the spongy paddock, where the dangerous task of saddling was completed. Richard rejected the bit chosen by the groom, selecting another with a deeper curb. Then he buckled on a pair of spurs and looked to the girth himself. He sighed for a high pommeled cowboy saddle, but was forced to content himself with a flat seated English riding affair, in which, Mr. Renwyck remarked, he would feel more at home doubtless.

The Texan turned, smiling, to his host.

"Half an hour, did you say, Mr. Renwyck? I'm afraid you are about to lose a valuable horse."

"And I'm afraid," muttered the other under his breath, "that the house of lords is about to lose a valuable member."

"No fear," said Richard softly, catching his remark.

"Be careful of the stirrup, sir," warned the deferential groom. "He'll shy when you raise your foot, sir."

Richard thanked the man, stepped near the horse quietly and for a moment stroked his neck. The animal stood with drooping head and a look of docile innocence which to a practiced eye was a precursor of certain mischief. There was an instant's pause. The young man gathered up the reins, stooped slightly, then suddenly shot upward, landing squarely in the saddle and slipping his feet into the swinging stirrups. It was a familiar range trick and deftly carried out.

The roan sought by every equine trick he knew to unseat his master.

It is difficult to say which were the more astonished, the grooms, Mr. Renwyck or Hawk himself, who squatted, reared and wheeled sharply to the left. Failing in the first attempt to rid himself of an unwelcome burden, the animal reared again, spinning on the pivot of his heels, but stopped at the stab of steel between his ribs.

Then began a battle which caused Miss Renwyck to hold her breath in admiration and alarm and her mother nearly to faint with terror. Her father forgot his wager and his dignity and danced in excitement, shouting encouragement to the daring rider. The roan, now thoroughly enraged, sought by every equine trick he knew to unseat his master, but in vain. If he bolted to right or left he felt a weight swing inward at the turn; if he reared two maddening spurs were dug into his flanks, while the effort to lower his head was checked by an iron hand.

Presently the horse stood still, as though he were thinking deeply, then suddenly plunged away on a dead straight line. For twenty yards he raced, then spread out his legs and slid, in the budding hope that his rider might continue on, but in this he was bitterly disappointed. He felt the agony of a cruel curb that gripped his tongue and found himself forced back upon his haunches, while his tenacious rider still remained astride his back.

Now, Hawk was not a single minded brute and had, so to speak, another project up his sleeve. Without warning he dropped upon the turf and rolled. Richard jumped. He alighted upon his feet, ran backward to avoid the vicious hoofs, and as the horse rose he mounted with a flying vault, while from his audience came a cheer that was music to the vanity of man and a further irritation to the horse. The roan repeated his experiment the second time, but with the same result, then once more bolted on the run, this time for the four foot fence of the paddock. To dash his rider against a rough oak post was a most commendable design in a horse, but the rider was otherwise disposed. The Texan gave his steed a loose, free rein, but as he neared the barrier checked him sharply and applied the spur. Hawk quivered, crouched, then took the fence like a soaring bird.

Outside a smooth road stretched away till lost behind the crest of a distant hill. Up this highway the big roan thundered as though old Tam o' Shanter cowered upon his back, with a horde of witches streaming far out behind.

The heart of Richard had been singing with a conqueror's joy, and doubtless his reckless tongue might have taken up the song but for an unexpected check. As he landed in the road beyond the fence he spied a little red faced man who had clapped applause with two plump white hands. It was not so much the gentleman himself that troubled Richard's mind, but the thought of a doubtful compliment shouted down the wind:

"Very good seat for an Englishman, my lord!"

For Richard of course sat on his horse like a plains rider who loathes the up and down motion of England and the riding school.

For a long time Miss Renwyck and her father awaited their guest's return in great anxiety until they were relieved at last by the sight of him coming down the road at an easy canter, evidently master of the situation.

"He rides well, father, doesn't he?"

"He does," the old gentleman replied and added something which qualified a firm opinion.

Richard soon reached the paddock fence, forcing his jaded mount to take it for a second time, crossed the field and dismounted at Miss Harriet's side. The horse stood still, his head drooped again, but this time in utter weariness, not mischief. His glossy coat was streaked with foam, his widespread nostrils inflamed and red, while his barrel heaved to the pant of his labored breath. He shivered in defeat and offered no resentment of his rider's arm about his neck in a rough caress.

"Look here, young man," said Mr. Renwyck's greeting, "where did you learn to ride like that?"

"I was uncommonly keen on riding as a boy," said Richard, falling into a lazy drawl, "and, besides, I stayed for several months in Texas, you know."

Miss Harriet started and fixed a searching gaze on the speaker's face, but her father nodded gravely.

"Umph!" he returned. "I see. Good instructors, those fellows on the plains, eh?"

"Well, rather," assented Richard, with a laugh. "My trainer was a gentleman known colloquially as Dog Faced Sam, though I dare say his parents never bothered to christen him at all. Jolly sort, those—er—cow chaps, 'pon my word!"

There was a short silence; then Mr. Renwyck blurted out abruptly: "Well, the horse is yours, of course. You rode him for a full half hour."

Richard took out his watch, glanced at it and closed it with a snap and a sigh.

"Twenty-eight minutes!" he exclaimed in well assumed dismay. "By Jove, I've lost my wager!"

"Hold on there," cried the old gentleman, but laughing in spite of his earnestness, "you can't squirm out of it that way. Why, bless my soul, you could have stuck on him till he dropped dead. No, Lord Croyland, I'm not a welsher, nor do I shy at a margin of two minutes. No, sir, Hawk is yours!"

For answer Richard made a twitch of his thumb and finger, opened the horse's mouth and pointed to a badly swollen gum.

"He has a bad tooth, Mr. Renwyck, which perhaps accounts for his ugly temper. Fill it and you'll find a very different animal."

"What has that to do with the bet?" demanded Mr. Renwyck obstinately.

Richard fastened in his monocle after a desperate struggle and smiled and instantly lost his labor, for whenever he smiled it dropped out again.

"Couldn't think of accepting a different animal, y' know. Really, as Bills says, it wouldn't hit off with my conscience."

"Croyland," said the old gentleman, thrusting out his hand, "I didn't take to you much at first. But if you'll come with me to the house I'll introduce you to something that I keep strictly for friends."

Mr. Renwyck led the way with his wife, while Miss Harriet and the guest came sauntering after him.

"Lord Croyland," the young lady whispered, "I don't admire you especially because you know how to manage a horse—I've known other men who could do that—but"—

"But what?"

"I do admire you for knowing how to manage father. May I decorate you with this rose?"

Toward the Pole.

Ice eight feet thick on the ocean and snow falling even in summer—such is the weather experienced in the polar regions. When the air is dry and still it is remarkable how low a temperature can be borne with ease. One explorer tells us that with the thermometer at 9 degrees it was too warm for skating. The summer weather in this region is, moreover, in some respects pleasant and healthful. Within the arctic zone there are wonderfully colored sunrises and sunsets to be seen. They are both brilliant and impressive. But the nights—the nights are monotonous and repelling. A rigid world buried in everlasting snow, silent save for the cracking of the ice or the wail of the wind. Travelers in these regions experience many discomforts. The keen air causes their skin to burn and blister, while their lips swell and crack. Thirst, again, has been much complained of, arising from the action of the low temperature on the warm body.

Coddling the Stomach.

Do not pamper the children with hot-house methods; there is a common-sense method. If the children or the man or woman show a tendency to be "off their feed," if they begin to lose flesh, their stomach should be toned up with a harmless tonic which will increase the secretions of the digestive tract. A tonic made of native medicinal roots which will invigorate the stomach into greater activity and increase the secretion of the phosphates from the food—a remedy which will do this is one which has stood the test of public approval for nearly forty years, and contains no alcohol or narcotics. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It can be given to the smallest child with perfect freedom. If the blood is impure, if pimples, boils, headaches occur, if the stomach is weak—first eradicate the poisons from the blood.

AN IMITATION OF NATURE'S METHOD of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative extract of native roots, made without the use of alcohol, like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This vegetable medicine coaxes the digestive functions and helps in the assimilation of food, or rather takes from the food just the nutriment the blood requires.

Along with its use one should take exercise in the outdoor air, get all one can of God's sunlight and air; practice a deep breathing exercise every day. This "Medical Discovery" gives no false stimulation, because it does not contain alcohol or a narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. Unlike a cod liver oil, against which the already sensitive stomach will declare open rebellion, this tonic has a pacifying action upon the sensitive stomach and gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. It maintains one's nutrition by enabling him to eat, retain, digest and assimilate nutritious food. It overcomes gastric irritability and symptoms of indigestion, and, in this way, fever, night-sweats, headaches, etc., are done away with.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and entirely eradicates the poisons that breed and feed disease. It thus cures scrofula, eczema, erysipelas, boils, pimples, and other eruptions that mar and scar the skin. Pure blood is essential to good health. The weak, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience is commonly the effect of impure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood of impurities, but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and it enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

A consideration of first importance in deciding what medicine to take for the cure of blood or stomach disorders is as to its harmlessness.

Dr. Pierce is frank and open with the public for he tells just what is contained in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—its ingredients are Golden Seal root, Queen's root, Stone root, Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Mandrake and pure triple-refined glycerine. Concerning Golden Seal the highest medical authorities agree with Prof. John M. Scudder who says, "It stimulates the digestive processes, and increases the assimilation of food. By these means the blood is enriched, and this blood feeds the muscular system. I mention the muscular system because I believe it first feels the increased power imparted by the stimulation of increased nutrition. The consequent improvement on the nervous and glandular systems are natural results.

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Concerning Bloodroot The American Dispensatory says, "Stimulates digestive organs, increases action of heart and arteries—stimulant and tonic. Very valuable as a cough remedy—acts as a sedative—further valuable as an alterative."

Too Slow to Be a Soldier.

In a room on the top floor of a large factory a boy was amusing himself by going through the bayonet exercise with a long handled brush in lieu of a rifle. His boss, coming quickly upon him, gave him a box on the ear for wasting his time. The sudden blow caused the lad to lose his balance and fall down the hoist shaft, but fortunately he kept his hold on the brush, the handle of which, getting across the shaft, broke his fall and enabled him to grasp the chain, down which he slid in safety. The boss was horrified at the effect of his action and rushed breathless and gasping with fear down the eight flights of stairs to the basement, expecting to find a mangled body for which he would have to account. He was, however, just in time to see the lad drop on his feet unharmed, so, recovering his self possession and his breath, he exclaimed:

"Want to be a soldier, eh? Well, you're too slow for that. Why, man, I can walk down all those stairs quicker than you can fall down the hoist shaft."—London Answers.

Money Making

Uncle Sam's Mints at Work Night and Day Turning Gold and Silver Into Coin — Philadelphia's Great Money Factory — How a Dollar Is Manufactured.

Owing to the need for more coin and paper money to meet the demands of trade during this period of financial stringency the money factories of Uncle Sam are working overtime. A night and day schedule was recently put in effect by the secretary of the treasury, George B. Cortelyou. In the effort to increase the amount of money in circulation the government has been putting in operation all the agencies that have to do with supplying the public with coin or its equivalent in value, and for months to come there will be busy times in these places.

Within three months of the time the financial stringency began to excite general attention there will have been delivered into the hands of the people $60,000,000 in gold double eagles. The machinery of the Philadelphia mint is capable of grinding out 4,000 of the double eagles an hour. All these coins, in consequence of the recent order of the president, which has been so much discussed, lack the time honored motto "In God We Trust." To keep turning out such an amount of coin as comes from the mint at Philadelphia at this time means constant replenishing of the stock of bullion on hand. When the new Cunard liner Lusitania recently brought across the Atlantic a large shipment of the glittering yellow metal $10,000,000 worth was sent to the Quaker City money factory. In the vaults of the institution some $24,000,000 was already reposing, bringing the quantity available for feeding to the machines up to $34,000,000.

Work on the coinage of silver dollars and of subsidiary silver money is also going on at record breaking speed at the various mints of the government. In the process of making one of the "dollars of the daddies" the steps are about as follows: A silver brick worth about $1,300 is taken from the room where bullion is stored and conveyed to the melting room, where it becomes short slabs, called ingots. The ingots pass to the cutting room, where ponderous steel rollers flatten them out, and they are then treated by heat so as to become pliable, and after a process to make them of the same degree of thickness they go to the cutting machines, out of which the metal comes in the form of blanks.

These blanks of silver are called planchets, and after they come from the cutting machines they are inspected, weighed and subjected to the milling process, which consists in putting a ridge upon their edges to prevent the design later imprinted from quickly wearing off. They are then annealed and cleansed in a solution of sulphuric acid and fed to the presses, in which they receive the imprints from the dies according to the denomination of the coin to be stamped. In the coinage of gold the processes are similar, but differ in details. The selecting machine in use at the Philadelphia mint works with what seems like human intelligence. The blanks of metal are fed into the machine through a vertical tube the size of the diameter of the blank, and the pieces are conveyed into minute balances finely adjusted to grains and by a complex and ingenious arrangement of parts are shunted into conduits according to their varying weights—light, heavy, standard or condemned. Through these conduits they are delivered to the proper receptacles at the discharge end of the machine. The standard and accepted light pieces are then ready for milling. In the stumping process hydraulic presses are used, which are each capable of delivering blows of from 300 to 1,100 tons. After the coins go through the various final processes of weighing and assortment they are delivered in bags containing a certain number each and are distributed to the several subtreasuries.

"At Prayers" and a Seat.

The scramble for seats in the house of commons is regulated by certain rules. A member present at prayers has a right to the place he then occupies until the rising of the house. Each evening stands absolutely independent and by itself, and therefore the title to a seat secured by attendance at prayer lapses at the termination of the sitting. On the table in a little box is a supply of small white cards with the words "At prayers" in large old English letters. Obtaining one of these cards and writing his name on it under the words "At prayers," the member slips it into a receptacle in the bench at the back of the seat and thus secures the place for the night against all comers. He may immediately leave the house and remain away as long as he pleases. The place may be occupied by another member in the meantime, but whenever the master of the seat, the gentleman whose autograph is written on the card in the little brass slit, returns to the chamber the temporary occupant of the seat must give place to him.

The Prophetic Gift.

That there are persons today who possess the somewhat uncanny gift of being able to predict future events is probably true. The wife of the late Sir Richard Burton, the famous traveler and linguist, not to mention other instances of her weird gift, announced the very first time she saw Burton, at the time a perfect stranger whom she had met quite casually, that he would be her husband. At the present moment, too, there is said to be a man who has manifested such an extraordinary faculty of predicting things that are about to take place that a number of medical men have purchased the reversion of his brain in order that they may examine that organ after death to see if it shows any special development to account for his wonderful gift.—Grand Magazine.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

An inspector from Albany was in attendance at the High School last Thursday and Friday.

On account of a deficiency in the treasury of the Athletic Association, the game with Watertown scheduled for last Friday evening was cancelled and a game was arranged with Oswego. The visitors outplayed the locals in the first half, but in the second the locals pulled together and made a fast finish. Captain Webb was the star of the game, throwing 9 out of 13 fouls and 6 goals from the field. The final score was 43 to 34 in favor of Oswego.

An illustrated lecture was given to the Ancient History class by Prof. Hagar Monday evening. The invitation was also extended to the Senior Class. It was a very pleasing and instructive lecture and was enjoyed by all.

The A. K. A. fraternity held their regular meeting last Thursday evening in their rooms in the High School. They are planning a private dance for the near future.

Foster Theatre.

Stories of stage life always make interesting reading, and the following told by J. M. Hall, who plays the part of Willie Wildflower in the great comedy drama, "A Ragged Hero," which comes to the Foster theatre on Monday, January 20th, for one night only, is worthy of narration. "The first night this season," said Hall, "we opened in Philadelphia. I am always a nervous actor, that is, I always try to please my audiences, and therefore go to my work feeling that everything I do is real. We came to the great scene in the second act, where I rescue the child from the burning building, and the scene is really thrilling even to those behind the footlights. I was all right until I got on the swing and there looked up at the child in the second story window of the burning house, thirty-five feet above my head. I jumped on the swing and then everything seemed to get black. The child must have felt my nervousness, for suddenly I heard her baby voice calling 'Willie, Willie, save me.' I pulled myself together and swung up and caught her as she jumped into my arms. I am always glad when that scene is over, and I have the little one safe in my arms."

Daughters American Revolution.

Karendatyoga Chapter D. A. R., held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. G. C. Webb Jan. 13. The leader, Mrs. T. D. Lewis, assisted by Mrs. A. M. Eggleston, gave an interesting program, the subject being "The Jumel Mansion." "Aaron Burr," "Alexander Hamilton." One of the exceptionally interesting features of the business session was the presentation of the deed of a valuable lot in Mt. Adnah cemetery on which the chapter expects to erect a monument as a recognition of the service of those brave heroes of 1776 who made the United States a possibility, as well as being the pioneers of this vicinity, and whose ashes are resting here, many of them never having had anything to mark their resting place. Dainty refreshments were served after which the meeting adjourned to Feb. 10, when Mrs. F. E. Goodjon will be hostess.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The Big Lawmaking Machine Not in Full Operation as Yet.

SOME OF THE NEW BILLS.

Need of Legislation Shown in Labor Department's Report — Banking Interests Active—One Financier's Views. The Important Question of Reserves.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, Jan. 15.—Very little work has thus far been accomplished in either branch of the legislature. Short sessions have been the rule, and nothing of a particularly important character has been done by any of the committees, excepting probably that on military affairs.

The reports of several of the state departments for 1907 have been read with a great deal of interest, as the statements in some of them are significant. For instance, the report of Secretary of State Whalen, indicating a prosperous condition of business in certain circles generally believed to have been affected differently, has caused considerable comment. During 1907 the receipts of his office were $16,000 more than those of the preceding year. Mr. Whalen is said to be the first secretary of state that has ever sent an annual report to the governor. Two hundred and fifty more corporations were formed in the state last year than in 1906. A total of $161,000 was received in Secretary Whalen's office as fees during 1907.

Factory Health Laws.

The report of the commissioner of labor called attention to various defects in the laws governing different phases of the department's work. On the subject of health the report in part says:

The health provisions of the factory laws are both ill balanced and defective.

There is nothing in them that requires proper heating. This omission is supplied in some local ordinances, but elsewhere its want is sometimes serious.

They do not require that proper drinking water be supplied. The lack of it is a frequent cause of hardship and ill health in lower grade factories. Under section 94 the factory inspectors can require that a sufficient water supply for washing and toilets be provided in tenant factories and that water tanks in such buildings be kept clean, but their authority ends there.

Another Defect in Laws.

They do not regulate "humidity." This is one of the most important subjects of regulation abroad. As it is an unknown subject to our inspectors it cannot be affirmed that it needs regulating here, but there is a fair presumption that it does.

There is nothing in them to require that workrooms shall be kept clean, except those special provisions that relate to bakeries, laundries, tenements, certain kinds of shops in tenements and factories, and section 84, which prescribes that walls and ceilings shall be painted and whitewashed when required. Even rooms, even of some of the most reputable newspapers, are very bad, in this respect and show high rates of mortality and sickness. The more complete codes of European countries deal with this subject fully and prescribe frequent wet cleanings. Our code needs similar provisions.

Our law as to ventilation has been very imperfect. Section 85 limits the number of persons who may be employed in a workroom according to the cubic air space, but that is of little value unless there also be sufficient ventilation.

Child Labor.

Regarding child labor the report says in part:

The provisions of section 70 forbidding the employment of children under fourteen and of children under sixteen without certificates and those of section 71 limiting the hours of labor of children under sixteen have been most vigorously enforced. Two thousand four hundred and ninety-nine children have been discharged upon our orders. The proportion of serious and intentional violations has noticeably diminished, but the number due to ignorance, carelessness and indifference has continued large. The majority of violations are due to ignorance of the children's real ages. When a child of fifteen goes to get a "job" it claims to be sixteen and its parents say it is sixteen. Sometimes it presents a birth certificate or a passport which, in fact, belongs to another child or has been altered, but which to the unsuspicious appears regular and states that the child is over sixteen, and if it looks to be that age the factory proprietor or his foreman employs it. Then the factory inspector, more expert in estimating ages, cross examining children and detecting forgeries, comes along, and there is trouble.

Bankers Are Active.

The bankers of various parts of the state, particularly New York city, are already active in the mission of influencing the prospective new banking laws. Several bankers have written letters to the governor and to the members of the commission he appointed to examine into the situation, and some have visited Albany and will continue to do so until the new laws are enacted. The new committee on banks in the assembly, which will have considerable power in regard to the forthcoming bills, has at its head as chairman James Francis of New York city. He is looked on as conservative and as having the confidence of the governor.

A well known New York banker, E. Clarence Jones, has sent to Governor Hughes a letter that has been widely commented on by the legislators in both houses. The letter contains several recommendations that are undoubtedly sound and worthy of more than passing notice.

Especially important are Mr. Jones' statements relative to the repeal of a part of the statute of limitations. He says:

"The penal code provides that every director of a moneyed corporation who willfully does any act as such director which is expressly forbidden by law or willfully omits to perform any duty imposed upon him as such director by law is guilty of a misdemeanor if no other punishment is prescribed therefor. The code of criminal procedure then provides that an indictment for a misdemeanor must be found within two years after its commission. By the time any radical change in the management of the bank or trust company or any sudden catastrophe in business or any effort of a stockholder or depositor brings to light any act constituting a misdemeanor the two years since its commission have generally elapsed, and no one can be punished.

An Important Distinction.

"In the case of an ordinary misdemeanor the fact of its commission is in general capable of immediate discovery. In the case of a misdemeanor by directors in the performance of their duties as directors there is no probability of immediate discovery. All means of concealment are in their power and all chances of discovery are in their favor until after the expiration of the period of two years. This statute of limitations ought to be repealed so far as it affects misdemeanors committed by persons in the discharge of duties of a fiduciary character. The statutory period of limitation ought not to commence to run in favor of a trustee until the beneficiary of the trust has discovered the facts which make the trustee liable. This principle is recognized in the national bankruptcy law, which refuses to discharge a bankrupt from any debt created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation or defalcation while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity."

It is practically certain that the foregoing statement as to the existing law will be the basis for a bill shortly to be introduced in the senate.

Question of Reserve.

It is assured that the reserve of trust companies will be raised by the present legislature, but whether to 15 per cent or to 25 per cent remains to be seen. The national banking interests are exerting every influence to have the reserve of their rivals raised to 25 per cent. The trust companies are equally insistent that the reserve should not be placed above 15 per cent.

Hunters' License Bill.

The hunters' license bill, advocated by the governor in his recent message, has again been introduced in the assembly. Mr. Hart of Oneida is its sponsor. It provides for licensing hunters and anglers from other states at the rate of $20 a head and also compelling resident hunters to pay a small license fee of $1 for the privilege of hunting. The fishing section of the bill proposes to exact a license fee from all nonresidents who come from other states which charge the anglers of New York a fee for the privilege of fishing; otherwise not. But the hunters' license provision requires all nonresidents to take out a hunters' license and pay $20 therefor. The bill is essentially the Merritt bill of last year. The licenses may be obtained from county, city or town clerks.

The activity of the minority in both houses this year is unusually noticeable. Mr Palmer, Democratic leader in the assembly, is very aggressive in attacking the new legislation of the majority side, and his resolution calling for an investigation of the public service commission is considered the opening gun of a concerted campaign against Governor Hughes.

National Guard Reorganization.

A bill to reorganize the national guard and naval militia in harmony with the organization of the United States army under the provisions of the Dick law of 1903 has been introduced in both houses of the legislature and reported out by both senate and assembly committees. It was accompanied by a preliminary report of the Wainwright commission, appointed under an act of the last legislature to investigate the condition of the national guard and the naval militia and recommend amendments to the military code. The measure embodies the recommendations of this commission on this subject.

"An attempt by the state of New York to disregard the legislation of congress and to ignore the federal law in the regulation of its militia is not to be thought of," says the report. "Such a course would be unpatriotic and in violation of the constitutional obligation, and it would not merely result in increasing the financial burdens of the state by reason of its failure to accept a share of the federal militia appropriation, but the efficiency and value of the national guard as a state force would be gravely compromised."

Public Service Commissioner William R. Willcox of New York city, accompanied by his counsel, Abe F. Blackmar, recently took luncheon with the governor at Albany and placed before him proposed changes in the Elsberg rapid transit law. The commissioner wants the length of the terms of subway leases extended, so as to invite the investment of private capital in such enterprises.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Annual Meeting and Election of Officers---Reports of President, Secretary and Treasurer Submitted and Adopted, Showing Healthful Commercial and Financial Condition.

The annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held in the City Hall on Wednesday evening of last week. There was a goodly attendance of members despite the church and other attractions for that evening. The reports of President Butts, Secretary Whitaker and Treasurer Bennett gave but a glimpse of the real amount of work actually done by these officers and their various committees during the preceeding twelve months. The number of letters received; propositions investigated; conferences and committee meetings held, did not appear, but nothing had been left undone to increase the number of Fulton's stable industries and to foster her present ones. That none of our industries have removed, despite the magnificent offers made by other localities, is a source for congratulation and the Chamber of Commerce has been instrumental in the prevention, in some instances.

At the conclusion of the report reading, a nominating committee composed of Messrs. H. P Allen, Ray Pollard and R. B McRae was appointed by the Chair to select a list of officers for the ensuing year. The committee reported as follows: President, to succeed W. A. Butts, L. W. Emerick; vice president, to succeed L. W. Emerick, J. R. Sullivan; treasurer to succeed himself. B. W. Bennett; trustee for three years to succeed J. R. Sullivan, D. L. Lipsky. The choice of the committee became the choice of the members of the Chamber and they were declared elected.

A resolution that the Chamber be incorporated was unanimously adopted and the following committe was appointed by the Chair, with power to act relative to the matter of incorporation. Messrs M. Katz, G. S Piper and T. H. Webb.

A committee composed of Messrs. M. Katz, M. A. Stranahan and F. E. LaPorte was appointed to confer with the city fathers with a view to securing an ordinance restricting or providing for the proper licensing of traveling peddlers, and non-resident canvassers.

Upon motion of Secretary Whitaker, a resolution was adopted by the Chamber, expressing the appreciation of its members for the efforts of Congressman Knapp toward the securing of a desperately needed Federal building for this city, a bill appropriating $85,000 for that purpose having been introduced by Mr. Knapp.

At the conclusion of the business session, a Dutch luncheon was served by E. J. Schem and a smoker and social hour were enjoyed.

President Emerick will appoint his committees within a few days.

President's Report.

To the Members of the Fulton Chamber of Commerce:

Gentlemen: It is not my thought to make many suggestions for the future, nor to review the past year's work in detail—that will be done by Secretary Whitaker.

While the year's work of our organization is not without results, still we are unable to make the showing that we at one time had reason to expect. Months before the financial storm broke and the country at large realized its serious-ing. The change of attitude by certain business institutions toward changes which they had contemplated, told us, as far back as mid-summer, that this year would be practically devoid of results as far as securing new industries was concerned.

Notwithstanding the fact that many manufactories seeking new locations insist on conditions which our organization would find it impossible to meet in the sale of stock of questionable value or a large bonus which amounts to the same thing. Still the fact remains that many reliable manufacturers are seeking locations away from the congested city districts and where there will be less likelihood of labor trouble.

Your Board of Managers have been mindful of the fact that "fostering our present business institutions" is more important than inducing new enterprises to locate with us, and during the past year several local enterprises have been recipients of our favors—some publicly, and others in a more private manner.

Fulton is especially fortunate in the fact that its business institutions stand on solid financial foundations, and during the past weeks we have not had a single failure or business suspension, and our proportion of unemployed is comparatively small.

Fulton's future never seemed brighter than at present. Within a year the trolley line connecting Syracuse and Oswego will pass through our city and will, undoubtedly, be a benefit in more ways than we can at present realize.

The 1,000-ton barge canal, when finished, will not only give us exceptional transportation facilities, but will be a factor in advertising Fulton. Along the line of advertising we would suggest that the Bulletin Board idea as suggested by Vice President Emerick, and which suggestion will soon be carried out, should be followed by other suitable advertising.

In closing I wish to return thanks to officers and members of this organization who have, to a man, shown their interest, not only by attending the meetings, but by entering heartily in the work as planned, and cheerfully doing any duty assigned to them.

Also to the local press and the correspondents of the Syracuse and Oswego dailies, who have contributed much to any success that has been ours.

Respectfully submitted.

W. A. BUTTS.

Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 15, 1908.

Secretary's Report.

To the President and Members of the Chamber of Commerce of Fulton, N. Y.:

At this time when the financial pulse of our country is beating uncommonly slow as the result of a situation in our monetary conditions, which has never been paralelled, and which we all sincerely hope may never repeat itself; at a time when the press dispatches of the country are burdened with announcements of shut-downs and reductions in forces by the manufactories, with the closing of the doors of banking houses and with statements replete should at least be becoming of every resident of Fulton and every member of this Chamber of Commerce to take note and rejoice in the fact that conditions locally in these respects are not to be compared with those under which many communities are struggling.

Not that Fulton has failed to suffer, but in that it has suffered less. Our banks, our manufactories, and employers of labor have, without exception, shown a degree of stability which cannot help but make them take a place among the first with the return of commercial activity, and which at least has enabled them to stem the tide of adversity, instead of being carried down with it.

I touch briefly upon this situation that your attention may be drawn to the obstacles which have confronted the management of this organization, in its work for a greater Fulton. From the surface it may appear that our efforts have availed little. Yet in building slowly there is safety, and we anticipate that in the months to come these efforts will bear fruit.

We are practically assured of the erection of another large manufacturing plant, which, we hope before another annual meeting, will be giving employment to a considerable number of hands. Within that time, too, the new plant of the American Woolen Company, to securing which this Chamber lent its aid, should be in operation, and by Spring at least it is anticipated that operations on an extensive scale will be commenced by The General Swiss Chocolate Company. It is with satisfaction that we note the successful operation of the E. Z. Opener Bag Company, which have begun since our last annual meeting, and it is a fact worthy of note that nearly every manufacturing plant in this city has, during the year, increased its producing ability by substantial additions. This in particular applying to the Oswego Falls Pulp and Paper Company, the Volney Paper Company, the Fort Stanwix Canning Company and the American Cigar Company

During the year the Chamber has, in at least three instances, exerted itself successfully for the retention in Fulton of industries which were being ardently sought by other communities; and we may add that the offers made to one of our large concerns were of a nature so flattering as to be most attractive.

A work has been carried on looking toward an increase in the number of our labor employing institutions, and to that end have been negotiations with various industries including knitting mills, silk mills, tanneries, paper mills, makers of machinery, gas engines, asbestos, agricultural implements and paper specialties. Some of these concerns have deferred action owing to the business depression referred to, while others have been so severe in their demands for donations, stock subscriptions and the like that it has not been deemed wise to ask our business men to consider them.

The project for a federal building has had its share of attention and the bill introduced before Congress by our Representative, Mr. Knapp, carries an appropriation of $85,000 for this purpose. In this connection I would add that Congressman Knapp has worked ardently during the past several years for this measure, and I would suggest that this meeting adopt resolutions suitably acknowledging our appreciation of his efforts.

There are some details as to streets and municipal improvements which must have the attention of the public during the year to come, and no opportunity should be lost by this organization to aid the city administration in the furtherance of plans for the betterment of the community. The fact that we are each day aspiring to greater things, and that these aspirations are not without their proportionate perplexities is at no time to be lost sight of. That there is no surer method with which to cope with than that through a live, active Chamber of Commerce or similar organization has been demonstrated by every active community in the country, and we judge from the handsome increase in membership in our own Chamber during the year, that this view is commonly accepted.

In submitting the foregoing I desire to express my appreciation of the assistance of an enthusiastic, energetic President and Board of Managers, to the several Committees and the Chamber at large.

Respectfully submitted.

Evangelistic Services.

Great success is attending the series of special revival meetings now being held at the First Methodist Church. Large congregations are present every evening and on some nights the capacity of the church has been tested to accommodate the crowds. More than three thousand people were present at the various services on the Sabbath, and the results of local church workers. In the morning the evangelist spoke on the responsibility of Christians for the salvation of others and at the close of the service scores of fathers and mothers came to the altar to pray for their children, and wives to pray for their husbands.

The mass meeting for men only was a decided success. More than a thousand men were present and gave close attention to the address. Mr. Hart spoke against the evils of intemperance, social impurity and infidelity. Frequent applause greeted his remarks. Mr. Magann sang the old song, "Tell Mother I'll be There," with great power and men joined heartily in the chorus.

The sermon on Sunday evening was on the topic, "The Unpardonable Sin." Every inch of available space was filled with an interested congregation. During the day more than seventy came to the altar seeking the forgiveness of sin. Up to Sunday evening more than 150 converts had been made, coming from all classes and ages.

The special services will continue every afternoon and evening of the week and will close next Sunday evening. On Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock there will be a young people's meeting at the church and all boys and girls of the schools are especially invited to this service. At the regular Sunday School hour next Sunday there will be a Sunday school service address by Mr. Hart. The State Street Sunday School will join in this service.

Physicians' Association Meets.

On Thursday evening the annual meeting of the Fulton Physicians' and Surgeons' Association was held. Dr. E. J. Cusack being host. A most entertaining and instructive paper was read by Dr. T. H. Halstead, Syracuse, the nose and throat specialist, after which an elaborate luncheon was served the guests, who were Dr. Halstead, Dr. L. Fowler Joy, Dr. E. A Gladman, Dr. Homer P. Marsh, Dr. Stephen A. Russell, Dr. Frank E. Fox, Dr. Charles J. Bacon, Dr. R. C. Scott, Dr. N. H. Haviland, Dr. G. G. Whitaker, Dr. E. M. Anderson, Dr. H. W. Schlappi and Dr. W. M. Wells, members of the association, all of Fulton; Dr. S. D. Keller of Volney Center and Dr. I. C. Curtis. Dr. Keller was elected to honorary membership in the association.

Following the lunch the annual election was held and resulted as follows: President, Dr. Frank E. Fox; vice-president, Dr. E. A. Gladman; secretary and treasurer, Dr. E. M. Anderson; censors, Dr. S. A. Russell, Dr. L. Fowler Joy and Dr. W. M. Wells; dean of the medical faculty, Dr. G. G. Whitaker.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

An epidemic of colds has taken possession of many students during the past week.

Next week the Regents' examinations will be held.

The basketball team went to Phoenix Friday evening to be defeated to the tune of 26 to 19. Messrs. Gutle and Calkins being ill, substitutes had to be played.

Joseph Jefferson—George Kiernan—Rip Van Winkle.

For five generations the name of Jefferson has been known on the English speaking stage. Joseph Jefferson, who for fifty years delighted American audiences was the best known and loved of his famous family. Born to the stage, with the heriditary instinct for its traditions, he fell into place naturally as our foremost comedian. It was no genius struggling for recognition against inborn traits and mannerisms. There were no overwhelming outbursts of dramatic fire, but rather the easy working of an inborn, ingrained art, the matured thought of generations expressed through his sensitive and responsive personality. Jefferson's art rested, entertained, touched his audience, but neither startled, electrified, nor exhausted his emotions. Whether the vehicle were "Mr. Golightly" in that uproarous farce "Lend me five shillings," "Bob Acres" in "The Rivals," "Caleb Plummer" in "Cricket on the Hearth," or "Rip VanWinkle," it was always Jefferson we loved and went to see; the gentle comedian who pervaded rather than lost himself in his various roles.

An event which should prove of great interest to all lovers of the departed actor has been arranged for by the D. A. R. of Fulton, N. Y., for Feb. 22, for benefit of the monument fund. On that date Mr. George Kiernan, who enjoys the distinction of being the only artist on the platform capable of suggesting Joseph Jefferson, will give a recital of Rip Van Winkle rendering all of the lines of the play act for act, impersonating all of the character and constantly suggesting the beloved Jefferson in intonation of voice, mannerisms and general characteristic. The recital occupies over two hours and a literary treat is assured all who patronize this event.

Do You Want Baseball?

The annual meeting of The Fulton Baseball Association will be held at the City Hall on Wednesday evening, Jan. 22, at 8 o'clock. Election of officers and a report of last year's business will be given.

At the next league meeting—Jan. 30—the circuit for 1908 will be made up, and the question is, "Will Fulton be represented?" So you see the necessity of a full attendance on Wednesday evening to decide whether Fulton will have league ball the coming season or not.

Don't think it too early to make a start for the sooner the Association makes a start for the season the better ball we will have. Be on hand if you want baseball.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB

Mrs. Samuel Hunter of Syracuse Graphically Describes a Visit to Alaska.

The Current Events Club met on Monday evening at the home of Prof. and Mrs. J. R. Fairgrieve. The program was most interesting and instructive. Mrs. Samuel Hunter of Syracuse was prevailed upon to describe a recent trip to Alaska which Mr. and Mrs. Hunter had taken. The story was told most graphically in concise English, evidencing a keen, analytical mind and a most retentive memory; it was thoroughly enjoyed by the large assemblage.

Mrs. Hunter gave a short review of her trip to the Pacific slope, visiting many of the Indian reservations en route, collecting specimens of their handiwork and becoming familiar with some of their habits and customs. Then up through California to Oregon, with its picturesque surroundings, and from thence to the frozen north.

The coast-line, mountains, glaciers and rivers of Alaska were described and excellent photographic views of many of the scenes presented; the marvelous increase in exports of precious metal, canned salmon and furs, succinctly set forth; also, enchanting scenery and sunset splendor witnessed, which was never to be forgotten.

Climatic conditions, the speaker stated, were not disagreeable, as fruits and vegetables were indigenous to the soil.

The missionary efforts of Dr. Duncan in behalf of the aborigines was most interesting, although attended with meagre success; the incursions of the white men, especially Russians, to that country having had a baneful influence on the civilization of the natives.

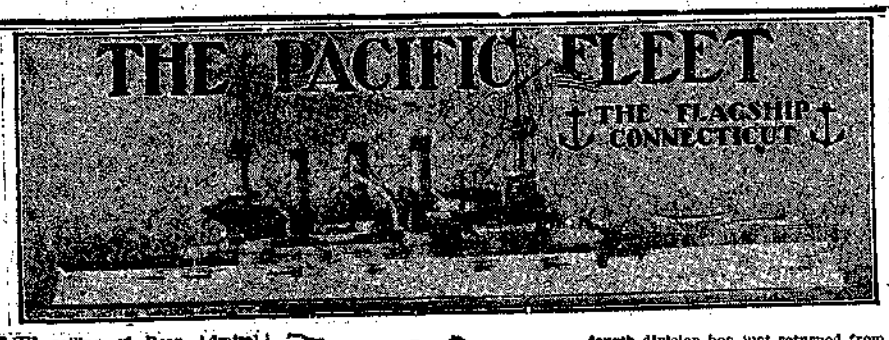
A miniature totem pole and many useful and ornamental articles manufactured by native Alaskans were among Mrs. Hunter's valuable souvenirs and were inspected by the assemblage.

A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Hunter by the members of the club at the close of her address, and an enjoyable social time followed.

The next meeting of the club will be held on Monday evening, Feb. 3. The leaders will be the Rev. John Richards and Prof. L. D. Wilcox, and the hostess Mrs. F. D. Van Wagenen.

MARRIED.

Mr. Herman L. Price and Miss Lillian May Conway were united in marriage in Volney on Jan. 9. The bride is under 18 years of age and the parents' written consent was necessarily contained in the license.



On January 8, at the Catholic church in Fortuna, Cal., occurred the marriage of Mr. John H. Somers, formerly of this city, and Miss Mary H. Maxwell, both of Newburg. The bride and groom are very popular with their friends in the land of sunshine. Mr. Somers is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Somers of the west side.

Announces His Candidacy.

Mr. Charles W. Taft of Williamstown is sending circular letters to the Republicans of the county, announcing his candidacy for the office of Sheriff to succeed Sheriff Hilton, whose term expires this year, and requesting their support at the convention and the polls. Mr. Taft was chairman of the Board of Supervisors at the last session and made many friends among his fellow workers during the busy session just ended. He is also popular throughout the county, being a member of many societies and fraternities and active in volunteer fireman circles. Mr. Taft will make a stirring fight for the office.

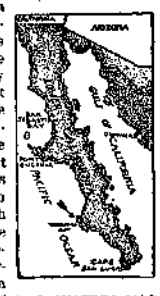
THE PACIFIC FLEET

THE sailing of Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans' big fleet of battleships from Hampton Roads on Dec. 16 for the much talked of cruise in the Pacific will rank for years as one of the most important events in the history of the new navy. The United States disclaims any hostile motive toward Japan or any other nation in sending this large naval force into Pacific waters. Japan has said that no exception could be taken to the action of the American naval authorities in deciding upon the cruise. Nevertheless it is generally believed that the move is one of strategic importance and that the successful completion of the cruise will do much to create a wholesome respect for the American navy in all quarters of the globe. On the Pacific coast the sixteen battleships will be joined by a fleet of cruisers and by other battleships.

The departure of the fleet will be the occasion for a grand naval review by the president of the United States in the waters of Hampton Roads which will surpass any review ever before held in American waters, not even excepting that of September, 1906, in Long Island sound near Oyster Bay. More ships participated in the latter review, but the fleet was much inferior in displacement and armament.

The flagship of the commander in chief of the fleet, the battleship Connecticut, one of the newest and best ships in the navy, of twenty-four guns and carrying 881 officers and men, came out of dry dock at the Brooklyn navy yard recently looking as trim as if it were only her maiden voyage. Five other battleships received final touches for the cruise at the Brooklyn navy yard, and others have been at the Norfolk, Boston and League Island navy yards. The fleet is composed of two squadrons. Each squadron will have two divisions, and each division, except the first, which will be in direct command of Admiral Evans, will have a rear admiral in subordinate command. These rear admirals will be Charles M. Thomas, William H. Emory and Charles S. Sperry. The individual ships of the fleet and their captains will be as follows: Connecticut, Captain Hugo Osterhaus; Louisiana, Captain Richard Wainwright; Kansas, Captain Charles E. Vreeland; Vermont, Captain William P. Potter; Georgia, Captain Henry McCrea; Virginia, Captain Seaton Schroeder; New Jersey, Captain W. H. H. Southerland; Rhode Island, Captain Joseph B. Murdock; Minnesota, Captain John Hubbard; Ohio, Captain Lewis C. Heilner; Maine, Captain Giles B. Harber; Missouri, Captain Greenleaf A. Merriam; Alabama, Captain Ten Eyck D. W. Veeder; Illinois, Captain J. M. Bowyer; Kearsarge, Captain H. Hutchins; Kentucky, Captain W. C. Cowles.

REAR ADMIRAL C. M. THOMAS



The review at Hampton Roads will include some auxiliary vessels, such as torpedo boats, colliers, supply ships, etc., thus making as a whole a very formidable array of naval craft.

Rear Admiral Emory, commander of the second division, entered the navy in 1862 and was one of the officers who went to the rescue of General Greely when the latter and his party came near perishing in the region of the north pole. Rear Admiral Thomas, in command of the third division, has seen service in almost every quarter of the globe since his entrance to the navy in 1861. His last sea command was that old bulldog of the navy, the Oregon. Rear Admiral Sperry of the fourth division has just returned from The Hague, where he was one of the peace conference delegates.

REAR ADMIRAL ROBLEY D. EVANS.

A fortunate incident in connection with the cruise of the fleet was the leasing of Magdalena bay, in Lower California, from Mexico as a coaling station. This is set down as one result of Secretary Root's recent visit to Mexico. The problem of coaling is one of the most difficult that the navy officials have to solve in connection with an extensive cruise like this. The department has purchased more than 100,000 tons of coal for the use of the ships on their way around Cape Horn and up the western coast of the Americas as far as Magdalena bay. Coal and supplies will be taken on at ports en route. By the time the fleet reaches Magdalena bay on its voyage up the Pacific coast it is expected that an additional large supply of coal will have been purchased and delivered there for the further needs of the warships. It is estimated that over 300,000 tons will be required for the entire period of the cruise. To give an idea of what this means it may be stated that if the coal the ships will burn were to fall like a snowstorm over and around the statue of Liberty, which rises to a height of 360 feet, in New York harbor, it would completely envelop that lofty structure. The coal bill for the cruise is expected to mount up to over half a million dollars. Besides the colliers accompanying the fleet to carry the coal between ports, there will be a considerable number of supply ships, for the food and other supplies for a force of nearly 15,000 officers and men for a period of several months make several large cargoes. Some one has figured that the men will be served with 3,280,000 rounds of beef before they get home and that it would require an ox 250 feet tall to supply the meat.

SPEAKER CANNON OFF DUTY.

Some Intimate Views of Uncle Joe and His Ways.

Uncle Joe Cannon, who will wield the speaker's gavel again during the sessions of the Sixtieth congress, rather takes pride in the plainness of his appearance. His unusual popularity all over the country without respect to political creed is owing much to his being so democratic in his ways and unpretentious in his manners. The speaker is rarely seen when off duty in the house without a cigar in his mouth. He recently said in reference to a report that he had cut down his allowance, "The fellow who said I only smoke three a day is not exactly a nature fakir, but he is of the same breed." Next to tobacco he is perhaps most fond of pie. The Illinois statesman often jests about his personal appearance and one time was a guest at a dinner given by Senator Depew. It was the day the senators rigged up a "jiu jiu" outfit and tested its capabilities for mischief. Conversation turned upon the incident, and there was a lot of badinage. Finally Mr. Depew made things personal.

"I say, Cannon, now that the president has resumed jiu jitsu and the senate has taken up jai alai, the speaker of the house of representatives ought to find some diversion—something, I suggest, that begins with J."

"Much obliged, Depew," said the speaker, "but I'm jay enough already."

Speaker Cannon recently defined his position as to the presidential nomination, saying that he was not a candidate for it, but that if perchance the choice fell upon him there would be no alternative but to accept.

MISS JEAN REID.

American Ambassador's Daughter and Her Fiance, Lord Acheson.

The report that Miss Jean Reid, daughter of Whitelaw Reid, the American ambassador at the court of St. James, is engaged to Viscount Acheson, son and heir of the Earl of Gosford, brings to light an interesting train of circumstances pertaining to affairs of the heart. There appears to be no doubt that Miss Reid and Lord Acheson are deeply in love. It is said he proposed for the first time after the ball given at Dorchester House in honor of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Since that time he has proposed regularly as often as opportunity presented, only to find that Miss Jean's consent did not [illegible] preferred that his daughter marry an American. It was only a short time ago that the ambassador to England was won over by the insistent British nobleman, a young fellow who served not without credit in the Boer war and who is said to be less wild than many members of his set. It is rumored that in accepting him Miss Reid gives a great disappointment to another titled Englishman, the young Lord Brooke. He is a son of the Socialist Countess of Warwick, who was in this country only a short time ago. Lord Brooke visited Miss Reid at Ophir Farm, the Reid country seat in New York state, several years ago, and there was much talk then of a coming international match, but she did not fall in love with him. Miss Reid is twenty-four.

THE DUC DE CHAULNES.

Miss Theodora Shonts. It was necessary to get the consent to the match of the fair young American's father, President Theodore P. Shonts of the Interborough traction system, New York, and the latter at first frowned on the union. Perhaps he disliked the idea of his daughter marrying any one but an American. Perhaps he was reluctant to part with a large part of his fortune in order that his daughter might have such a dowry as an American girl who marries a titled foreigner is supposed to receive. The young duke met Miss Shonts in Paris two years ago, and his attentions to her since. He is thirty years old and has a house in Paris and a castle.

Is very careful about her churn. She scalds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are almost exactly like the churning of butter. Is it not apparent then that if this stomach-churn is foul it makes foul all which is put into it?

The evil of a foul stomach is not alone the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour and foul stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun bath do for the churn—absolutely removes every tainting or corrupting element. In this way it cures blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings, sores, or open eating ulcers and all humors or diseases arising from bad blood.

If you have bitter, nasty, foul taste in your mouth, coated tongue, foul breath, are weak and easily tired, feel depressed and despondent, have frequent headaches, dizzy attacks, gnawing or distress in stomach, constipated or irregular bowels, sour or bitter risings after eating and poor appetite, these symptoms, or any considerable number of them, indicate that you are suffering from biliousness, torpid or lazy liver with the usual accompanying indigestion, or dyspepsia and their attendant derangements.

The best agents known to medical science for the cure of the above symptoms and conditions, as attested by the writings of leading teachers and practitioners of all the several schools of medical practice, have been skillfully and harmoniously combined in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That this is absolutely true will be readily proven to your satisfaction if you will but mail a postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a free copy of his booklet of extracts from the standard medical authorities, giving the names of all the ingredients entering into his world-famed medicines and showing what the most eminent medical men of the age say of them.

If a cough once gets into your system it acts on every muscle and fibre of the body and makes you ache all over. It especially affects the intestines and makes you constipated, so in order to get rid of a cold thoroughly and without delay you should not take anything that will tend to constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts on the bowels and thereby drives the cold out of the system. It contains no opiates—it is pleasant to take and is highly recommended for children. Sold by all druggists.

A Fatal Austrian Flag.

Once there was an epidemic of plague at Odessa, in Russia, which lasted more than a year. It had a most remarkable origin, being due to a fatal flag. An Austrian vessel arrived at Odessa, bringing one of the crew who had died during the voyage. The sailor was duly interred in the Catholic cemetery at the port, and at the funeral the Austrian flag was carried by two seamen. On their way back to the vessel the men entered a great number of saloons and laid down the flag while drinking. A very short time afterward the sailors who had carried the flag died, and before long it was found that people were ill in all the houses where the men had called with the fatal flag. Soon the plague spread throughout Odessa, filling all with terror and claiming a frightful toll. There is no doubt that the flag contained the plague bacilli in the folds and so spread the disease.—Baltimore Sun.

The Strange Mystery of Thomas C. Druce and the Fifth Duke of Portland—Sketch of the Sixth Duke.

DUKE OF PORTLAND.

THE Druce mystery, which for some time has absorbed the attention of the British public, brings to special notice the present Duke of Portland, who is in danger of losing his rank and titles. Should George Hollamby Druce, who claims that his grandfather, Thomas Charles Druce, a bazaar keeper, was the fifth Duke of Portland, be successful in establishing his claim the man who holds the title now will lose not only Welbeck abbey and nearly 200,000 acres of British soil, but a very lengthy list of distinctions. The sixth duke, to give him all his names and titles, should be addressed as William John Arthur Charles James Cavendish-Bentinck, K. G., P. C., G. C. V. O., D. L., J. P., earl of Portland, viscount of Woodstock, baron of Cirencester, marquis of Titchfield, baron Bolsover, master of the horse, lord lieutenant of Caithness and lord lieutenant of Nottingham. Pooh Bah would certainly have envied his lordship the possession of such a string of dignities.

The first Duke of Portland accompanied William of Orange to England and was a lieutenant general at the battle of the Boyne in 1690. The fifth duke, who is said to have lived a double life and been married twice instead of being a bachelor, as supposed, died in 1879. Druce, the bazaar keeper, was believed to have died in 1864, but it is claimed there was a mock burial at the time instead of a real one.

There has been some debate about whether Ernest Thompson Seton is a bona fide naturalist or only a nature fakir, but the controversy does not alter the fact that he has had many interesting adventures, and some of the most exciting of these he experienced the past summer and fall during a seven months' trip in the Canadian northwest. During this trip he went far into the arctic regions, and in the entire period he slept indoors only two nights. He had an exciting experience one day in October.

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON.

"We started out up the Athabaska river about 6 o'clock," said Mr. Seton, "Mr. Preble and myself in the canoe, with my three journals and all our provisions and outfit. Our two boys, half breed Indians, were running along the shore, pulling the canoe up the rapid with ropes, when suddenly the water caught us on the wrong way, and the next thing I knew I was under the canoe in the ice cold water. My journals, which contained all my maps and over 500 drawings and all the information I had collected on the trip, were tied up in a canvas bag with corks around it, and as soon as I could get my head out of the water I yelled to the boys to save it. They ran down the rocky shore for fourteen miles and finally rescued it by plunging into the water time and time again and at length tying two logs together with the sashes they wore around their waists and poling out to the bag.

"The canoe upset about 8 o'clock, and one of the boys did not get back until 4 o'clock in the afternoon and the other not until 6. I was afraid until the first got back that I had lost the whole fruit of the expedition and that maybe the boys had lost their lives trying to save the bag."

Booker T. Washington, president of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, has taken much interest in the efforts of the people of his race to make a creditable showing in the negro department of the Jamestown exposition and is gratified that this feature of the exposition proved so successful in spite of the odds against it. He was a leading figure at the conference on the future of the negro which marked the close of the display. A few weeks ago at the congress of religious liberals in Boston Professor Washington was speaking about theories for the solution of race questions.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON.

"But it is work we want, not theories," said he. "There are enough theorists, in all conscience, but of workers, on the other hand, there is always a dearth."

The eloquent colored man paused and frowned.

"When I hear of a new theory," he said, "I am reminded of two geologists. At a New Hampshire autumn resort one brilliant afternoon the younger geologist from his bedroom window saw the older man rolling a great rock down the side of a mountain.

"He watched the work for nearly three hours. The old geologist, thin and little and white whiskered, had a hard time of it to guide that rock, almost as big as himself. But he persevered. He got the rock down where he wanted it just as the dinner bell rang.

"The younger man said to him wonderingly at dinner:

"'What were you doing with that rock this afternoon, professor?'

"'Why,' the professor answered, 'the fact is the darned thing was 600 feet too high to suit my theory.'"

Figure Dispatches.

Ernest Thompson Seton's Icy Dip. Booker T. Washington on Theories—Alonzo B. Hepburn, Bank President.

Alonzo Barton Hepburn, president of the Chase National bank, New York, who was prominent in the conferences of the financiers during the recent exciting times in Wall street, is chairman of the commission appointed by Governor Hughes of New York to inquire into the banking laws of the state and make recommendations as to their amendment. He was born in Colton, N. Y., in 1846, graduated from Middlebury college in 1871 and has taught mathematics, been a school principal, served in the New York legislature, been superintendent of the New York state banking department and comptroller of the currency of the United States. He first became head of a bank in 1898. At the last convention of the American Bankers' association President Hepburn was speaking of a certain line of argument.

A. B. HEPBURN.

"That argument," said he, "fails to cheer. On the contrary, it fills us with gloom and foreboding. It is like the cry, intended to be reassuring, that came to the farmer across the turnip field.

"A farmer on a frosty autumn afternoon went out into his turnip field and began to gather turnips. The early sun sank in the west, and as the bluish dusk came on the farmer perceived at the other end of the field two men, who, laying down a bag, began to dig with frantic haste.

"The farmer watched the pair in some perplexity. What could they be doing? And he was just putting his hand to his cheek to shout and ask them their business when one of them rose up and yelled loudly and reassuringly:

"'Don't let us disturo you! We are only prigging a few ourselves!'"

BUILDING OF GOOD ROADS

Local Conditions and Material Enter Largely Into Cost ---Statement by Division Engineer Brewster.

"The cost per mile of road has been criticised but this question is a large one. Local conditions govern this entirely. In localities where a good quality of local stone is procurable and easily accessible, the cost per yard of broken stone is about 60 cents. However, we have instances where it is necessary to import stone where it costs as high as $2.65 per yard F. O. B. cars, and then it must be hauled in some instances a long distance.

"Roads can be improved as low as $5,000 a mile and be greatly improved over existing conditions, while others, considering only the wise economy, including cost of maintenance and early repairs due to poor wearing stone, improperly treated sub grade, etc., would, consistent with wise economy, considering these points, cost $15,000 per mile. No two roads can be treated in the same way. Each has its individuality. In short no set of standard or 'machine plans' can be made that will govern road construction.

"A road may, by reason of unstable sub-grade, peculiar drainage conditions, quicksand, etc., require special treatment, necessitating what is called a 'sub base' course, or in short an artificial, substantial foundation. In the case of road No. 328 in Onondaga county, for instance, this item alone cost $2,366.

Cost of Grading.

"Another road may have natural drainage, substantially natural foundation, good quality of stone obtainable locally alongside of road. In this case it tends to build at small first cost and minimum maintenance. Grading on Road No. 506, Madison county, heavy grading, cost $3,500 per mile, while on Road No. 510, in Cortland county, grading cost $1,000 per mile and total cost was $7,000 per mile. This simply shows the varied conditions entering into road construction and when we say a road should be built for $10,000 per mile, we could just as well say that crushed stone can be bought for $1 per yard.

"The locality and local conditions enter largely into the question and really govern the cost. New York is a large state and what applies to one section is entirely foreign to another. These facts are not appreciated by the large majority interested in road construction.

"During the last year Mr. Skene has made many radical and extremely beneficial changes in the methods of construction, and I believe that the results obtained from next year's construction will bear out the statement."

Work Done in 1907.

During the year 1907, a large amount of work has been done on the highways of the State under the direction of the State Engineer, Hon Frederick Skene.

On January 1, 1907, 668 miles of highways had been improved in the different counties throughout the State, contracts had been let for improving about 688 miles, distributed in 39 different counties. Although contracts had been let for this number of miles, work had not actually been started on a large per centage of them.

The amount of money appropriated for these contracts was approximately $6,500,000. The contractors were somewhat dilatory about starting some of the contracts and the State Engineer on assuming office, notified all to proceed with their work and push the same to completion within the time specified in their contracts.

All of these contracts let in 1906 are under construction at the present writing, the majority of them are completed and the remainder are partially completed.

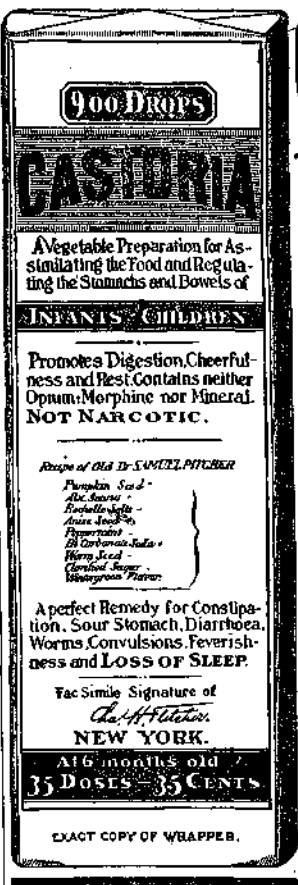
During the administration of the present State Engineer, 375 miles of highway have been completed and final payment or estimates rendered. This milage is distributed as follows: Two hundred and thirty-two miles in the eastern division, 78 miles in the middle division and 65 miles in the western division.

In September, October and December, bids were asked for the improvement on a total of 690 miles of highways which had been approved by the Boards of Supervisors of the various counties.

Plans and specifications have been prepared for 490 miles of road to be improved. The plans and specifications have been submitted to the Boards of Supervisors in the several counties and have been approved by them and are now upon the list awaiting contract.

During the year 1907, 375 miles of improved highways have been completed, 690 miles have been placed under contract and plans and specifications prepared and adopted for 490 miles more

The number of miles completed during the year 1907 is half as great as the milage of all highways improved prior to January 1, 1907, and there have been placed under contract during the year 1907, 14 miles more than the total number of highways improved during the nine years prior to 1907 in which State aid has been in operation



Money System Department.

The popularity and success of the money system in good roads installment is demonstrated, State Engineer Skeene says, by the fact that during the past year only two towns in the entire State voted to abandon the money system. About 567 towns having 48,190 miles of highways to care for are now working their roads under the money system. The total expenditure for highway purposes, including State aid, in those towns during 1907 was $3,818,321 33

Under a system which has been completed and perfected during the past year, all reports of town and county officers, are uniform throughout the State. A uniform system of bookkeeping has been established in all the money system towns. No moneys are paid out by the town except upon a written order. The State can now tell as accurately as any bank where every cent of the taxpayers' money and the State aid is used and on what road and who received it.

During 1907 every town in the State working under the money system was inspected with the exception of ten. During the winter months schools of instruction were held in about a third of the money system towns of the State. This winter the town boards of every money system town will be required to enter into a written agreement with the highway commissioners of the town, laying out a complete and intelligent plan for working the roads of their respective towns for the coming season. They will be required to divide the town into a suitable number of districts, procure their tools and machinery, engage their help and place a foreman in charge of each district and work their dirt roads when the soil is in a suitable condition in the spring.

All towns under the money system have been urged to build some roads each year of a permanent nature, such as gravel or crushed stone. During 1907, 13 of the money system towns built short pieces of stone roads. Nine hundred and eighty six miles of stone roads are now completed in those towns.

A REVELATION.

The feeling among Democrats and many fair minded Republicans attendant upon the election of Thomas H. Marvin, alleged Republican Alderman from the Fourth Ward, to the presidency of the Democratic Common Council, and the inquiries relative thereto, have not died out and in their wake comes the following startling declaration made last week by a "square deal" leader—one who is in closest touch with the present Mayor, Alderman Marvin, City Attorney Guile, F. A. Gage and the other active "dealers," that "no power on earth now can stop Thomas H. Marvin from becoming the next Mayor of Fulton."

The "now" was very significant. It almost seemed to embrace the declaration that just the traits exhibited by Mr. Marvin during the organization of the new Council were the traits which most endeared him to the "dealers" and made him, in their opinion, the fittest one among the hundreds of voters in this city upon whom the honors of the high office could fall.

A great, illuminating light as to why and how a Republican became president of the Council, dawned with this declaration.

Around a liquor advertisement to be paid for in fiery beverage only, the Patriot editor last week cleverly arranged an article which in the main was of a higher class than is usually found in its columns. It was nearly entirely composed of quotations from The Times. The portions not clipped from this journal were a piteous attempt upon the part of our unesteemed contemporary to square itself with all men. The Patriot's editor is having an awfully tedious time to explain to old school Democrats how the Mayor applied the golden rule in his appointments, when they consider what their party did for him in the last election. A Democrat told the editor of The Times recently that the editor of the Patriot did nothing for the ticket until he was seen and after election he claimed to have been the ring leader and the only and original apostle of the Democratic campaign. The men who labored for principle and party do not like the attitude of the editor of the Patriot nor the fact that he claims all of the credit for the victory.

Last week the editor of the Patriot substantiated every statement made by The Times relative to the organization of the Common Council as far as it related to his friend, President Marvin, Alderman from the Fourth Ward. The Patriot went even farther than The Times in its statements regarding the length of time during which Mr. Marvin played double with his party: fast and loose with his pledged word. It is to be hoped that Mr. Marvin is deeply appreciative of this fact.

President L. W. Emerick of the Chamber of Commerce is one of Fulton's most active young business men with large interests here and his election to the presidency was an acknowledgement of his ability and his tireless interest in the Chamber and its workings.

It depends upon the pill you take. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the best pills known for constipation and sick headache. Sold by all druggists.

A COMMUNICATION FROM ALDERMAN DWYER.

Editor Times—Will you publish the following correction of untrue statements made by the Patriot's editor? He says there was an undercurrent at work and strife to secure the designation of the Fulton Times as the official paper for the purpose of upsetting Mayor Quirk's formation of committees and to handicap his administration. That there were disappointed office seekers at work who could not get the Mayor's ear in their behalf and their friends could not secure appointments for them. That is a falsehood from the start. No office-seekers came to me, because they knew I had not the giving of any office. There were Democrats who wanted me to call upon Mayor Quirk and ask for the appointment of a man in our ward. The Mayor promised me this and when I insisted upon the appointment he told me that he had never promised me anything, which was the same as calling me a liar. This did not digest very well on my stomach.

Falsehood number two in the Patriot to which I take exception is this: Mr. Cornell himself called at my shop for a pledge. I knew him, or thought I did, and not knowing the editor of the Times, I said I would vote for the Patriot. Cornell started right off to work against me and labored hard to turn me down. They were turned down by their own party and put up a deal with a few Democrats, or rather "Square Dealers," as they were Democrats in name only, to secure the appointment of a few of their own clique and leave regular Democrats out, to a man.

The President of the Council could have been a Democrat. I never said I would not support Crahan or Van-Buren. Alderman Crahan sent Alderman Van Buren to see me about voting for him. I told Mr. Van Buren I would not commit myself unless he would, and he then and there agreed to do so. In a moment he said, "I don't know but I will have to crawl. To-morrow night I will let you know." You have heard of the cat that never came back? Well, neither did Mr. Van Buren.

I know by the way things are going that they will try to get back at me for the two years, but I shall not bother my head with them. I shall stand as firm as possible for Fulton and her interests and especially will I look out for my own ward, regardless of politics or deals. Yours,

A. DWYER,
Alderman Second Ward.

Fulton, N. Y., Jan. 20, 1908.

The charge is made that Senator Aldrich's bill for an emergency currency is a "makeshift," and perhaps the Senator is somewhat of that opinion. Our whole system of finance has been little else than a patchwork of makeshifts for many, many years. We are inclined to the belief, however, that a good deal of progress has been made in right thinking on currency matters in late years, and that the people have made a notable advance in their education on this subject.

The recently appointed Japanese Ambassador to America, Baron Takahira, is well known in this country, through his former diplomatic and consular services, and all that is known of him is good. He will be welcome as an agreeable and estimable man and as the representative of a great nation.

That the value of each census has been lessened in the exact ratio that the spoils system has been allowed in connection therewith, is a matter of fact and it is hoped that Mr. Roosevelt's earnest appeal for an honest and intelligent method of making appointments, under the rules of the Civil Service Commission, will prevail.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Criticism of Public Service Commission—Presidential Talk.

TOPICS IN BOTH HOUSES.

Short Senate Sessions—Many Local Measures—Banking and Race Track Legislation—Comment on Some of the New Measures—Personal Gossip.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 22.—In another week the legislature will be doing real work. Practically all of the operations in either house thus far have been of a perfunctory nature. Now that the committees have been organized the important business of producing laws will proceed smoothly.

Some comment has been heard regarding the large percentage of purely local bills introduced. The many local measures at this early stage are, however, a very good sign, as it is desirable that bills of this nature be got out of the way in large degree before the session rises to its height of activity, for then the measures of general effect and consequently of greater importance are invariably given the right of way over all else. As a result local bills receive in many instances very little attention from busy committees later in the session.

The Hughes Boom.

The talk of Hughes for president is increasing in volume in spite of the powerful interests opposed to him.

SENATOR MARTIN SAXE OF NEW YORK. [Senator Saxe has been very active in introducing new legislation this year. He is talked of as a possible fusion candidate for mayor of New York city.]

The talk, however, represents in most instances portions of the Republican party now in the minority division of the party in this state. Among the Democrats there is very little talk of a probable candidate for the presidency. Democratic members of both houses seem to be awaiting the word from Messrs. Murphy and Conners before saying much on the subject. It can be well said, however, that the undercurrent of Democratic belief at Albany is that William Jennings Bryan will be the candidate.

Criticise Public Service Commission.

It is surprising to hear many Republicans joining with the Democrats in the adverse criticism of the public service commission. The general opinion is that the Second district commission, with headquarters in Albany (in the capitol building), has done better work than the First district commission, with headquarters in New York city. The Democratic members of the legislature are bitter in their denunciation of both district commissions and have already begun a systematized attack, aiming to discredit Governor Hughes if possible.

Some Republicans are of the opinion that the fault with the First district commission is its personnel, stating that its members are either incapable of fulfilling the duties imposed on them or unwilling to carry out the purposes of their appointment.

The latest attack on the commission as a whole consists of statements to the effect that the labor interests have no representation. Whether or not the labor interests as such have an actual right to direct representation in the personnel of the commission would seem, however, to be an academic question.

Governor Hughes does not appear worried over the attacks, being of the opinion, it is said, that it is too early to expect any great radical changes in conditions designed to be altered by the commission.

Penalty For Careless Hunters.

One of the new assembly bills provides that any person who kills or wounds another while hunting shall be guilty of a felony. This measure, if passed, would, it is believed, decrease the large number of unfortunate casualties in the game regions.

Short Senate Sessions.

The senate has been breaking records for short sessions. The absolute minimum of procedure necessary to constitute a "legislative day" has been the rule at many sessions. On one occasion recently a new record is said to have been established when the upper house met and reached adjournment in fifty-seven seconds.

Senators Grady, McCarren and Raines have been the leading senate figures thus far. The minority members do not lose a single opportunity to get up and disturb the atmosphere, no matter how little chance their debate may have to affect the point at issue. Mr. Grady is in especially fine speaking fettle these days, his speeches against the confirmation of Justice Blackmar and against the Wainwright military bill being his chief verbal efforts.

Advocating the Democratic theory that federal influence in state matters should be restricted, Senator Grady objected strongly to the Wainwright bill for the reorganization of the national guard on the ground that it would increase federal authority over state troops. But an examination of the bill, which is merely preliminary to other more important ones to follow, does not appear to show that Senator Grady's objections were well founded. The national guard authorities of the state are in favor of the measure.

Antiracing Bill Situation.

Representatives of interests both for and against the Hughes antiracing bill are already on the ground and sounding the legislators as to their attitude on the subject. News that two agricultural societies had passed resolutions favoring the bill was received with surprise in Albany, as it was thought these societies, which benefit directly from racing, would be unanimously against the measure.

Meetings are to be held throughout the state at which ministers will ask for public demand for the passing of the bill.

Senator Agnew of New York, who introduced the bill in the upper house, and Assemblyman Hart from Utica, who stands sponsor for it in the assembly, will also address some of these meetings.

One or two Republicans want the bill made a party measure and predict that it will be so made. It is freely predicted that the governor will make the bill the subject of an emergency message if it becomes tied up in committee.

Should the codes committee of either house refuse to report the bill it is likely that a motion will be made to discharge such committee. To discharge a committee a vote of the entire number of members of the house present is taken, and if a majority vote in favor of the motion the committee is then discharged of consideration of the particular bill, which bill can then be considered by the entire house.

This procedure is usually gone through when the local option bill is held up by the excise committee.

Less Talk of "Smothering."

The sentiment for the enactment of a rigid antibetting bill seems plainly to be growing. The governor continues to receive letters from all parts of the state heartily indorsing his stand, and less talk of the bill being smothered in committee is heard on both sides of the capitol.

The governor's recent address to representatives of the State Association of Town Agricultural Societies and the Association of County Agricultural Societies was highly significant. He said in part:

I fully appreciate the awakening which is incident to the work of the agricultural societies. I fully appreciate the great importance of having these societies in a flourishing condition, and there is nothing that I would willingly do that would in any way detract from their efficiency. They are a very important part of the activities of the state and represent an interest of first importance, and I want to assure each of you that in all your work to promote them successfully to the highest degree you will have my earnest support.

The agricultural societies are either entitled to the support of the state or they are not. Some say that they shouldn't receive any money from the state and that it is illegal to give it to them. Well, my friends, if it is illegal to give it to them directly right out of the coffers of the state it is illegal to tax and then pay it to them. The illegality exists not in the particular state fund from which the tax or the amount is paid, but in the fact that it is paid.

But, assuming, as under the present law we assume, that it is proper in recognition of the interests of agriculture and of the work of these societies that payment should be made from the state, then let us pay it in a manly fashion. Let us pay it from the resources of the state. Let us pay it recognizing the importance of agriculture. Let it not be done as a bribe. Let it not be done at the cost of respect for our law and demoralization of our youth, but let it be done with the support of the moral sentiment of the state because it is the right thing to do.

Members of Historical Families.

Assemblymen Artemus Ward, Jr., of New York city and Frank DeNoyelles of Rockland are members of families of historical interest. In 1750 an ancestor of DeNoyelles was a member of the constitutional assembly of New York state. In 1803 and 1843 members of his family were in the legislature.

Mr. Ward is a direct descendant of General Artemas Ward of Massachusetts, who was a leading officer in the American army in the Revolution and served on the staff of George Washington.

But of course the family record of Speaker Wadsworth takes the first historical prize. He comes of one of the earliest American families, but one not early in the sense intended by the young lady who said in response to a query about her ancestry: "Yes, I come of an early family. My father is a milkman."

The governor's recent reception at the executive mansion in Eagle street was one of the most enjoyable of recent years in many respects. Mrs. Hughes is somewhat of a politician, if her husband is not, as her handshakes were longer and more enthusiastic than those of the governor, who may have been appalled at the long line of guests that paraded before him in single file.

Banking Conferences.

Chairman James Francis of New York, of the assembly banking committee, has arranged for a series of conferences between his committee and Mr. Clark Williams, superintendent of banking, regarding the reform laws to be enacted this session. Members of the governor's special banking commission and eminent New York financial experts will also advise the committee from time to time regarding the provision of the bill or bills.

FOSTER THEATRE.

The Vaudeville and Picture show at the popular price of 10 cents at the Foster Theatre, still continues to draw good houses every afternoon and evening and this week the show is stronger than ever, and consists of "Kohler & Marion," a Dutch musical comedy act. Four reels of new pictures and two new illustrated songs. As is the usual custom an entire change of program will be presented the last half of the week. The bill last week proved a pleasing one and enjoyed a very liberal patronage. "The Musical Adams" and "Miss Irene Hild," a clever character singer, being very much above the average entertainers seen here. Special ladies' matinees, commencing every afternoon at 3 o'clock, are becoming quite popular with the ladies in particular.

Common Council.

At a special meeting of the Common Council held on Monday evening a resolution was adopted taking the privilege of purchasing stationery, etc., from the separate Boards and compelling purchase through the Printing Committee. This will require special requisition blanks to be printed for the benefit of the department, leaving orders for such supplies with the City Clerk. When bills for such supplies are rendered the Common Council for audit, they must be accompanied by an order signed by at least two members of the Committee and the clerk's receipt that such supplies have been received.

Sliding upon any and all streets in the city limits was prohibited by resolution.

A few bills were audited.

A resolution relative to the printing supplies is an excellent one and should prove an economical measure.

Mid-Winter Conference at Auburn Theological Seminary.

The Annual Conference, which Auburn Seminary has held for a number of years at this season of the year, will occur on Monday and Tuesday, February 10 and 11. A notable program has been arranged for the consideration of the general topic "The Modern Problem of the American Church."

On Monday afternoon the Rev Andrew V. V. Raymond, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Buffalo, will give an address upon this problem "As Defined by Changed Conditions." On Monday evening Dr. Harry A. Garfield, Professor in Princeton University and President elect of Williams College, will speak upon the problem "As Related to Civic Life." On Tuesday there will be three sessions—morning, afternoon and evening. The Rev Charles Stelzle, Superintendent of the Department of Church and Labor of the Board of Home Missions, and Mr. James Simpson, Vice President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, will speak upon the main theme "As Related to Labor Conditions." Mr. Loomis Burrell a manufacturer at Little Falls, N Y., the Rev. William C. Spicer, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Gloversville, and the Rev. John Chester Ball, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Corning, will speak upon the problem "As Related to Urban and Rural Communities." The concluding address will be given on Tuesday evening by Rev. Charles L. Thompson, D. D., LL. D., Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, upon the "Solution of the Problem, Present and Prospective."

Supervisors W. M. Barker, New Haven; L. D. Beardsley, Granby; Charles Lockwood, Scriba; W. M. Kellogg, Volney; George R. Simons, Fulton; were in Oswego on Friday as members of the Good Roads Committee. They went into Oswego Town and made an inspection of the new highways leading from the west city line to Fruit Valley, which State Engineer Skene has given notice that he is about to accept from the contractors.

Mr. Horace N. Gilbert has received a letter from Mr. Frank Shepard who is in the Department of Construction and Engineering, Isthmian Canal Commission. Mr. Shepard was the recent guest of Messrs. Gilbert in this city and he writes thus of his return trip to the canal zone: "The return trip was uneventful until a severe storm struck us. About 1 a. m. one night, we were aroused by a tremendous crash and a sound as though the boat had struck a rock—a sensation more novel than pleasant. A big wave came over the deck, breaking open a state room door and nearly swamping the occupants. We arrived at Gatun on the morning of Jan. 6, and received so warm a reception that I was glad to be back again. I hardly knew the place, they had done so much work in the preceding two months. The locks commence to show up well and they are getting along fast with the dam. The last day of the old year was a record breaking one with the steam shovels in the Culebra Division when 46,732 cubic yards were taken out. During December over 2,000,000 yards were taken out. The total to Jan. 1, 1908, was 22,758,291 cubic yards excavated. Health conditions are improving all the time. Of the 44,000 employes on the pay roll the sick list is only about 20 per 1,000. The new year opens opens most auspiciously."

Miss Grace J. Tucker will open a children's class in dancing in Tucker's hall on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A second class for children will be opened in Tucker's hall on Friday afternoon, Jan. 31, at 4 o'clock. It is desired that all children contemplating taking dancing lessons this winter, be present at the first meeting when the classes will organize.

A communication from Mr. Arvin Rice, asking the Common Council for $375 for the maintenance of the city library for the months of October, November and December, as authorized by the Council several years ago, was referred to the City Attorney for investigation as to the constitutionality of the proceeding of the previous Council. Mayor Quirk, it is alleged, is opposed to a belief in the legality of the procedure of the former Council.

The Fire department made a record breaking run on Monday morning to the store of Grocer Parmiter in Erie street, where an overheated stovepipe going through his store rooms had set fire to its surroundings. The flames had assumed menacing proportions when the firemen reached the scene, but they were quickly subdued by the chemical and one stream of water. The loss will be several hundred dollars.

Messrs. S. B. Mead, F. B. Dilks, T. H. Webb and F. A. Gage were in Syracuse last week for a conference with State Engineer Hill relative to using the north end of Pathfinder Island for a spoils ground during the construction of the barge canal. The original plans provided that this be done. A change in the plans made the flats near Tannery Creek the dumping ground. The trustees of Pathfinder Island desire that the north end of the island be used as was at first provided, as it is marshy and low and could thus be filled in. Beside, it would be a more economical location for the State.

Pipes and the Lips.

The constant habit of smoking pipes has a perceptible effect upon the face. The pressure of the lips to hold the pipe in position increases the curvature of the lips round the stem, and the muscles become more rigid here than in other parts. Thus the lips at a certain point become stronger, and the pipe is unconsciously held in the same habitual position. After long continuation of the habit small circular wrinkles form parallel with the curvature of the lips around the stem. These are crossed by finer lines caused by the pressure of the lips to retain the stem in position. In the case of old men who have smoked a pipe for years the effect upon the lips is very marked, not only altering the form of the lips, but of the one entire side of the face, causing the wrinkles that are the result of age to deepen and instead of following the natural course of facial wrinkles to change their course so as to radiate from the part of the mouth where the pipe is habitually carried. Furthermore, one or both lips often protrude, just like the lips of people who used to suck their thumbs when children.—Medical Record.

Who Profits?

Politicians manage municipal affairs in such a way that their own interests are cared for first and public service is only a minor and subsidiary feature. Money collected from taxpayers is spent for the benefit of the "gang" instead of for that of the people, and the consequence is that enterprises conducted by the city are invariably not merely ill managed, but enormously expensive.

There is no reason to hope that this state of affairs will be changed so long as human nature remains what it is, and therefore the people will not be likely in their sober senses to intrust any public utility that can safely be left in the hands of private enterprise to any city government.—Chicago Journal.

Strictly Business.

"Sir," began a stranger as he walked directly up to a business man, "I am strictly on business."

"So am I."

"Good! I believe every man should furnish money for his own tombstone."

"So do I."

"Good again! I want to raise $25 to pay for a stone over my grave. What assistance will you render the enterprise? I want a business answer."

"You shall have it, sir. Unless you immediately take your departure I will aid the enterprise by furnishing the corpse."

The stranger hurried off.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CHAPTER VII

WHILE dressing for dinner after a delightful afternoon with Harriet Renwyck, Richard took his first lesson in modern English history and geography. The well trained Bills attempted to take full charge of the toilet, but upon this the new master put his foot down firmly.

"Bills," he said, "just about eighteen years ago, if I remember right, my nurse came to the conclusion that I was then old enough to get into my breeches without her able assistance. The conditions remain unchanged. Sit down and talk to me about London."

Gingerly availing himself of the edge of a chair on account of this condescension of inexperience, the valet detailed an account of his master's movements for the past three years. On the whole, the story was interesting, though distinctly unflattering at times to a member of the nobility. Outwardly Bills was as expressionless as a sphinx; inwardly he enjoyed his own narrative hugely. It was seldom he had so glorious an opportunity of laying bare his private opinions of his whilom master.

"Umph!" grunted Richard as he tried on one of Lord Croyland's dinner jackets. "So I am responsible for three entanglements and one scandal of which I still wear honorable scars. Drop that part of it. I'm a seeker after general information only."

Bills looked disappointed, but strove to earn his salary on less tasteful lines. He was a shrewd man, and his knowledge of the requirements of Richard's case led him to give valuable information. He described Hyde park, Piccadilly, the Strand and many other haunts of the fashionable set; also a club or two and various prominent English people likely to be mentioned in general conversation.

Richard was possessed of a retentive memory, which he now stored full of odds and ends which would help him pass muster, provided, of course, he did not run foul of the initiated, in which case he shuddered to think of the possibilities. His alleged sojourn in the United States, especially his winter in Texas, accounted in a measure for occasional slips, but even with this in his favor the position was a trying one.

There was another feature of the enterprise which troubled him sorely. It was comparatively easy not to seem to appreciate a joke and to intersperse small talk with a few stock phrases delivered in a British drawl, but when he looked into the eyes of the woman he loved he longed with all his heart to be for once and all time an American. He sighed for the sweep of the wide free plains, for a gallop with her across the fragrant prairie, to speak to her in his natural native tongue and to tell her he loved her as he loved his land.

"Woolsey," he sighed, and it amused him to notice how the valet resented the use of his Christian name, "I'm afraid, after all, I shall have to ask you to tie this beck thing. The ones I had at home were ready made and could be cinched up properly with a practical buckle at the back."

The valet deftly adjusted the bow, then gave a pull here and a poke there to the dinner suit, to which the master submitted meekly.

"M' lord," observed Bills, surveying his charge with an expert's eyes, "askin' your lordship's pardon for presumin' to mention it, the—er—the other one never looked quite so convincin', m' lord."

"Thank you, cardinal."

"Thank you, sir, an' I ain't no judge if the lady don't think so too."

Richard wheeled upon him sharply.

"Lady? What lady?"

"Why, Miss Renwyck, sir, the lady wot strikes me as"—

"Stop right there!" commanded Richard sternly. "There are certain subjects which are not discussed between a gentleman and his servant. This is one of them. Please remember it."

"Thank you, Mr.—er—I mean m' lord," said the valet respectfully. "Very good, sir."

In sizing up his man the astute Bills had made a grave mistake, wherein he found much food for reflection regarding his future line of conduct. He had long since learned to manage his former master by various cunning little artifices, but this wide awake Texan, with his square chin and steely blue eyes, was quite another proposition. Although Bills had divined the object of this masquerade, it did not seem as if he would profit much by it, and yet there must be some way in which he could turn it to his own advantage eventually, he was sure.

Meanwhile the adventurer descended into the drawing room and was presented to several other members of the small house party who had arrived by the late afternoon train for the week end. First there was Miss Caroline Schermerly, half sister to Mr. Renwyck and belonging to the haute noblesse of old Manhattan. Chatterers described her as a mass of uncertain age, although there was little doubt as to her personal antiquity. She was tall, somewhat angular and incased in a formal coat of blue blooded sleet, which had never thawed sufficiently to admit of a husband being warmed to her side. She approved of earls. They represented caste; therefore she promptly took Richard under her melting wing, to the vast discomfiture of the gentleman thus appropriated.

Then there was Miss Eugene Chittendon, a bosom friend of Miss Renwyck, newly released from boarding school and radiant in the glamour of her first season out. She was blond, fluffy, giggly, enthusiastic, delivering her sentences in a short, jerky staccato, with a deal of unnecessary emphasis, until her conversation suggested some one playing telegraph operator with a vichy siphon.

"She was so glad to meet a real live English lord! Really, it was delightful. How did it feel to be a nobleman instead of just an ordinary American? But of course he couldn't tell the difference, never having been anything else, you know," and so on ad libitum.

In his heart Richard agreed with her literally, but was not in a position to make explanations.

He was now introduced to the last of the guests, Mr. Cornelius Van der Awe, an overyoung young man, sad eyed, dark and in love with Miss Chittendon to the verge of melancholia. He said he was very much pleased to meet Lord Croyland and asked if they were having much fog at home.

Richard had been posted on London fogs and was enabled to draw a picture sufficiently dismal to meet with the questioner's desires.

"Dinner is served," announced a tall butler, who fortunately chanced to be an Irishman. Otherwise there might have been whisperings over some of the strange earl's characteristics in the servants' hall.

"All right," said Mr. Renwyck; "we won't wait for Michael. He never missed an opportunity of being late in all his life."

Richard, who against his every inclination was forced to take in the stately Miss Schermerly, was wondering vaguely who "Michael" might be when suddenly his heart stood still at the entrance of the gentleman himself and again in his ears sounded the haunting echo of that doubtful compliment:

"Very good seat for an Englishman my lord."

Mr. Michael Corrigan was a merry, hearty little man, brother to Mrs. Renwyck, not ashamed of his immediate Irish ancestry and a thorn in his brother-in-law Jacob's side. The two gentlemen had never got on well together, owing to an utter dissimilarity of tastes and a bulldog tendency to argue out their respective sides of every question to the bitter end. If one made a statement the other was sure to combat it, no matter what his private convictions chanced to be, and poor Mrs. Renwyck lived in mortal dread of a tilt a la outrance between the two. Moreover, there had been a recent discussion, which, had Richard known it, would have caused him much distress of mind, for the rock on which the brothers-in-law had split was a business deal with one Bill Williams of San Antonio, Tex.

Before the advent of Mr. Corrigan, Richard had been pluming himself on having carried out his role so successfully. It was comparatively easy to throw sand in the eyes of the Renwycks and their guests, but Mr. Corrigan put a different complexion on the face of things, for the Texan recognized the gentleman as a staunch friend of his father's who had visited their ranch some ten years before. Richard was then a mere boy and would scarcely be remembered, he hoped, especially when masquerading as a foreigner. Still he had his quaking doubts and redoubled his efforts to appear un-American. As the dinner progressed he was rejoiced to detect no sign of recognition, but before the salad was served he found himself in trouble.

For the benefit of his guests Mr Renwyck recounted the afternoon's feat of horsemanship, and Richard found himself upon the defensive. Fortunately he knew the details of the real Lord Croyland's venture in Texas cattle and told the story with good effect, thus accounting for his ability to ride anything that ran on four legs, eat all the while he felt the steady gaze of Mr. Corrigan's little gimlet eyes, which made him most uncomfortable.

When this ordeal was passed Miss Chittendon forced him into one more complication.

"Oh, Lord Croyland," she gushed from her seat on the opposite side of the table, "won't you please tell us a lot about England? I've never crossed, you know, and I'm just dying to see the places I've read of in so many books."

"My dear young lady," Richard returned, with unnatural languor, "you wouldn't find it half so jolly as your own country. Really, you know, I'm becoming such a good American that I fancy I shall never return to England again."

He was not to get out of that coil so easily, however, for the ladies piled him with difficult questions until he wished with all his heart that three of them at least were confined for life in the Tower of London, while he talked to the fourth of bronchos and love and things he understood. Then Mr. Corrigan took a hand.

"Lord Croyland," he began, leisurely sipping his port, "it has been many years since I was in London, but I have always retained a most delightful recollection of Hyde park. Very few changes there, I suppose?"

Richard brightened visibly. This was a subject on which the astute Bills had drilled him well. He could speak of it, he thought, with little danger of a slip. Mr. Corrigan went on reflectively:

"Quite a park, as I remember it."

"Vast," agreed Richard, wishing his mentor had been a little more explicit as to dimensions.

"I was especially impressed," said Mr. Corrigan, with defiusive blandness, "with that splendid statue of Napoleon, which stands at the main entrance. You are familiar with it, of course, Lord Croyland?"

"Oh, quite!" assented Richard boldly, screwing in his monocle and looking Uncle Michael straight in the eye, with never a tremor in his own. "To me it is quite the finest bit of bronze I've ever seen."

Mr. Corrigan seemed puzzled.

"Bronze?" he murmured thoughtfully. "Now, that's strange. I was under the impression that it was done in marble." He looked up with a smile and a sigh. "I dare say I'm getting old, my lord."

Richard began to feel beads of cold perspiration gathering upon his brow, but dared not call attention thereto by mopping.

"It is quite weather stained, you know," he explained, with outward calm, "and perhaps—well, you see, the sculptor's name is Thornton. I've never heard that he worked in marble, though I may be wrong."

"But what I don't understand," exclaimed Mr. Renwyck, "is why you Englishmen ever put up a statue of Napoleon at all. Seems to me that hating him as you did it was rather a curious thing to do."

"Not at all," said Richard desperately; "prisoner, y'know—St. Helena—and all that sort of thing—er—magnanimous."

Uncle Michael did not seem convinced and was about to ask more questions when Mr. Renwyck turned upon him sharply.

"Michael, you are doing this for the sake of argument. I don't believe you know anything about it, and, what is more, I think Lord Croyland is humoring you for the sake of politeness. I'll prove it." He turned to Richard. "My boy, I ought to have warned you in advance. My brother-in-law is a crotchety old lawyer who has never got over his bad habits. Tell me—honestly now—is there a statue of Napoleon Bonaparte in Hyde park at all?"

"No," smiled Richard, greatly relieved at this turn, "there is not."

"Who is it, then?"

"Wellington," said Richard, with triumphant carelessness, although he really did not know whether there was such a statue or not. But then neither did any one else at the table, although all but Miss Chittendon had visited England, some of them many times. The company laughed at Mr. Corrigan's discomfiture, while the victim himself seemed to enjoy it with the keenest zest. That dangerous incident was closed.

The dinner was finished at last, and Mr. Corrigan, pleading an appointment, departed, greatly to Richard's relief. The rest of the evening was spent in company with the ladies, for the young man's efforts to single out one in particular were invariably frustrated by the other three. It was not until nearly 11 that he had a short half hour with her alone, but in this he was repaid for all his tribulations. Miss Harriet was dressed in an exquisite pale blue gown, modestly revealing a neck and shoulders which to Richard were the most beautiful in all the world. They sat on the front veranda overlooking the river, she in a low wicker chair and he on the steps at her feet. Behind him were clusters of wistaria blooms, while beyond in the darkness the first of the fireflies twinkled like stars. To them came the nighttime scents and the murmur of the wind across the mighty Hudson on its journey to the sea.

Miss Harriet told him of her trip to Texas and of the gallant cowboy who had saved her life, while Richard listened with a bounding heart. He longed to claim a hero's place, to confess his deception and tell her the plain, bare truth. And yet he paused. To confess would involve disclosing the reason of his deceit, and he dare not risk the chance of losing her yet. She was young, romantic. The very daring of a lover's bold design might appeal to her; but, on the other hand, it was better to wait till he had won her heart than to ruin all by foolish precipitance.

"And what sort of chap was this cowboy?" he asked her presently.

"Oh, splendid!" she answered, with enthusiasm. "He was tall and straight and strong. Why, he lifted me as though I had been a child and set me down as tenderly as my own mother might have done. It all came so suddenly and I was so bewildered that I scarcely even thanked him. I know he thinks me perfectly horrid, and I would give anything on earth if I could only tell him that I'm—that I'm not."

"And you saw all that in five minutes?" he asked eagerly.

"In five minutes!" she exclaimed, surprised. "How do you know how long it was?"

"Oh—er—a perfectly natural inference," he stammered, hunting for cover desperately.

"Well, it was a short time," she sighed.

"And yet you did not learn his name?"

Miss Harriet shook her head.

"No. We came away at once, and I had no chance. You see, I only saw him for a moment—that is, after he put me down—and—and he was in such a hurry to catch his cows."

Richard smiled into the wistaria vine and was silent for a time.

"I suppose," he began presently, "that the young fellow was of the ordinary type of cowboy we see so frequently on"—

"No," interrupted Miss Harriet, with a decisiveness that pleased him to the quick; "he was nothing of the sort. Of course he was roughly dressed, as they all are, but a gentleman is a gentleman even in a flannel shirt, and 'chaps' don't they call them? Do you know, Lord Croyland, he reminds me in many ways of you. He—no, no," she added hastily, "I don't mean that. He—was quite different. You see, he was an American."

"Lucky beggar!" observed the pseudo earl, with a heavy sigh. "Miss Renwyck, I, too, would love to become an American if—won't you teach me how?"

"I?" she laughed. "Yes, I will, if you promise to follow instructions implicitly."

"Done!" he answered. "I'm ready for my first lesson. How will you begin?"

She thought for a moment, then looked down upon him impishly.

"First I think I should like to destroy your monocle with—with a croquet mallet."

Richard screwed it into his eye with renewed vigor and stared up at her through it with an excellent simulacrum of a wondering English incomprehension, stammering out with delightful vagueness:

"D'ye mean while I am—ah—wearing it, Miss Renwyck?"

They Lacked Team Work.

There was small respect in Captain Mayhury's mind for the brains of the artists whom he and his wife harbored and fed during the summer. "They are a well meaning lot of folks as ever lived," he said confidentially to a neighbor, "but when it comes to common sense every last living one of 'em needs a guardeen."

"Act kind o' crazy, I reckon," said the neighbor.

"Well, 'tain't so much that," admitted Captain Mayhury, "as 'tis that they lack gumption and sprawl. Two of 'em were talking to me about the 'sunset light' last night. 'We work fast as we can, but we can't ketch it,' they told me. 'It fades so fast, and before you know it the glow is dead.'

"I've got some used to their queer talk, but that did seem plumb foolish. 'If two of you can't ketch it,' I says, 'why in tunket don't the whole eight of you set to work together, same as if you had a fence to paint?' But if you'll believe me, I could tell by their looks they'd never thought of such a thing before. They're simple, that's what they are."—Youth's Companion.

The Old Time Almanac.

"It is astonishing what faith the old school farmer used to put in his almanac," said a farmer of the new school, a graduate of an agricultural college.

"My father was an old school farmer, and in June he would consult his almanac to see if we were going to have a clear Christmas. What though the almanac usually went back on him? Sometimes its predictions were true, and one accurate prophecy counterbalanced in my father's mind fifty miscues.

"Once I crossed the ocean with the old man. We sat at the captain's table, and the first night out my father, laying down his spoon, said anxiously:

"'Captain, hev ye got an almanac on board?'

"'No,' the captain answered.

"The old man frowned and shook his head.

"'Then, by gosh,' he said, 'we'll jest hev to take the weather as she comes.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Good Features.

Mrs. Bacon—Why, that piano has several keys that make no sound at all. Mr. Bacon—Yes, and there are some other good features about it.—Yonkers Statesman.

The Crown of Womanhood is Motherhood.

The crown of womanhood is motherhood. But uneasy lies the head that wears the crown or anticipates this coronation, when there is a lack of womanly strength to bear the burdens of maternal dignity and duty. And how few women come to this critical time with adequate strength. The reason why so many women sink under the strain of motherhood is because they are unprepared. Is preparation then required for motherhood? asks the young woman. And every experienced mother answers—"Yes." "I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. Stephens. The reason for this advice is that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best preparative for the maternal function. No matter how healthy and strong a woman may be, she cannot use "Favorite Prescription" as a preparative for maternity without gain of health and comfort. But it is the women who are not strong who best appreciate the great benefits received from the use of "Favorite Prescription." For one thing its use makes the baby's advent practically painless. It has in many cases reduced days of suffering to a few brief hours. It has changed the period of anxiety and struggle into a time of ease and comfort.

MOTHER OF THE FAMILY.

The anxious mother of the family oftentimes carries the whole burden of responsibility so far as the home medication of common ailments of the girls or boys is concerned. The cost of the doctor's visits is very often much too great. At such times the mother is invited to write to Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for medical advice, which is given free. Correspondence is held strictly confidential.

The ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription" is a matter of public knowledge, being printed on each separate bottle wrapper.

Perfect safety is assured with Doctor Pierce's well known medicines because no harmful ingredient is contained in them. No alcohol, opium or harmful narcotic is contained in the "Favorite Prescription." Nearly forty years ago Dr. Pierce discovered that chemically pure glycerine of proper strength is a better solvent of our native medicinal plants than is alcohol. Besides glycerine is of high nutritive value in building up healthy flesh—much surpassing cod liver oil. The ingredients in "Favorite Prescription" beside the glycerine are Lady's Slipper root, Goldon Seal root, Black Cohosh and Blue Cohosh root, and Unicorn root.

Dr. John Fyfe, Editor of the Department of Therapeutics in THE ELECTIC REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) one of the chief ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription:

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator and always favors a condition which makes for normal activity of the entire system, cannot fail to be of great usefulness and of the utmost importance to the general practitioner of medicine. "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent."

Of another important ingredient Prof. John King, M. D., says: "As a portus preparator, Blue Cohosh has enjoyed a well-merited reputation, for when used by delicate women, or those who experience painful labors, for several weeks previous, it gives tone and vigor to all the parts engaged, facilitating its progress, and relieving much suffering." Prof. Hale testifies of women who have taken Caulophyllum, all had very easy labors and made good recoveries. Blue Cohosh acts as an anti-abortive by relieving the irritation upon which the trouble depends. He continues, "It has been employed to relieve irritation of the reproductive organs dependent on congestion. It controls chronic inflammatory states of organs and gives tone in cases of debility."

The foregoing are only a few brief extracts taken from among the volumes of endorsements which the most eminent medical writers have given the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, the makers of which are not afraid to print their formula on the bottle wrapper, thus taking their patrons into their full confidence.

He Tamed the Princess.

William the Conqueror when he was only the Duke of Normandy had fallen in love with the Princess Mathilde of Flanders. She was proud and haughty and had refused the noble lovers who were anxious to win her hand. The wily Norman studied her character carefully and when he had mapped out his plan of campaign rode into the town one day when she, at the head of a party, was going from church. He sprang from his horse by her side, boxed her ears soundly, pulled her off her steed, rolled her vigorously in the mud, told her that he loved her and rode away. The astonished princess was infuriated and swore all kinds of vengeance. After her rage cooled down, however, she said to her father that upon reflection she had come to the conclusion that the only man who could treat Mathilde of Flanders in that manner should be her husband. They were married, and the union turned out to be one of the happiest marriages in the history of royalty.

All Were Prime Ministers.

An eminent surgeon was once sent for by Cardinal Du Bois, prime minister of France, to perform a very serious operation upon him. The cardinal said to him, "You must not expect to treat me in the same rough manner as you treat your poor, miserable wretches at your Hotel Dieu."

"My lord," replied the surgeon, with great dignity, "every one of those miserable wretches, as your eminence is pleased to call them, is a prime minister in my eyes."—Success Magazine.

That the children of Corona are running barefooted through the streets and men are out without coats and wearing straw hats.

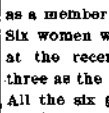
The increase in attendance, as well as the interest manifested in Institute work throughout the state, is the best evidence that farmers and their families more than ever appreciate the benefits to be derived from attending these meetings. The ideal institute is one in which the whole family have a part, and it is hoped and expected that ladies and the younger members of the family will attend all of the sessions.

It is very important and in fact it is absolutely necessary to health that we give relief to the stomach promptly at the first signs of trouble—which are belching of gas, nausea, sour stomach, headache, irritability and nervousness. These are warnings that the stomach has been mistreated; it is doing too much work and it is demanding help from you. Take something once in a while; especially after meals; something like KODOL for Dyspepsia and Indigestion. It will enable your stomach to do its work properly. Sold by all druggists.

The Grand Jury which has been in session since Jan. 6, on account of the unusually large number of cases to be considered, reported on Thursday to Justice Scripture. Sealed indictments were brought in in twenty cases but the jury was not dismissed, Justice Scripture instructing them to report on Monday, Jan. 28, as District Attorney Baker said there were several excise cases to be examined which it was impossible to reach this session, owing to the absence of several state officials.

A great deal of interest is being manifested in the Farmers' Institute which is to be held at Fulton Feb. 14th and 15th. The institutes which have been held here under the direction of Mr. F. E. Dewley in past years have been of much interest as well as of great value to those who attended them, and it is expected that the coming meeting will be the best ever held here. The speakers to be sent to this meeting are all practical men who have had a life long experience in the various branches of farm work and are thoroughly qualified to deal intelligently with the subjects to be discussed.

The Masonic club gave an "at home" to members and their lady friends on Friday evening in the club rooms. A delightful musical program was rendered by Miss Bertha E. Decker of Syracuse, harp soloist; Mrs. S. R. Magee, Miss Hazel Guile and Mr. H. J. Mulhern with Miss Bertha Elder as accompanist. Cards, dancing, games and conversation made the evening pass pleasantly, and at a seasonable hour a luncheon consisting of chicken salad, sandwiches, cake, coffee and olives was served. The various committees were as follows: Reception—G. E. Mason, F. W. Snyder, J. D. McIntyre, F. H. Frencff, F. W. Eastman. Entertainment—W. H. Hornibrook, J. D. McIntyre, G. E. Mason, D. Katz. Refreshments—J. D. McIntyre, F. H. French, S. B. Whitaker.



It is odd and pleasant that conservative, picturesque and scholarly old Oxford should be among the first cities in England to elect a woman as a member of its municipal council. Six women were chosen to that office at the recent elections, instead of three as the first dispatches reported. All the six got a large vote. Miss Sutton of Reading and Mrs. Woodward of Bendley had a "walk-over;" Miss Merivale of Oxford and Miss Morgan of Brecon ran ahead of their tickets, and Dr. E. Garrett Anderson of Aldeburgh and Miss Dove of High Wycombe both had handsome majorities. Dr. Garrett Anderson is one of the early and distinguished women physicians of England. She is a sister of Mrs. Millicent Garrett Fawcett.

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But then it doesn't really matter about growing old, if we grow in other ways, if we grow in wisdom, in kindness and patience and strength.

Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period than the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

Silent and Dramatic.

The most dramatic of silent men was Wallenstein, the antagonist of Gustavus Adolphus and the commander of the emperor's armies in the Thirty Years' war. He insisted that the deepest silence should reign about him. His officers took care that no loud conversation should disturb their general. They knew that a chamberlain had been hanged for waking him without orders and that an officer who would wear clanking spurs in the commander's presence had been secretly put to death. In the rooms of his palace the servants glided as if they were phantoms, and a dozen sentinels moved about his tent charged to secure the silence the general demanded. Chains were stretched across the streets in order to guard him against the disturbance of sounds. Wallenstein's taciturnity, which made him shun speech, and his love of silence, which caused him to be irritated at the slightest noise, were due to his constitutional temperament. He never smiled, he never asked advice from any one, and he could not endure to be gazed at, even when giving an order. The soldiers, when he crossed the camp, pretended not to see him, knowing that a curious look would bring them punishment.

English Sporting Parsons.

The London Times a correspondent writes: "Once when a duke of Grafton was thrown into a ditch a young curate who had been closely competing with him for pride of place shouted, 'Lie still, your grace,' and cleared him and his hunter and the fence at a bound. So pleased was the duke with the performance that he declared he would give the young divine his first vacant living and not long afterward carried out the promise, vowing that if the curate had stopped to pull him out of the dike he would never have patronized him. 'Sporting parsons' are still to be found in almost every county today who can hold their own in the first flight when hounds run hard and some of the keenest fox hunters in all times have been supplied from the ranks of the clergy. Even the warning against their 'hawkynge, huntynge and dansynge' in the reign of King Henry VI. appears to have had very little effect."

Only One Sea Power.

In the audacity of puny triumphs nations are called sea powers, but there is only one sea power, and that is the sea itself. "Far famed our navies melt away." Within a hundred yards of the best charted shore stout ships are as bubbles. That sea that is as familiar when calm to little boats and ferries and tugs as are the thoroughfares of a city to its crowd of humanity takes on all the aspect of chaotic terror when winds and storms prevail. The waters so close as to reflect the friendly lights of the great metropolis are as alien to the forces of men as are the depths of the farthest ocean. Lord Byron's "Apostrophe" has lost none of its tremendous reality in all the progress from the little wooden sailers to our greatest merchantmen and ironclads. Nor can its truth be lessened in all the maturest development we can dream of.—Kansas City Times.

Origin of Precious Ores.

Men sometimes dream of enormous wealth stored deep in the earth, below the reach of miners; but, according to an eminent geologist, there is little or no ground to believe that valuable metallic deposits lie very deep in the earth's crust. Such deposits, according to this authority, are made by underground waters, and owing to the pressure on the rocks at great depths the waters are confined to a shell near the surface. With few exceptions ore deposits become too lean to repay working below 3,000 feet. Nine mines in ten, taking the world as a whole, are poorer in the second thousand feet than in the first thousand and poorer yet in the third thousand than in the second.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Problems in Fiction.

Reverence for decorum and even for social prejudices did not hamper the real masters of the English novel. It did not stifle in the cradle "Vanity Fair" or "Wuthering Heights" or "Diana of the Crossways" or "Adam Bede." There are problems enough in all these works, but they are handled by men and women of genius, who treat both their subjects and their readers with respect.—London Standard.

Gunpowder.

The explosion of gunpowder is divided into three distinct stages, called the ignition, inflammation and combustion. The ignition is the setting on fire of the first grain, while the inflammation is the spreading of the flame over the surface of the powder from the point of ignition. Combustion is the burning up of each grain. The value of gunpowder is due to the fact that when subjected to sufficient heat it becomes a gas which expands with frightful rapidity. The so called explosion that takes place when a match is touched to gunpowder is merely a chemical change, during which there is a sudden evolution of gases from the original solid. It has been calculated that ordinary gunpowder on exploding expands about 9,000 times or fills a space this much larger as a gas than when in a solid form. When this chemical change takes place in a closed vessel the expansion may be made to do a work like that of forcing a projectile along the bore of the great gun or test tube in the line of least resistance.

Why Snow Is White.

The reason snow is white is that all the elementary colors are blended together in the radiance that is thrown off from the surface of the crystals, which may be examined in such a way as to detect these colors before they are mingled together to give the eye the impression of whiteness. The whiteness of the snow is also in some degree referable to the quantity of air which is left among the frozen particles. Considerably more than a thousand distinct forms of snow crystals have been enumerated. These minute crystals and prisms reflect all the compound rays of which white light consists. Pink and various other tints may be seen reflected from sheets of snow under certain angles of sunshine. So much light is reflected by snow in the day that the eyes often suffer from it, and enough is given in the night to guide the traveler in the absence of artificial light or moonlight.—Chicago Tribune.

Holding His Job.

Michael Callahan, a section boss for the Southern railroad, has a keen Gaelic wit. One warm afternoon while walking along the railroad tracks he found a section hand placidly sleeping beside the rails. Callahan looked disgustedly at the delinquent for a full minute and then remarked:

The Eleventh.

Archbishop Usher was once washed ashore from a wreck off the coast of Ireland. Almost destitute of clothing, he wandered to the house of a church dignitary and asked for shelter and aid of a brother clergyman.

"How many commandments are there?" inquired the other, thinking to detect an impostor.

"I can at once satisfy you that I am not the ignorant impostor you take me for," replied the archbishop. "There are eleven commandments."

"No," was the sneering comment; "there are but ten commandments in my Bible. Tell me the eleventh and I will relieve you."

"There it is," said the archbishop; "'a new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another.'"

Husband (looking up from his paper)—What asses men can make of themselves!

Wife—What is the matter now, dear?

H.—I am looking at the love letters in this breach of promise case.

W.—Are they interesting?

H.—Interesting? They are absolutely sickening. Hear this: "My dear ducky." "My lovely dovey." Ha, ha, ha!

W. (demurely)—It does sound rather foolish, doesn't it?

H. (with a burst of laughter)—Foolish? Idiotic, you mean. It's the worst nonsense imaginable. To think that any man in his senses could write such stuff as this: "I send you a million kisses, my goosie poosie, sweety peety!" Ha, ha, ha!

W.—Perhaps he loved her when he wrote those letters.

H.—Suppose he did! Is that any excuse for writing such bosh?

W.—Yes, it should be. Here are some letters I found today when looking over my old relics—relics of courtship. They are very foolish, but very precious to me, I assure you. They are your letters. One of them begins, 'My ownest own preciousest little ducky darling, my'—

H. (hastily)—That will do. Put them in the fire.—London Scraps.

Wanted the "Grocery Seats."

Leigh Lynch while he lived was a happy man. In the first place, he was the husband of lovely and gentle Anna Teresa Berger, the belle of the bell ringers in her girlhood; secondly, he had the years long friendship and intimate companionship of Eugene Field; thirdly, he was the father of a family of children in whom was centered his unselfish hope. He used to carry his business cares and pleasures home, where he was always sure of ready and generous sympathy. For several years he was treasurer of the Union Square theater in New York. One evening at dinner, in the presence of his little daughter, Marie, he mentioned to Mrs. Lynch that the gross receipts of the week had risen to an unprecendented height. The next day Marie asked to be taken to the matinee.

"All right, dumpling," assented the fond father. "What seats would you like?"

"Well, papa," she replied, "I'd like to have them grocery seats you talked us about"—Detroit Free Press.

So far this winter has been replete with typical grip weather and influenza and rheumatism have been very prevalent.

Mr. L. W. Mott of Oswego has been elected a director in the Auburn Trust Company, in which organization he is a prominent member.

Miss Francis Forsyth left last week for South Boston, Virginia, where she will remain until Spring with her sister, Mrs. R. S. Noblin.

Hon. M. H. Baker of Constantia, father of District Attorney Baker, on Friday celebrated his 81st natal anniversary at the home of his son in Oswego.

Dr. E. J. Cusack has been the physician in attendance upon the case of small pox in Schroeppel. Every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

J. J. Farrell of Syracuse, expert accountant engaged by the Board of Supervisors to investigate the books in the County Treasurer's office, will commence his work this Wednesday, the experts from the Comptroller's office having completed their work.

On Friday, Jan. 31, the W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. Chauncey Wolever, 508 Broadway. The address of the afternoon will be made by Mrs. S. M. Barker, county superintendent. Mrs. B. A. Loveless will conduct the current events discussion. Tea will be served.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Petrie, formerly of this city, are spending the winter months in Corona, Calif. Mr. Petrie writes The Times that he saw W. J. Pentelow the other day and that Mr. Pentelow has a beautiful home and is very content in Corona. That the children of Corona are running barefooted through the streets and men are out without coats and wearing straw hats.

The increase in attendance, as well as the interest manifested in Institute work throughout the state, is the best evidence that farmers and their families more than ever appreciate the benefits to be derived from attending these meetings. The ideal institute is one in which the whole family have a part, and it is hoped and expected that ladies and the younger members of the family will attend all of the sessions.

It is very important and in fact it is absolutely necessary to health that we give relief to the stomach promptly at the first signs of trouble —which are belching of gas, nausea, sour stomach, headache, irritability and nervousness. These are warnings that the stomach has been mistreated; it is doing too much work and it is demanding help from you. Take something once in a while; especially after meals; something like KODOL for Dyspepsia and Indigestion. It will enable your stomach to do its work properly. Sold by all druggists.

The Grand Jury which has been in session since Jan. 6, on account of the unusually large number of cases to be considered, reported on Thursday to Justice Scripture. Sealed indictments were brought in in twenty cases but the jury was not dismissed, Justice Scripture instructing them to report on Monday, Jan. 28, as District Attorney Baker said there were several excise cases to be examined which it was impossible to reach this session, owing to the absence of several state officials.

A great deal of interest is being manifested in the Farmers' Institute which is to be held at Fulton Feb. 14th and 15th. The institutes which have been held here under the direction of Mr. F. E. Dawley in past years have been of much interest as well as of great value to those who attended them, and it is expected that the coming meeting will be the best ever held here. The speakers to be sent to this meeting are all practical men who have had a life long experience in the various branches of farm work and are thoroughly qualified to deal intelligently with the subjects to be discussed.

The Masonic club gave an "at home" to members and their lady friends on Friday evening in the club rooms. A delightful musical program was rendered by Miss Bertha E. Decker of Syracuse, harp soloist; Mrs. S. R. Magee, Miss Hazel Gutle and Mr. H. J. Mulhern with Miss Bertha Elder as accompanist. Cards, dancing, games and conversation made the evening pass pleasantly, and at a seasonable hour a luncheon consisting of chicken salad, sandwiches, cake, coffee and olives was served. The various committees were as follows: Reception—G. E. Mason, F. W. Snyder, J. D. McIntyre, F. H. Frencif, F. W. Eastman. Entertainment—W. H. Hornibrook, J. D. McIntyre, G. E. Mason, D. Katz. Refreshments—J. D. McIntyre, F. H. French, S. B. Whitaker.

It is odd and pleasant that conservative, picturesque and scholarly old Oxford should be among the first cities in England to elect a woman as a member of its municipal council. Six women were chosen to that office at the recent elections, instead of three as the first dispatches reported. All the six got a large vote. Miss Sutton of Reading and Mrs. Woodward of Bendley had a "walk-over;" Miss Merivale of Oxford and Miss Morgan of Brecon ran ahead of their tickets, and Dr. E. Garrett Anderson of Aldeburgh and Miss Dove of High Wycombe both had handsome majorities. Dr. Garrett Anderson is one of the early and distinguished women physicians of England. She is a sister of Mrs. Millicent Garrett Fawcett.

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But then it doesn't really matter about growing old, if we grow in other ways, if we grow in wisdom, in kindness and patience and strength.

Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period than the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

Silent and Dramatic.

The most dramatic of silent men was Wallenstein, the antagonist of Gustavus Adolphus and the commander of the emperor's armies in the Thirty Years' war. He insisted that the deepest silence should reign about him. His officers took care that no loud conversation should disturb their general. They knew that a chamberlain had been hanged for waking him without orders and that an officer who would wear clanking spurs in the commander's presence had been secretly put to death. In the rooms of his palace the servants glided as if they were phantoms, and a dozen sentinels moved about his tent charged to secure the silence the general demanded. Chains were stretched across the streets in order to guard him against the disturbance of sounds. Wallenstein's taciturnity, which made him shun speech, and his love of silence, which caused him to be irritated at the slightest noise, were due to his constitutional temperament. He never smiled, he never asked advice from any one, and he could not endure to be gazed at, even when giving an order. The soldiers, when he crossed the camp, pretended not to see him, knowing that a curious look would bring them punishment.

English Sporting Parsons.

To the London Times a correspondent writes: "Once when a duke of Grafton was thrown into a ditch a young curate who had been closely competing with him for pride of place shouted, 'Lie still, your grace,' and cleared him and his hunter and the fence at a bound. So pleased was the duke with the performance that he declared he would give the young divine his first vacant living and not long afterward carried out the promise, vowing that if the curate had stopped to pull him out of the dike he would never have patronized him. 'Sporting parsons' are still to be found in almost every county today who can hold their own in the first flight when hounds run hard and some of the keenest fox hunters in all times have been supplied from the ranks of the clergy. Even the warning against their 'hawkynge, huntynge and dansynge' in the reign of King Henry VI. appears to have had very little effect."

Only One Sea Power.

In the audacity of puny triumphs nations are called sea powers, but there is only one sea power, and that is the sea itself. "Far famed our navies melt away." Within a hundred yards of the best charted shore stout ships are as bubbles. That sea that is as familiar when calm to little boats and ferries and tugs as are the thoroughfares of a city to its crowd of humanity takes on all the aspect of chaotic terror when winds and storms prevail. The waters so close as to reflect the friendly lights of the great metropolis are as alien to the forces of men as are the depths of the farthest ocean. Lord Byron's "Apostrophe" has lost none of its tremendous reality in all the progress from the little wooden sailers to our greatest merchantmen and ironclads. Nor can its truth be lessened in all the maturest development we can dream of.—Kansas City Times.

Origin of Precious Ores.

Men sometimes dream of enormous wealth stored deep in the earth, below the reach of miners; but, according to an eminent geologist, there is little or no ground to believe that valuable metallic deposits lie very deep in the earth's crust. Such deposits, according to this authority, are made by underground waters, and owing to the pressure on the rocks at great depths the waters are confined to a shell near the surface. With few exceptions ore deposits become too lean to repay working below 3,000 feet. Nine mines in ten, taking the world as a whole, are poorer in the second thousand feet than in the first thousand and poorer yet in the third thousand than in the second.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Problems in Fiction.

Reverence for decorum and even for social prejudices did not hamper the real masters of the English novel. It did not stifle in the cradle "Vanity Fair" or "Wuthering Heights" or "Diana of the Crossways" or "Adam Bede." There are problems enough in all these works, but they are handled by men and women of genius, who treat both their subjects and their readers with respect.—London Standard.

How They Love Each Other.

"Yes," said Miss Passay, "he's an awfully inquisitive bore. He was trying to find out my age the other day, so I just up and told him I was fifty. That settled him."

Gunpowder.

The explosion of gunpowder is divided into three distinct stages, called the ignition, inflammation and combustion. The ignition is the setting on fire of the first grain, while the inflammation is the spreading of the flame over the surface of the powder from the point of ignition. Combustion is the burning up of each grain. The value of gunpowder is due to the fact that when subjected to sufficient heat it becomes a gas which expands with frightful rapidity. The so called explosion that takes place when a match is touched to gunpowder is merely a chemical change, during which there is a sudden evolution of gases from the original solid. It has been calculated that ordinary gunpowder on exploding expands about 9,000 times or fills a space this much larger as a gas than when in a solid form. Redlands was represented by a large sphere made of oranges. We never saw so many flowers before; they were arranged so prettily. It was nothing like our parades at home; so many horses and ponies all trimmed with flowers and ribbons. It was estimated that there were 50,000 people in attendance. There were chariot races, four horses running side by side; the chariots are like those in our circuses and the drivers are dressed like Romans. It is very exciting."

ADD DIED

Postmaster O. E. Ward of Phoenix died on Tuesday afternoon after a short illness with pneumonia. The deceased was appointed about a year ago and had been a popular official. His death is a shock to his friends and a double blow to his family, the eldest son having died with the same disease on Thursday.

The Wife of the Cat.

Nasr-ed-din, the Persian shah, was an intensely superstitious man and believed that his luck lay in his beautiful black Persian cat, which was a remarkably handsome cat in a land where cats are nearly all handsome. The shah never allowed the black cat to be away from him, and it was given in charge of one of his wives, Amin Agdas, who was styled "the wife of the cat."

When the shah went on his long shooting expeditions, the Persian cat was put into a decorated basket and carried by a special attendant directly behind his master. Unluckily one day an accident occurred, and the black cat came to an untimely end. The shah was in despair at the loss of his luck bringer, but the clever "wife of the cat" exerted her influence and brought her nephew under the shah's notice. The lad was sharp enough to make the most of an accident (planned by his aunt) and save the shah's life, and the monarch was so pleased that he gave the boy the name of "the cherished of the sovereign" and installed the new favorite between

Mrs. V. Vant wrestled with the grip last week; also Cass Snyder.

Maud Bartlett is quite ill with typhoid fever.

Mrs. Randall spent a few days in Fulton last week.

Violet King visited her parents recently.

Miss Mabel Grant is the new instructor in the Weed district.

Minnie Green has recovered from her recent illness.

Mrs. Durfey of Syracuse was a recent guest at Burr Howard's.

Miss Louisa Cole spent a day with her sister, Mrs. O. Armour, at Black Creek last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will View were the guests of his brother, George, a few days since.

George View loaded a car with seed potatoes last week for a firm in Syracuse.

Maud Rowlee was the guest of her cousin, Maud Ives, over Saturday and Sunday.

Will Gilbert and family and Mr. Lockwood and family were the recent guests at Bernard Howard's.

Several of our singers went to Vermillion one evening last week to assist in the revival services.

A large number of our citizens have been attending the revival meetings now being held in Fulton.

The mumps are the latest style. Robert Ives was the first victim and several were exposed before they knew what was causing his illness.

George Rowlee expects to start for Ithaca on Friday of this week, where he will visit his brother, Willard, a few days before leaving for his home in Michigan.

Miss Elizabeth Howard pleasantly entertained the Birthday Club on Monday evening, January 13th. A business meeting was held and Miss Evelyn Howard was elected president. The next meeting will be held with Earl View.

The funeral of Lindley Seymour was largely attended by old neighbors and friends at the home of his son, Harry, in Fulton, on Monday of this week. He was a charter member of Mount Pleasant Grange and one of its staunchest supporters.

Don't forget the box social at the Grange and be sure to bring as many boxes as there are male members in the family, for it is to be strictly a leap year social. Everyone is cordially invited.

About fifty of the friends of George Sheffield met at his home on Monday evening to help him celebrate his fortieth birthday. Refreshments were served, a fine musical program rendered and a general good time had.

Mr. and Mrs. Delos Rowlee were at home to about fifty of their friends last Friday evening, and although they were not informed about the proposed gathering, they overcame their surprise sufficiently to entertain in a very enjoyable manner. A bountiful repast was served, and before leaving Delos Distin presented the couple with a handsome rocker as a token of friendship, after which the guests repaired to their homes.

MINETTO AND VICINITY.

Rev. and Mrs. B. D. Snyder entertained friends from Pulaski recently.

Salvation Army.

There was a large attendance at the Salvation Army during Major C. F. Caster's visit. The music, songs and stirring address were much enjoyed.

Captain Nehemiah Brookes rendered musical service at the Syracuse Salvation Army Hall on Friday night, and gave an all-round program on ten different musical instruments. The audience showed much appreciation.

Arrangements are being completed for a public supper on February 1, followed by a musical at the city hall, at 8 o'clock.

Perilous Boating.

On the west coast of Ireland, near the mouth of the river Shannon, are several large sea caves which open into each other. The visitor seems to be floating through a submarine palace of many halls whose roofs are either as green as grass in the sun or blood red. But the visitor needs a good guide and a good boatman, for the sea is insidious and the labyrinth of caves intricate. On one occasion, writes Aubrey de Vere in his "Recollections," soon after a party had entered the boatman suddenly shouted, "Bend down your heads for your lives!"

No one saw any danger, but the boatman felt the placid water insensibly rising and knew that the tide had turned. At last the visitors knew this, too, for it was not until the boat had ascended within a few inches of the roof that it began to descend.

"Pull your best!" exclaimed the man at the helm. "If the second wave reaches us, we are lost!" But before the second wave reached the cave the boat had issued from its mouth.

College Chums.

A rich and well known citizen of an eastern city boasts of an extraordinary collection of books wherein the authors have inscribed their autographs.

It is rumored that the envy and frequently the skepticism of his friends have been aroused by the flattering inscriptions in question, and some cynics have even gone so far as to hint of a similarity in handwriting throughout the collection.

The citizen recently purchased a rare edition of Montaigne's essays. One evening at dinner the costly volume was passed from hand to hand, and for a time the owner lost sight of it. When, however, it did finally come back to him he was astonished to find on the fly leaf this inscription:

"To John Blank, From His Old Friend and Classmate, Mike Montaigne."—Harper's Weekly.

"To Eat Crow."

Although the use of the expression "to eat crow" in a metaphorical sense, meaning to eat one's words, may well have dated from the time of Noah, when the bird was first looked upon as unclean and not fit to serve as food for man, it seems to have arisen from the old tale of the officer and the private.

A soldier, having shot a tame crow belonging to one of his officers, was discovered by the owner with the bird in his hand. Seizing the private's gun, the officer commanded him to eat the bird as a punishment. With the firearm pointed at his head, the soldier fell to, but no sooner had the officer laid aside the gun than the culprit grasped it and compelled his superior to join in the distasteful banquet.

The private was court martialed the next day, and when he was asked by the examiners what had occurred he replied, "Nothing, except that Captain Blank and I dined together."—Washington Star.

Reading a Pig's Tail.

"Don't buy that pig," said the older butcher hastily.

"Why not?" asked the younger man.

"Look at his tail," was the reply. "See how loose it hangs, like the tail of a rat. That is a sign that the animal is in bad health.

"You can read a pig's condition by its tail. The tighter it is curled the fitter is the pig. And when the tail hangs straight, as this one does, the pig ought to take to his bed and send for the veterinary." — New Orleans Times-Democrat.

DIED.

Anna L., the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Penthus Ingersol, died on Monday. The funeral was held on Tuesday and interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Mrs. Sarah Penfield died in Oswego on Thursday after a brief illness. The deceased was well known throughout this section of the county, having been born in Hannibal.

The remains of Mrs. Amelia Fennell Tifft, who died in Boston last week, were brought to her former home in this city on Sunday for interment.

Mrs. Letitia McKnight, aged 78, passed to rest at her home in Wolcott on Saturday. The funeral services were held from the late home on Monday. The deceased is survived by two sons, Mr. William J. McKnight of this city; Mr. George McKnight, Columbus, O.; three daughters, Mrs. James Hunter, this city; Dr. Eva McKnight, Oswego, and Mrs. Clayton Johnson, Wolcott; one brother, Mr. Robert Cooper, Oswego. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter and Mr. and Mrs. McKnight of this city were in attendance at the funeral.

The Detroit Free Press of Jan. 18, announces the death of James E. Clough, aged 74, at his home in Detroit, after a long illness. The deceased is well known by many of our readers, having formerly lived in this city and he has in later years been a visitor. The deceased was at one time in business in Oswego but he finally engaged in the manufacture of pianos and organs and in that business he was exceedingly successful. He was greatly respected in his home city and wherever known. His widow, two daughters, a sister and a brother survive.

Mary Frances, aged 49, wife of Mr. John F. Cavanaugh, died on Thursday evening at the family home in Erie street, after a long illness. The funeral services were held on Monday from the Church of the Immaculate Conception, the Rev. J. L. Lindsman officiating. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery. The immediate surviving relatives are the husband, one daughter, Miss Mary Cavanaugh, and three sons, Messrs. John, Vincent and Donald, all of this city, and one brother, Mr. Daniel Kelly of Rochester. The magnificent flowers and floral pieces sent by sympathizing friends attested to the high regard in which the deceased and her stricken family were held. The deepest sympathy is expressed for the sorrowing ones by their friends.

Edward D. Cavanaugh, aged 38, died on Saturday evening at his home in West Third street after a brief illness. The funeral services were held from the late home and the Catholic church on Tuesday morning, the Rev. J. L. Lindsman officiating. Interment was made in St. Mary's. The deceased is survived by his widow, two daughters, Frances E. and Alice M. Cavanaugh; his father, John Cavanaugh; four sisters, Mrs. Mary Carroll, Mrs. Michael McKenna and Miss Rose Cavanaugh of this city, and Miss Anna Cavanaugh of Providence, R. I., and three brothers, John and Francis of this city and Thomas of Morris, Ill in the death of Mr. Cavanaugh two members of the same family lay dead at the same time, Mr. John Cavanaugh, whose wife died last week, being a cousin of the deceased.

Lindley A. Seymour, aged 71, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of this vicinity, died on Friday at the home of his son, Mr. Harry T. Seymour, in this city. The deceased was born in Fulton and was a lifelong resident of Volney, having resided on a farm on the Whitaker road since young manhood until the death of his wife in June, 1906, since which time he had made his home with his son, Willard, adjoining his farm. A few weeks ago while visiting his son Harry, he was stricken with the illness which ended in death. The funeral services, which were largely attended, were held on Monday from the son's home in Fourth street and interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst, our beloved sister, Anna J. Hoff. Words count for little in describing the sadness of our loss. As a member of Nehasane Rebekah Lodge she was held in high esteem, ever ready to cheerfully assume any duty assigned to her. Her wise council was always reliable and her happy, cheerful disposition was an inspiration to all who knew her. Sharing with the bereaved family their sorrow as with them, we have loved her and feeling that "She is not dead, our sister not dead,

But in the paths we mortals tread
And nearer to the end;
So that you too, once passed the bend
Shall meet again as face to face
This sister, you fancy dead."

Resolved, That while we feel our loss so keenly, we realize the deeper meaning to the grief stricken family and to them extend our heartfelt sympathy.

Resolved, That we cause our charter to be draped for 30 days in memory of our beloved sister, and a copy of these resolutions spread upon the minutes of this meeting.

TRIBUTE TO GEN. LEE

Former Schoolmate and Friend Tells of His Many Admirable Qualities as Citizen and Soldier.

Dr. Charles R. Lee last week received the following tribute to his cousin, the late General Albert Lee, who died at his home in New York city a few weeks since:

Dear Doctor Lee: I have just been made aware of the death of your cousin and my former school mate, friend and Commander, Brigadier General Albert L. Lee, than whom no braver man ever drew saber. He was kind and generous and born to command. He was, I believe, the only Brigadier General from Oswego County. As chief of cavalry on Gen. N. P. Banks' staff, he was prominent in saving the army under General Banks from annihilation. The citizens of Fulton should well be proud of General Lee and his record.

From a diary I have I send you the following: Upon our regiment arriving at New Orleans I went up to the headquarters of General Lee. I wrote upon a card which I had, simply this, "Lake, Fulton, N. Y." The guard handed the General the card and he bounded to the door, saying, "Hello, Tom, old boy; I am glad to see you. Come right in." He dismissed a Colonel who was in his office and we went over events that had transpired since we had met years before. Finally he said, "What can I do for you Tom?" I told him I was a member of the Regiment band, 11th N. Y. Cavalry, and that beside myself there were L. F. More, M. C. Highriter and H. C. St. John from Fulton. The General remarked, "I am entitled to a band" and immediately our entire band was detailed to his headquarters as Cavalry division band.

I was with him on the ten-days' raid through Louisiana and Mississippi. We tore up the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, recaptured fifteen of our battle flags and important dispatches en route from Richmond. I will now copy from my diary:

"On the morning of about the middle of the month of November, 1864, Gen. A. L. Lee, commanding the Cavalry Division at Baton Rouge, La., started an expedition against the rebel camps near his district. The following is the report of Gen. A. L. Lee, commanding Union forces: 'To Major General T. A. Hurlburt, commanding Department of the Gulf, Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 22, 1864: I have the honor to report that in pursuance of orders from the General commanding and in accordance with the plans submitted to and approved by him, I moved the effective force of my command on the 14th and 15th insts. as follows: Col. Fonda commanding Second Brigade with 500 men, moved on the evening of the 14th to Port Hudson and remained there until the following night. At dark he moved north through Jackson and beyond fifteen miles to the rebel camp Beauregard. The camp was taken by surprise. It was occupied by the Third Louisiana Cavalry. A number of the enemy taken and a number killed and the remainder scattered. About twenty wagons were destroyed and a large quantity of flour and feed. At daylight Col. Fonda moved across to the Clinton and Liberty road and joined the main column. At 2 p. m., the 15th, Lieut. Col. Marsh, Second Illinois Cavalry, with 500 men of the Third Brigade, moved out on the Greensburg road, crossed the Amite river at Davidson's Ford and moving north entered the town of Liberty at 8 p. m. of the 16th, completely surprised the enemy and captured a large number of officers and men—about 60. Among them was four of Gen. Hodges' staff. Gen. Hodge barely escaped. Col. Marsh remained during the night and in the morning found the main column. At 5 p. m. the remainder of the Division under my personal command moved out on the Clinton road. A section of artillery (First Wisconsin—Horse Artillery), accompanied the column. The pickets of the enemy were met 20 miles out. Clinton was surprised at daybreak and several prisoners captured. At noon the 16th, the column moved toward Liberty and found Col. Fonda camped at Beaver Creek, thirteen miles from Liberty. At noon next day, 17th, reached Liberty where Col. Marsh joined at 5 p. m. Col. Fonda with 500 of the Second Brigade moved on to Brookhaven, a distance of 46 miles. At daylight, the 18th, he surprised the town, scattered a small infantry force and captured a section of artillery and caissons. The gunners were shot down at their posts. He captured about fifty prisoners and destroyed a locomotive and train of cars loaded with stores, burned several buildings containing ammunition, cotton and woolen goods. The quantity could not well be estimated, but acknowledged by rebel officers to have been immense. Destroyed a manufactory of boots and shoes and a tannery containing large stores of leather. At 5 p. m. of the 17th Col. Bassford, commanding First Brigade with 250 men, marched to Summit, capturing 20 prisoners and destroying several thousand dollars' worth of commissary stores. Returning to Liberty, 6 p. m. on the 18th, I learned the enemy had been forced to abandon near Liberty, a twelve pound brass field Howitzer and Caisson. This was brought to our camp. On the morning of the 18th the enemy under Col. Scott, in force of 800, attacked and drove in our pickets at Liberty. At first repulsed, again advanced, dismounted and attacked with desperation. Our men also dismounted and fought bravely. I brought into action the section of First Wisconsin Battery and opened with cannister. After a fight of over an hour the enemy was driven from the field. Three rebel officers were found dead and twenty privates, two officers wounded and captured. Our loss was about twelve wounded, none killed. At 4 p. m. on the 19th I moved my force from Liberty and crossing the Amite river went into camp at a distance of six miles from town. We had in our train from six to eight hundred captured horses and mules, more than one hundred wagons loaded with captured goods and three pieces of captured artillery. Since the day of starting the rain had been almost incessant and the mud about six inches deep. The enemy in small parties were annoying our flank and I deemed it best to destroy the captured wagons by burning them. This was done on night of 19th. The bridge over Beaver Creek, distant about eight miles from camp, was destroyed by the enemy. At 1 a. m., the 20th, I sent Col. Fonda with his Brigade and Pioneers of Division to rebuild the bridge and at 10 a. m. it was in condition to cross. After crossing, it was destroyed. On the night of the 20th, the weather being so inclement the officers captured were allowed to occupy a room in the house occupied by myself and staff—on their parole not to attempt to escape or leave the premises. In the morning four were missing. The remaining officers have made a request to Gen. Hodge that they be returned. On the night of the 21st my column arrived safely at Baton Rouge, La. We brought in one hundred and ninety-nine prisoners, twenty-one of whom were officers. Three officers badly wounded, were paroled and left at Liberty. I found abundance of forage. The enemy has in my judgment received a blow in this region from which they will not soon recover. It is proper to state that one of the guns captured at Brookhaven was a steel Sawyer gun captured at or near Port Hudson; the other a 3-inch Rodman gun. My Brigade Commanders are deserving of the highest praise for their conduct on the entire expedition. Col. Fonda especially distinguished himself by the untiring energy which gave success to the various enterprises entrusted to him. Col. Fonda commanding Third Brigade, Cooley commanded his troops and repelled the attack of the 18th.

I am very respectfully yours,
A. L. LEE, Brigadier General.
Capt. W. H. Clapp, Asst. Adjt. Gen.

The above communication was sent Dr. Lee by Mr. Thomas H. Lake of Rochester, N. Y., who was with General Lee in this and other campaigns and raids.

Baptist Church.

The special meetings at the Baptist Church will be continued this week, with the exception of Monday and Wednesday evenings, for which previous arrangements have been made. An impressive baptismal service was held Sunday morning after the Bible school sessions, when five boys were "buried with Christ in baptism." On Thursday evening of this week the pastor will speak on the subject, "Finding God." On Friday evening, "The Atonement;" on Sunday morning, "Supporting Grace." On Sunday evening he will begin a series of sermons "The Mode and Subjects of the Ordinances, Baptism and the Lord's Supper." All are cordially invited to these meetings.

A Brilliant Social Success.

The Leap Year dancing party given Thursday evening at Church's hall was a most delightful affair.

The party was in charge of the following well known ladies: Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mrs. George Mason, Mrs. David L. Lipsky, Mrs. George Brooker and Miss Sara Lewis. The beautifully decorated hall, the charming costumes of the young society leaders of Fulton and the entrancing music furnished by Kapp's Orchestra of Syracuse was sufficient to make the evening one long to be remembered.

Promptly at nine o'clock the grand march led by Mr. and Mrs. George Mason and by Miss Sara Lewis and Dr. Gladman opened the evening's festivities. There were sixty couples who participated. Needless to say the young men who were the favored ones were unanimous in declaring the party a most brilliant success.

A MASTER STROKE.

All opposition in New York State to Governor Hughes' candidacy for the presidential nomination has disappeared and that he will have a full delegation rather than a divided one in the National Convention, is a certainty. Both Governor Hughes and Secretary Taft have ardent admirers in the Empire State and a bitter and disastrous-to-the-party fight was imminent until Representative Herbert Parsons last week received the following letter from Secretary Taft:

"War Department,
Washington, Jan. 23, 1908.

"My Dear Parsons—I am aware that you and many other friends of mine in New York State, who are also friends of Governor Hughes, have hesitated as to the course to pursue in respect to the Republican nomination for the Presidency. I wish you and them to know that as far as I am concerned there should be no embarrassment in this regard. I have uniformly urged friends of mine not to attempt to divide in my interest the delegation from any State which has a candidate of its own. Since Governor Hughes has indicated his willingness to accept the Republican nomination, I now make the same request of you and my other friends in your State. Moreover, I would greatly deprecate a contest which might imperil Republican victory in New York in November. Anything I can do to avoid this I am anxious to do.

Very sincerely yours,
"William H. Taft."

The letter was a master stroke on the part of the portly Secretary and it removed all the venom from the opposition to Governor Hughes and called a halt in the proceedings against him.

DIED.

Mrs. Cornelia Schenck, widow of the late Daniel Schenck, died on Jan. 1, 1908, at her home in Detroit, Mich., from typhoid fever. The deceased had many friends in this vicinity who learn of her demise with regret.

Fannie Burnhan, aged 80, died on Jan. 22, at the home of Isaac Chesbro, north of Mt. Pleasant. The funeral services were held on Sunday, the Rev. W. H. Fullen officiating, and interment was made at Roosevelt. One daughter, Mrs. Mina of Baldwinsville, and one sister, Mrs. Temple of Volney, survive.

On Sunday afternoon at his home in Seneca street occurred the sudden death of George Kelley, aged 71. The deceased was taken ill on Saturday but was greatly improved on Sunday and ate dinner with his wife. Soon after he expired. He was a home-loving man and a greatly respected citizen. His death is regretted by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. To the widow the deepest sympathy is extended. The funeral services were held from the late home on Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. John Richards officiating. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah. Beside the widow, one sister, Mrs. Isaac Seamans, survives to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and brother.

Herbert J. Rice, aged 45, died on Saturday at his home on Emery street. The deceased a few years ago lost one hand and a portion of the other while engaged in his duties in the Victoria paper mill. The funeral was held from the late home on Monday, the Rev. John Richards officiating. The widow and several children survive.

The passing away of Oscar E. Ward, at his home in Phoenix, brief mention of which was made in the Times last week, brought a feeling of deepest grief to that village. On Sunday previous the eldest son was laid to rest after a two weeks' illness with pneumonia and in the caring for the son the father so exhausted his vitality that he was powerless to combat the same disease to which he fell a victim. The deceased was a graduate of Falley Seminary, this city, and for many years had pursued the business of jeweler in Phoenix. He was also telegraph operator for the Western Union company. A year ago Mr. Ward was appointed postmaster at Phoenix and he had served the patrons of that office to their entire satisfaction. He was a loyalist to friends and to party and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of all who knew him. The funeral services were held from the late home on Thursday. Beside the widow, three daughters, Lucy, Edna and Alice, and two sons, Mark and Van, survive. Mr. Mark Ward has been temporarily appointed postmaster at Phoenix.

Card of Thanks

Mr. Henry W. Fennell of Boston, desires to thank the many friends who extended sympathy in the hour of sorrow in the sudden death of his sister, Mrs. Charles R. Tifft of Boston, Mass.

Board of Education.

At the first meeting of the Board of Education held this year, Superintendent J. R. Fairgrieve was reappointed by the Board at a salary increase of from $2,200 per annum to $2,400. Prof. Fairgrieve also serves in capacity of clerk to the Board. Mr. John Hunter, member of the Board from the city at large, was elected president. Action will soon be taken toward appointing a successor upon the Board to Richard Carr. President Hunter will announce his various committees soon.

Baseball Association Elects Officers.

The annual meeting of the Fulton Baseball Association was held on Wednesday evening and resulted as follows: President, E. G. Cary; directors, E. G. Cary, B. S. McKinstry, E. J. Schem, Maurice Conley and James Caffrey. One hundred dollars was subscribed at the meeting and it is proposed to secure the $400 more necessary prior to the opening of the season by subscription. It is stated that several propositions for the management of the team have been heard but none have been publicly adopted.

THE JEFFERSON-KIERNAN RECITAL.

The following unique tribute to George Kiernan's exceptional talents appears in the New Brunswick, N. J., Home News written by one who knew Joseph Jefferson personally. It was Tom Moore, the Irish poet, who said:

"You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will
But the scent of the roses will hang round it still."

Last night the fortunate audience who listened to George Kiernan were inhaling the roses of tender memories of Joseph Jefferson; to us of the old school it was an echo across space which came to life as we listened. The same pathetic lines filled our eyes with tears, the humor of dear old Rip VanWinkle found the center of laughter in every heart, the heights and depths of Mr. Kiernan's interpretation touched a gamut of emotions in the hearts understanding and an intensely absorbed, audience sat in an atmosphere of contented appreciation.

Mr. Kiernan gives the recital of Rip VanWinkle, February 22, at the Universalist Church, under the auspices of the D. A. R. for the benefit of the monument fund.

Assortments More Varied and Values More Interesting Than Ever During Any Previous

JANUARY SALE

¶ We doubt if there is a sale in Syracuse looked forward to so eagerly or awaited so patiently as this great annual money-saving event.

It is not a question of how much we lose, but how much we sell.

It is a part of our policy to make any sacrifice rather than carry goods over the season; consequently no matter how new or how desirable they are, you will find them marked at marvelous reductions during the balance of this sale.

The Best Coat Doesn't Cost Much Now

It seems scarcely necessary to say much about the styles of these coats, for they are the celebrated Wooltex garments and others of a like high character. And the chances for saving are so numerous that we can mention only these as representative of the whole:

$6.50 50-inch Loose Black Coats for $2.98

To R. F. D. Patrons.

Postmaster Hughes desires to call attention to the practice of some patrons of rural delivery of placing loose coins in their boxes each time they desire to dispatch letters, instead of supplying themselves with postage in advance of their needs.

This practise imposes undue hardship on rural carriers in removing loose coins from boxes and delays them on the service of their routes.

The postmaster, therefore, urgently requests that patrons of rural delivery provide themselves and keep on hand a supply of stamps consistent with and in advance of their needs. It is also very desirable that rural patrons place in their mail boxes small detachable cups of wood or tin in which to place coins, when necessary, in purchasing supplies of stamps.

trust mortgages. It is the custom of corporations to file mortgages for large sums, oftentimes without the payment of a cent of tax, and at a subsequent date to make advancements on the principal amount covered by the mortgage. It is almost impossible for the recording officers to get information as to the amounts of money advanced from time to time on these mortgages, and for this reason it is impossible for them to levy the tax which the law requires should be paid. By the amendment the corporations will be compelled to report these advancements from time to time and to pay the tax upon such advancements the same as the holder of any other mortgage would have to pay.

Provision also is made that the tax shall be collected from July 1, 1906, on what are known as prior advance mortgages—that is, mortgages issued prior to July 1, 1906—upon advances made after that date.

There are various other minor provisions of this bill the objects of which are to perfect the statute and make it a satisfactory and workable mortgage tax law.

How Indians Tan Deerskin.

The skin dressing of the Indians, both buffalo and deer skins, is generally very beautiful and soft. They stretch the skin either on a frame or on the ground, and after it has remained there for three or four days, with the brains spread over the fleshy side, they grain it with a sort of adz or chisel. After the process of graining, though the skin is apparently beautifully finished, it passes through another process—that of smoking. For this they hang the skin on a frame in a smoke proof house or tent. The fire is made at the bottom out of rotten wood, which produces a strong and peculiar smell. The fire must be smothered to make the smoke. The grained skins must be kept in the smoke for three or four days, and after this the skins will always remain the same, even after being wet, which does not belong to the dressed skins in civilized countries.—"Life Among the Indians."

Absence of Mind.

Many amusing anecdotes are told of Bishop Burnet's absence of mind, but few perhaps are more striking and have been less repeated than the following, which Lord Orford used to relate:

Burnet was once dining with the Duchess of Marlborough after the great duke's disgrace. In the course of conversation, speaking of Marlborough's great qualities, great services and great fall, Burnet compared the duke with Belisarius, the great Roman.

"But how in reason," exclaimed the duchess, "could so great a general be abandoned?"

"Ah, my lady, do you know what a cursed brimstone of a wife he had?"

The hearers, to the good Burnet's surprise, were confused and dumb struck with the force of the parallel he discovered in the cases of the Roman and the Englishman.—St. James' Gazette.

It is very important and in fact it is absolutely necessary to health that we give relief to the stomach promptly at the first signs of trouble—which are belching of gas, nausea, sour stomach, headache, irritability and nervousness. These are warnings that the stomach has been mistreated; it is doing too much work and it is demanding help from you. Too Much Collection.

A Scottish gentleman paying a visit to London was taken by his nephew to a service in St. Paul's cathedral. He had no acquaintance whatever with the liturgy of the Church of England. He picked up a prayer book and became very much interested, but as he turned over the leaves his face became clouded with a look of intense anxiety. He placed the prayer book carefully down, looked cautiously around, picked up his hat and crept stealthily to the door. His nephew followed him and said:

"Are you ill, uncle? What is the matter?"

The uncle replied: "No. But it is enough to make any man ill to see the number of collections made in this kirk!"

"Collections!" said the nephew, in surprise. "If there is any at all, there certainly won't be more than one."

"Well," said the uncle, "they should no' mark so many in the book. There's nothing but 'collect' and bits of prayer, then 'collect' and more prayers, and 'collect' again. And says I to mysel', 'If I bide here until all these collections are ta'en, I'll no' have a bawbee in my pocket!'"—London Tit-Bits.

A Woman's Back

Has many aches and pains caused by weaknesses and falling, or other displacement, of the pelvic organs. Other symptoms of female weakness are frequent headache, dizziness, imaginary specks or dark spots floating before the eyes, gnawing sensation in stomach, dragging or bearing down in lower abdominal or pelvic region, disagreeable drains from pelvic organs, faint spells with general weakness.

If any considerable number of the above symptoms are present there is no remedy that will give quicker relief or a more permanent cure than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has a record of over forty years of cures. It is the most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine known to medical science. It is made of the glyceric extracts of native medicinal roots found in our forests and contains not a drop of alcohol or harmful, or habit-forming drugs. Its ingredients are all printed on the bottle-wrapper and attested under oath as correct.

Every ingredient entering into "Favorite Prescription" has the written endorsement of the most eminent medical writers of all the several schools of practice—more valuable than any amount of non-professional testimonials—though the latter are not lacking, having been contributed voluntarily by grateful patients in numbers to exceed the endorsements given to any other medicine extant for the cure of woman's ills.

You cannot afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for this well proven remedy OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, even though the dealer may make a little more profit thereby. Your interest in regaining health is paramount to any selfish interest of his and it is an insult to your intelligence for him to try to palm off upon you a substitute. You know what you want and it is his business to supply the article called for.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original "Little Liver Pills" first put up by old Dr. Pierce over forty years ago, much imitated but never equaled. Little sugar-coated granules—easy to take as candy.

Recipe For Making Money.

First catch your capital, however small, or if homemade, such as from savings, so much the better. Place in a steady, secure position, where it will not be disturbed, and allow to stand. Skim off all that accrues without waste and with that at the proper season make a stiff paste of business, in which place your capital or as much of it as you can use with advantage. A little ripe judgment should be added. Season with hope and enterprise and stir briskly with a bunch of fresh energy. While your pie is cooking watch it carefully yourself and see that nothing goes wrong. Keep up a good fire until it begins to brown and don't take too much off the top for tasting until the whole is well cooked; then enjoy the result.—London Graphic.

The Cure.

Professor W. E. Grange, author of the "History of Primitive Love," alluded in the course of a lecture in Boston to the modern cynical view of love that prevails: "I remember once hearing a bricklayer and a plumber discuss love. 'I hold,' said the bricklayer, 'that if you are terribly in love the way to cure yourself is to run away.' The plumber shook his head and sneered. 'That will cure you,' he said, 'provided you run away with the girl.'"

If a cough once gets into your system it acts on every muscle and fibre of the body and makes you ache all over. It especially affects the intestines and makes you constipated, so in order to get rid of a cold thoroughly and without delay you should not take anything that will tend to constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts on the bowels and thereby drives the cold out of the system. It contains no opiates—it is pleasant to take and is highly recommended for children. Sold by all druggists.

The Spanish Royal Standard.

The Spanish royal standard is most complicated. The red and yellow of the Spanish flag is said to be derived from this occurrence: In 1378 Charles the Bold dipped his fingers in the blood of Geoffrey, count of Barcelona, and drew them down the count's golden shield in token of his appreciation of the latter's bravery. The shield, so marked, became the arms of Barcelona, which became part of Aragon, and its arms were taken by that kingdom. Now to the royal standard: In the first quarter or upper left hand part of the flag are the arms of Leon and Castile, the lion and the castle. The second quarter is taken up one-half by the arms of Aragon, one-half by the arms of Sicily. The upper third of the third quarter—directly under the first—shows the Austrian colors. The lower two-thirds is divided between the flag of Burgundy and the black lion of Flanders. The upper third of the fourth quarter shows the checkers, another Burgundian device, while the lower two-thirds is shared by the red eagle of Antwerp and the golden lion of Brabant, and on the top of all this are two shields, one showing the Portuguese arms, the other the French fleur-de-lis. Considerable of a flag that.

Revival Services a Success.

Fulton has been enjoying one of its greatest revivals at the First Methodist church, under the auspices of the First and State street churches. Sunday was the closing day and in many respects the greatest day of all. At the Jubilee service in the afternoon the people were given an opportunity to judge of the work which had been accomplished. More than three hundred of the converts were present and formed a line which reached entirely around the church and Sunday school rooms and nearly half way around again. A large proportion of the number were adult men and women. Young men were numerous in the line while some were more than seventy years of age. Those who were present at this service will never forget the sight. In the evening Mr. Hart preached his final sermon. When the invitation was given thirty-six came to the altar in confession of sin. Altogether more than four hundred have been converted or reclaimed in the meetings. The services have been a great success from every standpoint. The attendance has been even larger than during the Elliot meetings when all the churches were united in the work. All the churches in the city will receive additions as a result of the work.

During the day offerings were taken for the remuneration of the evangelists and $667 were received. Messrs. Hart and Magann leave the city with the respect and love of all who have been associated with them. Mr. Hart is a fearless preacher and a man of tremendous earnestness. No harder working evangelist can be found in the country. The evangelists have gone to Newcastle, Ind., where Mr. Magann opened a new series of services on Sunday.

Mead Calls on Judge Stowell.

[OSWEGO PALLADIUM, WEDNESDAY.]

The fact that former Surrogate S. B Mead, of Fulton, called upon and held a two hours conference with County Judge Stowell at the latter's chambers at the County Clerk's building Monday afternoon, is causing no end of comment in political circles. Judge Stowell, when asked regarding the conference, smiled blandly and said: "Really, I cannot tell you what Mr Mead and I talked about.',

If one can believe all the stories which are floating about, this meeting between the leader of the Republican organization forces and the leader of the Square Dealers is of the utmost importance. The story is that Judge Stowell has wanted to bring about a meeting between himself and Mr. Mead for some time, feeling assured that if he could do so that a peace pact could be arranged which would be advantageous to both. And it is said that the result of the meeting Monday was all that Judge Stowell could desire, and that Mr. Mead was highly pleased with the outcome.

Mr. Mead has long aspired to a place on the Supreme Court bench. Judge Stowell has known of this ambition and as the Constitution of the State prevents Judges from occupying the bench after they are seventy years old and as Judge Stowell will have reached that age by January 1st next, he is not eligible to become a candidate for the vacancy which will be caused by the retirement of Justice Scripture in 1909. Therefor, it is said that Judge Stowell decided, that if he could not have the place, that he would play politics and offer it as a bait to bring Mead back into the fold and secure the assistance of himself and friends in the fight Judge Stowell is making to have District Attorney Baker succeed him as County Judge and also support for himself should he decide to become a candidate for Member of Congress.

The rumors around the County Clerk's building are that Mr. Mead has swallowed the bait, that he has promised to "be good." But there is considerable speculation as to how he is going to drop the candidacy of Irving G. Hubbs, of Pulaski, for County Judge, who, it is said, he had months ago pledged to support. In fact, it was said, it was Mead who got Hubbs to go into the race in the first place.

The two held a conference in the Surrogate's office Monday afternoon, after Mead had had his talk with Judge Stowell. From the expression on Hubb's face he didn't at all relish what Mead had been saying to him.

Mead's strength in Fulton, it is said, lies in the support and backing he receives from Mayor Quirk and his friends Mayor Quirk, it is said, has been out openly advocating the candidacy of Baker for County Judge. If Mead can not control Quirk it is easy to see how he can excuse himself to Mr. Hubbs.

One of the things in connection with this conference is the position in which Thomas D Lewis, who has been the organization leader in Fulton, will be placed.

The gossip is that Mead is to be taken into the councils of the of the organization and is to be recognized as the leader in Fulton. Mead and Lewis have a personal as well as political feeling and it is said Mead would have rather had Lewis eliminated entirely from the understanding, but that he has agreed that when the time comes for the Senatorship to come to Oswego county that Lewis can have it; but that the latter must work in the ranks and not attempt to assume the leadership in any way.

The Syracuse Herald, on Sunday, in one of its illuminating discourses on Oswego county political conditions, quotes Mr. Mead as having said on Saturday: "The conversation which has been referred to had no particular significance. I went to Judge Stowell's office on business and he expressed a desire for harmony in a discussion of politics that followed. I have been for harmony for some time. Were Judge Stowell able to get all that he wants, I have no doubt that we would have harmony. Nothing was said as to my candidacy for any office and nothing was said of Judge Stowell's ambition. The candidates for County Judge were discussed, and before the talk on that subject had ended, I made it plain to Judge Stowell that I am for Irving G. Hubbs."

The Oswego Palladium of Saturday said regarding this same harmony conference:—"I don't pretend to be the boss of the Square Dealers, I don't want to be and I have entered into no deal to deliver that faction to the Republican machine," said former Surrogate S. B Mead today when questioned regarding the political conference which he and Judge Stowell had on Monday afternoon. "I had a talk with Judge Stowell Monday," said Mr. Mead, "and incidentally politics came up in our discussion. The Judge stated that he would like to see a harmonious condition of affairs in the Republican party of Oswego county, and I expressed the same desire. The situation was discussed in a general way and at the conclusion of our talk my impression was that if the machine got what they wanted they would be glad to harmonize and I think I left the impression with Judge Stowell that if we got what we wanted we would be glad to harmonize. With that result you can see how close we are to peace. No offer of support as a candidate for Supreme Court Judge was made to me and I will enter into no deal of this nature. There was some talk about the County Judgeship and I told Judge Stowell that if Irving G. Hubbs, of Pulaski, was a candidate for the office I would support him. That's about all there was to the harmony conference."

Changed His Taste.

The Empress Eugenie, whom Napoleon III. chose to share his throne, had a ready wit, which, although it never veiled a sneer, often confused those on whom it was directed. The late Dr. T. W. Evans tells in his reminiscences the story of a distinguished senator, who, on being asked what he thought of the speech in which Napoleon had declared his marriage intention to the deputies, replied:

"A fine speech—excellent! But I prefer the sauce to the fish," meaning that Napoleon's words were better than his choosing of a bride.

Some weeks later, at a dinner given at the Tuileries, this senator was seated next to the empress, who, observing that after having been helped to the turbot he declined the sauce, said to him, smiling roguishly:

"Monsieur, I thought it was the sauce you liked and not the fish."

With rare presence of mind the senator hesitated but a moment.

"A mistake, madam," he said, "for which I am now trying to make amends."

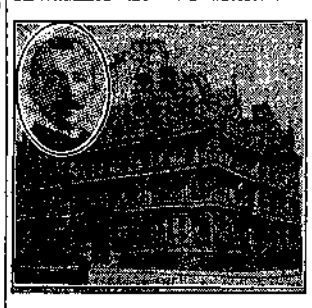
COUNT SZECHENYI AND HIS BRIDE



Young Hungarian Aristocrat Who Won the Heart of a Vanderbilt Heiress—Her Fortune About $12,000,000.

The Count, Whose Name Sounds Like a Sneeze, Is a Rich Man Himself—His Castle.

WHEN the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecelie brought to this country the relatives of Count Laszlo Szechenyi for his marriage to Miss Gladys Vanderbilt on Jan. 27 the noble ship bore a heavy freight in the way of titled aristocrats. The count's father is dead. He was Count Emerich Szechenyi, was long ambassador of Austria-Hungary at Berlin and was held in high regard by Emperor Francis Joseph. But the groom has plenty of relatives living, and the party of them which came over for the wedding on the Cecelie included his eldest brother, Count Denes Szechenyi, newly appointed minister to Denmark, and the Countess Szechenyi, Count Anton Sigray, best man; Count Stefan Szechenyi, Count Paul Esterhazy, Count Stephan Przedzieky and other relatives and friends. The Szechenyi house is quite an ancient one, and its members pride themselves very much on the fact. Some of Count Laszlo's kin have intimated that he was very condescending in reaching down from the heights of his ancient lineage to take up and unite with him in the bond of wedlock an untitled American girl, even though she be a Vanderbilt and possessor in her own right of a fortune of about $12,000,000. It has even been said that his bride would be received in court circles in Vienna only as a morganatic wife because of a lack of quarterings in the Vanderbilt coat of arms, but this has been as emphatically denied.

However, the claim has been made that when it comes to a showdown as to ancestry the bride in this latest international match is really of bluer blood than the groom. Her mother before she married the late Cornelius Vanderbilt was Alice Claypoole Gwynne. Mrs. Vanderbilt's grandmother on her father's side was Alice Anne Claypoole, daughter of Captain Abraham George Claypoole of the Continental army. He was a great-grandson of the James Claypoole who was a close friend of William Penn, treasurer of the Free Society of Traders of Pennsylvania and founder of the Claypoole family in this country. This Claypoole was a son of Sir John Claypoole, follower of Cromwell, by whom he was knighted. Carrying the line further back, various titled individuals are reached, some of them famous in English history, until in the thirteenth century Princess Elizabeth Plantagenet, daughter of King Edward I. of England and Eleanor of Castile, is met.

At this point the genealogical expert, Charles H. Browning, author of "Americans of Royal Descent," takes the ancestral line away from England right over into the country of the Szechenyis and, following it up through Bavarian and Swabian dukes and princes, comes to Bela, the first king of the Huns, from whom he says the rich and beautiful bride of Count Laszlo is twenty-sixth in descent. He also says that she is descended from Otto the Great, emperor of Germany, 936-973, who, according to Gibbon, defeated the Huns, including the Magyar tribe of the Szechenyis. Otto kept the Huns in subjection and organized them into a petty tributary nation, so that three generations later they enjoyed their first real king, Bela, who began his reign in 1061 A. D. There is a tradition that it was Bela who civilized and Christianized the wild ancestors of

THE COUNT AND THE NEW YORK HOME OF THE BRIDE.

Count Laszlo. At any rate, according to this genealogy, the bride's forbears were kings of Hungary when the groom's ancestors were only men-at-arms.

Coming down to more recent times, it appears that in the matter of titles, at least, the groom's family has somewhat the best of it. The men of the Szechenyi family have borne the title of count for at least 300 years. That is a little longer ago than the time when Cromwell knighted old John Claypoole. Among the most celebrated of the ancestors of Count Laszlo was Count Nicholas Szechenyi, companion in arms of the famous Hungarian general Zrinyi, who in the sixteenth century stood like a battlement between the encroachments of the Turks on the south and the kingdoms of western Europe. It was a clerical member of the Szechenyi family, an archbishop, who was the mediator in bringing about the peace between Emperor Ferdinand and Rokoczy by which the latter was recognized as the legitimate Prince of Transylvania. It was Count Laszlo's great-uncle, Istvan (Stephen) Szechenyi, who was prominent in Kossuth's time as patriot, statesman and philanthropist and who is called Istvan the Great. He founded the famous Hungarian Institution For Intellectual Research, recognized as the most influential society of its kind in Europe, and is sometimes called the "greatest Hungarian."

At the present time, as in the past, the Szechenyis are extensive landowners. It has been estimated that Count Laszlo is worth at the least $5,000,000, while in time he will come into possession of a still greater estate. He has an income of something like $60,000 and is reputed to be anything but a spendthrift. His economical ideas were illustrated in the cable dispatch

he sent his relatives in Hungary announcing his engagement to Miss Vanderbilt and which was said to have contained but two words, "Laszlo-Gladys," and to have cost him 50 cents. His principal residence is the castle of Ormezo, situated amid wild and romantic scenery. While it may not compare in elegance with The Breakers at Newport or the splendid Vanderbilt town house at Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street, New York, the scene of the nuptials, it will be likely to possess special fascination for the young bride by reason of its romantic surroundings and historic associations.

The count, who is twenty-eight and rather dashing in appearance, fought a duel about three years ago with Aurel Batonyi, who married Mrs. Burke-Roche and has recently been sued by her for divorce. The count's life at his castle of Ormezo is said to have been a simple and sedate one, and it is predicted he will prove a loyal and devoted husband, thus doing something toward counteracting the prevailing prejudice against international marriages. The castle of Ormezo was erected in the fifteenth century and rises from the top of a crag in the mountainous county of Zempler, a ten hours' trip from the Hungarian capital. The count is a hereditary member of the Hungarian parliament and has the right to wear as part of his court uniform as an imperial chamberlain a golden key or tassel at the back of his coat. Little things like this often count with a romantic girl of twenty-one, the age which the bride reached last summer, when she came into her fortune.

It was a charity worker of New York who, in speaking of the Szechenyi-Vanderbilt nuptials, said:

"When this good and charming girl goes to Hungary as the Countess Szechenyi I know of certain hospital wards where she will be missed."

He paused and smiled.

"But let me tell you," he said, "of an incident that befell Miss Vanderbilt last year.

"There was a children's hospital which she visited regularly, bringing fruit and flowers to the little patients, and in a certain ward a boy was pointed out to her one day as a very bad customer.

"'Oh, he is incorrigible,' sighed the nurse.

"Miss Vanderbilt talked awhile with the little chap, and when she rose to go she said:

"'See here, I have heard bad reports about you. Now, I want you to promise me to be good. If you are good for a whole week I'll give you a dollar when I come again next Thursday.'

"The boy promised to try to be good. This promise, though, he did not keep. On her next visit Miss Vanderbilt, going to his cot, said:

"'I shall not ask the nurses how you have behaved this last week. I want you to tell me yourself. Now, what do you think—do you deserve that dollar I promised you or not?'

"The boy regarded Miss Vanderbilt with a troubled frown; then he said in a low voice:

"'Gimme a nickel.'"

One should pronounce the name Szechenyi as if it were spelled "Say-chainyer." It has been suggested that it is easier to pronounce when accompanied with a sneeze.

'TWAS EVER THUS.

The Patriot in January, 1908, is regaling its readers with facts presented Times readers in July, 1907, regarding the conduct of affairs in the County Treasurer's office. The last edition of the Patriot also urges the appointment of a purchasing agent for Oswego County. The Times six months ago urged that the same measures be adopted. Several months ago the Times urged that changes in the County Treasurer's and the Surrogate's offices be made but the Patriot did not concur. Last week's Patriot says:

"The work of renovating the county clerk's building—both floors—will continue until it is completed in the most thorough manner. Then we shall have harmony—and, not until then. Messrs. Moore and Miller are good as a start. Now watch the finish."

Editor Cornell's statement that it was well to remove Messrs. Moore and Mead must be a staggerer for those ex-officials, especially for Mr. Mead, who has befriended the Patriot on every occasion and who has aided it many times. Of course all who know the make-up of the Patriot's editor expected that he would turn against Mr. Mead as soon as he was shorn of office and ability to give surrogate's court notices to the Patriot, but who thought his ingratitude would be manifested so soon?

While everything is moving harmoniously toward a united party in the Republican convention, the troubles of the Democrates are multiplying as the date of their convention approaches. The opponents of William J. Bryan are seriously considering the advisability of making a formal appeal to the Peerless Leader to withdraw from the race, as they say it is obvious that while he may control the convention he can not win at the polls and that he ought to show sufficent patriotism to eliminate himself, to stand aside in favor of a candidate who can win. It seems to be the hope of the anti-Bryan Democrats that they can win with Governor Johnson of Minnesota, but the Bryanites are convinced that no Democrat could poll as many votes as Mr. Bryan. The prospects are all bright for a serious division in the party accompanied by all the rancour and anger which the Democracy always injects into a political contest.

Sensible people all over the country will pay no attention to the sensational predictions of trouble with Japan which are appearing in the columns of certain newspapers. The President has given to the public, through the newspapers, the assurance that all is going well with all the negotiations between the United States and Japan, and the people can well afford to take the word of the President as against that of the yellow journals.

It is somewhat significant that the two Democratic newspapers in Washington are bending their every energy to defeat the nomination of Secretary Taft. They appreciate keenly that he would poll more Democratic votes than any other Republican and that against him Bryan's chances would be hopeless.

The Republican party has lost a distinguished member in the death of Charles Emory Smith of Philadelphia, who was Minister to Russia and then Postmaster General under President McKinley.

For the benefit of tax paying readers, The Times will publish the official proceedings of the Common Council after each meeting, having made arrangements with The Observer to furnish the same.

The friends of William Loeb, Jr., Secretary to the President, have secured control of one of the Washington City railway lines, and when Mr. Loeb leaves the president it will be to become President of this road.

Secretary Cortelyou is taking his own time about replying to the inquiries of the Senate, but when he does reply he will furnish some highly comprehensive and interesting information.

Shrievalty Contest.

Mr. Charles W. Taft of Williamstown, candidate for the nomination for sheriff on the Republican ticket, was in this city on Monday calling upon friends and looking up his political possibilities for the office.

The Sandy Creek News of this week comes out boldly for D. O. Whitney of Altmar for the office and it is a well-known fact that M. H. Tooley, Under Sheriff Dennis and Captain Dempsey are serious candidates for the office, but it was left for the Herald of Sunday to discover that Mayor Quirk's friends were booming him for Sheriff.

The race gives promise of being a merry and exciting one before the county convention.

COUNTY TREASURER MATTER.

The examinations made by the two experts from the Comptroller's office, of the books in the County Treasurer's office, Oswego, confirm the statements made by The Times last summer. The experts have made partial reports to Comptroller Glynn from time to time and as the result of such reports Mr. Glynn's public statement says in part:

"In the County of Oswego evidence was obtained by the examiners which would have amply justified the removal of the County Treasurer whose term of office expired December 31, 1907. It was found that the County Treasurer had used the bank account of the County practically as if it were his own individual property; that he paid his own personal accounts; bills of estates of which he was an executor or administrator, and occasionally the bills of friends or acquaintances directly from the County funds, sometimes by check and sometimes by taking the cash from the drawer. During a period of two and a half years over one hundred checks appear to have been drawn upon County funds in payment of private accounts of the Treasurer. It also appears that this official loaned the County funds to various individuals, usually in small amounts, and improperly paid many accounts without the audit of the Board of Supervisors. The system of book keeping in Oswego County is crude and antiquated, there being little to commend and much to criticise.

"The examination has not thus far shown that the County Treasurer has allowed the County to suffer any actual loss (except interest) through his acts, the illegal withdrawals apparently having been made good, and as removal proceedings would scarcely have been completed before the expiration of his term of office, such proceedings were deemed unnecessary."

Meeting Will Be Held.

This Wednesday evening the Board of Public Works will hold a meeting in the City Hall to which the proprietors of the several hotels and play houses last week condemned by the Board of Health will be invited and requested to show cause why an order should not be issued by the Board for the suppression and the removal of the conditions which exist and which the Board consider unsafe. The action of the Board has aroused considerable feeling.

Most of our rains come straight down, but some of them come sideways.

Minetto and Vicinity.

The Epworth League will hold its regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Modry, Wednesday evening, Jan. 29.

Mrs. Melissa Sparks of Fulton visited friends here Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Doolittle spent Sunday in Scriba, the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Baker.

Mrs. G. N. Beadle, who has been spending two weeks in Greene, N. Y., returned home Saturday.

Mr. Frank Moore of Minnesota was in town last week.

Mr. Youmans, an aged soldier, was taken to the Soldiers' Home at Bath last week. Mrs. Youmans will make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Anna Kerfien.

Mrs. Emmett Wood of Central Square is visiting her brother, Mr. Warren S. Gardner.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Shutts entertained the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Shutts of Hannibal, over Sunday.

Miss Neva Hirt has been on the sick list.

The L. A. S. will meet Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 28, at the home of Mrs. Melvin Wells.

Mrs. Miranda Bunker, who has been with relatives in Connecticut for nearly two months, has returned home.

Mr. Oscar Stewart of Watertown was the guest of his parents over Sunday.

The Junior League held a social at the chapel last Friday evening.

Mr. Asa Rowlison was called to Vermillion Saturday by the death of his father, Mr. Clinton Rowlison, who has been ill for some time. The funeral was held Monday at eleven o'clock.

Mrs. B. D. Snyder is entertaining friends from St. Lawrence county.

Mr. N. W. Gardner of Mexico is visiting his son, Warren S. Gardner.

Maintaining His Argument.

One night at Brooks' when Coke was present Fox, in allusion to something that had been said, made a very disparaging remark about government powder. Adam, attorney general to the Prince of Wales, who heard it, considered it a personal reflection and sent Fox a challenge. At the time appointed Fox went out and took his station, standing full face to his adversary. Fitzgerald pointed out to him that he ought to stand sideways. "What does it matter?" protested Fox. "I am as thick one way as the other!" The signal to fire was given. Adam fired, but Fox did not. His seconds, greatly excited, told him that he must fire. "I'll be — if I do!" said Fox. "I have no quarrel." Whereupon the two adversaries advanced to shake hands. "Adam," said Fox complacently, "you'd have killed me if it hadn't been for the badness of government powder."—London Bellman.

Facing a Waterspout.

What it means to encounter a waterspout in the south seas is described by Beatrice Grimshaw: "First of all, a black trunk, like an elephant's, began to feel blindly about in midair, hanging from a cloud. It came nearer and nearer with uncanny speed, drawing up to itself as it came a colossal cone of turbulent sea until the two joined together in an enormous black pillar some quarter of a mile broad at the base and probably a good thousand feet high, uniting as it did the clouds and the sea below. Across the darkening sea, against the threatening copper crimson sunset, came this gigantic horror, waltzing over troughs of torn up water in a veritable dance of death, like something blind, but mad and cruel, trying to find and shatter our fragile little ship."

A Gladstone Bull.

Mr. Gladstone dearly loved a joke, even at his own expense, and he possessed considerable mimetic powers. He was once guilty of an amusing bull in a debate on the question of disestablishment. Dilating on the hold held on the affections of the people by the Church of England, he said: "When an Englishman wants to get married, to whom does he go? To the parish priest. When he wants his child baptized, to whom does he go? To the parish priest. When he wants to get buried, to whom does he go?"

The house answered with a roar of laughter, in which Mr. Gladstone himself joined, adding, "As I was contrasting the English church with the Irish, a bull is perhaps excusable."

The Sausage.

The sausage dates back to the year 807. It has been asserted that the Greeks in the days of Homer manufactured sausages, but this prehistoric mixture had nothing in common with our modern product. The ancient so called sausage was composed of the same materials which enter into the makeup of the boudin of the French market and the blood pudding of the French Canadian. The ancient sausage was enveloped in the stomachs of goats. It was not until the tenth century that sausage made of hashed pork became known. It was in or near the year 1500 that, thanks to the introduction into Germany of cinnamon and saffron, the sausages of Frankfort and Strassburg acquired a universal reputation.

WHERE WAS COUNTY COMMITTEE?

Boom Launched for W. J. Halleran of Fulton for Sheriff on the Democratic Ticket.

The Oswego Palladium of Monday contained the following bit of political information which has caused much comment in Democratic circles throughout this city. The members of the Democratic County Committee, it is stated on good authority, were conspicuous by their absence from this "harmonious" (?) Halloran meeting, and the Democratic rank and file are asking what the primaries are for any way.

The Palladium says:

A boom for former Supervisor William J. Halloran of Fulton, as the next Democratic candidate for sheriff, was formally launched at a conference of prominent Democrats, held at the Hamilton House in this city on Saturday afternoon. Among those present, in addition to Mr. Halleron, were Charles N. Bulger, F. E. Cullen, T. L. McKay; Joseph H. Gill, John R. Pidgeon, F. R. Bough and James Lynch, Oswego; John O'Brien, Phoenix; Patrick O'Brien, Daniel Brannan and Crahan, Fulton; ex-Supervisor Palmer, Granby, and Dr. Green, Mexico.

The meeting was called to order with Mr. O'Brien of Phoenix as chairman. He announced that the gathering was for the purpose of endorsing Mr. Halleran's candidacy for sheriff and for the further purpose of harmonizing the Democratic factions in the city and county.

Charles N. Bulger was one of the first speakers and he expressed himself as heartily in favor of Mr. Halleran as a shrievalty candidate. He also made a strong plea for peace and harmony in the party ranks.

Messrs. Cullen and Pidgeon also made short speeches, expressing the same wish for harmony under certain conditions. Neither one could pledge himself to support Mr. Halleran until they had conferred with the organization which they represented.

Messrs. Culkin and Pidgeon then left the meeting, after which a resolution was adopted endorsing Mr. Halleran's candidacy and pledging support to him, provided that when the time came for nominating a candidate arrives that it will be to the best interests of the Democracy to name him.

They Were Good Eaters.

One day Dr. Norman McLeod, who was a large and healthy man, and one of his burly elders went to pay a visit to a certain Mrs. MacLaren of the congregation who lived over the Scotch hills. She was a frugal woman, but since she knew that a call from these two meant that they would stay to supper, too, she determined that they should have the best in the house. So she piled the table with jellies and jam and preserves and shortbread and all the delicacies of the season, and, the journey having been long, they partook unsparingly, and after the meal the elder said to her:

"Mrs. MacLaren, were you at the kirk Sunday?"

"Oh, aye," she said, "I was."

"And what did you think of the treatment of the miracle?" The sermon had been on the loaves and fishes.

"I thought it was good," said Mrs. MacLaren.

"And what is your idea on the subject, Mrs. MacLaren?" persisted the minister.

"Losh," said their hostess suddenly, "I'm thinkin' that if you and the elder had bin in the congregation there wadna' bin twelve baskets of fragments for the disciples to gather up!"

Some Theatrical Jokes.

In a performance of "The Lady of the Lake" the actor who took the part of Roderick Dhu was known to be in pecuniary difficulties. When Roderick gave the line, "I am Roderick Dhu," Fitzjames responded, "Yes, and your rent's due too." On the production of a piece called "The Spy" the early acts showed that it was going to prove a failure. So when at a certain point a character had to rush on and shout, "Five hundred pounds for the spy!" the author-actor, who was concealed behind a rock, arose and cried, "It's yours—copyright, manuscript and parts!" That was the end of the performance.

When eating takes place on the stage, the temptations to play tricks with the food are naturally great. In "Henry V." the leek which that inimitable braggart Pistol has to eat is usually made from an apple. But on one occasion at Sadler's Wells the Fluellen of the evening gave him a real onion, and he had no choice but to struggle through it, though the tears coursed down his fat cheeks.—Cornhill Magazine.

Saved His Goldfish.

When a Bavarian peasant treats himself to a new hat, he does not throw the old hat away. He just puts the new hat on top of the old one. The other day an amusing scene was witnessed at the Munich railway station. A peasant who had bought a new hat and a bowl containing several goldfish found himself hustled by the crowd surging at the entrance to one of the platforms. In the crush the bowl was broken, and the fish fell out. For a moment the peasant knew not what to do. Suddenly he made up his mind. He snatched his two hats from his head, and, picking up the lively fish, he put them inside the old hat, which he then filled with water at the nearest water tap. Carrying the improvised aquarium, the ingenious peasant entered his train smilingly, but very carefully.—Munich Cor. London Globe.

He Deserved the Watch.

A little boy who had been promised a watch in a too indefinite future showed a tendency to revert to the subject with a frequency which finally overcame the patience of his irate father. "If you say 'watch' again in my presence I'll thrash you!" was the ultimatum. Next morning at prayers, when each member of the family offered a Bible verse, the boy demurely gave his as he fired his parent with his eye and repeated, "What I say unto you I say unto all, Watch!"

CHAPTER VIII.

AFTER Miss Renwyck had retired Richard lighted a cigarette and sat alone on the veranda, turning over in his mind the events of his first crowded day and his plans for the future campaign. Mr. Michael Corrigan troubled him. This little fat man was nobody's fool, and no one could tell what sort of mischief was being hatched behind those piercing eyes, which, if they continued to twinkle about the Renwyck place, would shortly discover many things. Richard sighed and flicked the stump of his cigarette away. He rose and was about to pass into the house when he was met in the doorway by Mr. Renwyck.

"Croyland," said his host impressively, "there is a little matter which I should like to talk over with you, and I have purposely waited until the ladies retired."

Richard fancied there was a certain grimness in Mr. Renwyck's tone and jumped to a swift conclusion. He was found out. He wished to avoid a scene if possible, but from what his father had told him of Mr. Renwyck's temper he could gather little hope.

"Certainly," he answered evenly, rather relieved that the expected break was coming. "Shall we sit here on the porch?"

"No," said the old gentleman; "I don't care to be overheard by any of the servants. If you don't mind walking we'll move away from the house."

Richard was convinced. He was sure that when Jacob Renwyck expressed a candid opinion of any one—especially an impostor—he would find it difficult to speak in whispers. It was just as well, on the whole, and Richard preferred to receive his malediction out of earshot of his ladylove. He rose with alacrity, therefore, and followed his host, who led the way across the lawn toward a little observatory or pleasure house on the crest of a bluff overlooking the moonlit Hudson.

At another time the young man might have enjoyed the view of the great calm river sweeping past the shadowy hills on the farther side, but under the circumstances the scene did not appeal to him. There were other thoughts which occupied his mind. Mr. Renwyck walked with his hands clasped behind him, and Richard watched his every move. Physically the Texan was more than a match for Mr. Renwyck, but the latter had probably armed himself for the occasion, a trifling precaution which would not have escaped the southerner. And Richard then and there resolved never again to put on a pair of trousers that had no pistol pocket in them. What did those eastern tailors know about the requirements of a gentleman anyway? But then it flashed into his mind that Mr. Renwyck was probably no better provided than he in that particular—reassuring thought!

Suddenly Mr. Renwyck unclasped his hands and transferred one of them to his breast pocket. Richard caught sight of a bulging projection—it was there then!

He was off the point of seizing his host's wrist when the latter brought forth a brown covered case.

"Have a cigar," he said, with crafty cordiality, and Richard accepted, with his gaze still concentrated on Mr. Renwyck's hands.

"Light?"

"Thank you, no," the Texan answered. "I'll smoke it dry for awhile, if you don't mind."

The trick was an old one. He had seen it worked along the Rio Grande. A Mexican had presented a cheroot to a cow puncher, who, after lighting it, found himself looking into the muzzle of an overgrown Colt's—and a Texan learns to profit by observation as well as experience.

Mr. Renwyck now invited his guest to a seat beside him on a smooth flat stone on the edge of the cliff. Richard accepted, but cautiously slid his foot to a point behind Mr. Renwyck's leg, with the aim of overturning his enemy backward at the first sign of treachery.

"Croyland," he began abruptly, "I've taken a fancy to you somehow, and I'm going to prove it by putting you on the inside of a little business deal."

"A business deal?" gasped Richard in unfeigned surprise.

"Yes," nodded the old gentleman, puffing thoughtfully at his cigar. "Of course I don't know how you are fixed financially, nor have I any intention of asking impertinent questions, but if you care to come with me in a transaction in which I myself have invested largely I can put you in the way of making quite a snug little sum."

Richard withdrew his foot from behind Mr. Renwyck's leg and in the darkness strove to kick himself. Conscience had made of him not exactly a coward, but a careful skater on thin ice.

"That's very clever of you, indeed," he answered, lighting his perfecto and casing out across the Hudson. "Is it what you call—er—a flier?"

"Well, no," said the old financier. "It's more than that. It's a dead certainty, and I'm on the inside. Let me explain. To begin with, it is a deep water harbor enterprise in the state of Texas."

"A local company has been organized and styles itself the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company." And Richard recognized the company with a thrill of excitement. "They're going to get an appropriation from the legislature for making a deep water harbor at Matagorda City. They own all the land in the vicinity and the right of way for a branch line to connect with the railroad systems of Texas at Houston. Now, this scheme, all else being equal, would be a sweet, juicy plum for its promoters. But things are not all equal. I have learned its details, and I propose to smash it."

He spoke with a savage emphasis, which revealed his hatred and his determination. If hell has no fury like a woman scorned, a friend turned enemy is almost as venomous.

"How are you going to do it?" asked Richard, with growing anxiety.

"There chances to be a rival company in the field, my boy, backed by money—influence—pull. In fact, I organized it to make a deep water harbor at Longmatt, on San Antonio bay. I rather think the legislative appropriation will go there."

"And is Longmatt better adapted for a deep water harbor than Matagorda City?"

"Much better."

"Why?"

"Because I own all the land at Longmatt, and for various reasons that—er—do credit to its business acumen the committee on railroads in the legislature agrees with me."

"Which means," suggested Richard, "that the legislature is doing business at the same old stand."

Mr. Renwyck laughed.

"That sounds very American for a foreigner, but suppose we put it a little more delicately. The legislature through this committee can be persuaded."

"And the other company does not know this?"

"Not a whisper of it."

"But won't it find out from the legislature?"

"It won't. I am certain of those Texas statesmen. They have been—fixed."

"But I thought"— began Richard, then stopped suddenly, remembering that he was not supposed to be up in American railroading affairs.

"Well?"

—"that such matters required much time—red tape—and all that sort of thing, you know."

"Not a bit of it," answered the old gentleman, rubbing his hands in anticipated pleasure. "Now, listen. I have devised this opposition scheme myself and know what I'm talking about. In just two weeks from now the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company's bill for a deep water harbor at Matagorda City will be introduced in the legislature with a great flourish of trumpets and referred to the railroad committee—my committee, that is. At the same time a small and unostentatious little bill substituting Longmatt for Matagorda City will also be quietly slipped in by some of my agents. No one knows me in this connection at all, and of course you will respect my confidence?"

"Certainly."

"Well, this bill will be referred and forgotten by everybody until the last minute, when the original bill will be amended, and the large appropriation will go to Longmatt, too near the end of the session for any change. The stockholders of the opposite company are so certain of success that their first mortgage bonds have been issued, quietly taken up among themselves and are rising in value every day. But wait. When the Longmatt scheme is assured the bonds of the company won't be worth a cent. I shall buy their right of way to Houston for a song, and—well, the state of Texas will be greatly benefited, while the other fellows pay"—

"Pay Texas?" asked Richard innocently.

"Pay for the fiddler, my boy—that is, I," laughed Mr. Renwyck complacently. The old gentleman coolly flicked the ash from his cigar, turned and looked smilingly at his young auditor in assured triumph.

"The old man's name is Bill Williams."

Richard smoked in silence for a time, then presently said, with affected carelessness:

"Mr. Renwyck, what you say is no doubt based on sound judgment and business and—er—legislative experience; yet, on the other hand, it strikes me that you are taking rather a heavy risk for the sake of mere money."

"Ah," cried the old financier, with a snap of his heavy jaw, "now you've struck it! And I don't mind telling you the real reason. It isn't the money hang the money! I'm doing this to get even with one man—one man who represents the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company, just as I represent the Longmatt Development and Construction company. He isn't a friend of mine—at least no longer—and, by George, I've got him! And, what's more, I'm going to squeeze him till his body is as dry as the state of Texas! I think you told me that you knew his son. The old man's name is Bill Williams."

Richard's brain was in a whirl. The Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company was his father's pet, the darling of his heart. He had worked over it, slaved over it and owned the controlling interest, in which he had invested an enormous sum. If what Mr. Renwyck said was true the coming crash would overwhelm his father completely. Not only had that gentleman invested his own money in the company, but he had induced his friends to join with him, and well Richard knew that his father would feel responsible for their loss. Again, the young man was not the kind of man who could stand meekly by and see his dear old dad bested by an enemy. With a mental gasp he realized that he stood in possession of information by which he could turn the tables on Jacob Renwyck and watch Bill Williams do the squeezing.

"Jerusalem, how dad will laugh!" he mused, then bit his tongue at a sudden thought which came to him.

He could not tell his father!

To pose as an English nobleman for the sake of a joke or even to win a girl was one thing; to receive a man's confidence in that capacity and by means of it detach him from the major portion of his fortune was quite another. Richard's mind was made up instantly. A confession of his deceit would cause a scene beyond doubt, and, moreover, his hope of winning Miss Harriet would fade in the general wreck, but even with this depressing fact in view he could not for an instant bring himself to be branded as a swindler and a thief.

"Mr. Renwyck," he began, but the daring speculator once more checked the good intention.

"Now, my dear Croyland," he begged, "I don't want you to go into this thing prematurely. Sleep on it. Think it over tomorrow, and we'll talk about it again in the evening. I'm going to town in the morning to attend a quiet meeting of the new company's stockholders. I will then be in a position to show you even more clearly where we stand. Let's go to bed." He linked his arm through Richard's and started across the grass. "By the way, I have a new team of horses coming out tomorrow on trial. I should like to get your opinion of them before I buy."

The light of dawn found Richard still staring at the ceiling and wondering how he could get out of the tangle. No longer was he justified in concealing his identity on any pretext. He must confess to Mr. Renwyck. But how could he do that when everything was progressing so favorably, when he was making so good an impression both on Mr. Renwyck and, as he hoped, his daughter? How could he throw away his opportunity there? On the other hand, how could he see his dad walk blindly into the mouths of a set of New York sharks? Over and over he turned the questions till his brain grew addled and his head was aching viciously. One of two things he must do. But which? What good would a confession do anyway? To tell his father afterward would not make him less culpable. He turned and twisted in his bed, but found no solution of the problem. The questions bit each other like wild express trains on a single track, and the solitary engineer had no earthly chance to jump.

"Now, it's this way," he murmured to his rumpled pillow—"when an irresistible force meets an immovable body—heavens! I wish we'd given those blasted Englishmen a bigger licking than we did in '76!"

The Count Too Touching.

In the long corridor of an uptown hotel they tell of a certain foreigner who until recently held court there of evenings. At last he disappeared, and then each of the men who had nightly been entertained by his flow of anecdote and his abundance of witty stories confessed that he had lent the count various sums, ranging from $100 up. The total seemed so formidable that a movement was set on foot to bring the defaulter back, his whereabouts having been ascertained. But funds were needed for the purpose. One of the big men of Wall street who was a creditor on the count's books to the extent of $500 was approached for a subscription.

"Not on your life!" said he. "I don't want him back. He'll borrow more money from me if he gets in town. But I'll subscribe $25 toward a fund to send him back to France if he'll agree to sail from Boston."—New York Globe.

Good Cause For Tears.

A certain mediaeval sultan had all the mirrors removed from his palace, so that he might avoid the pain of seeing his own face. This sultan called on his grand vizier one day and by accident happened to catch sight of his reflection. His hideousness overpowered him, and he broke into violent sobbing. In this outburst the vizier joined. Finally the sultan calmed down, wiped his eyes and got ready to smoke and talk. But not so the vizier. He sobbed on and on. His master, tapping his slipper impatiently on the cushions, waited for him to cease. At length the sultan got angry and exclaimed:

"Why do you weep longer than I, vizier?"

"Alas," the grand vizier replied, "you wept, O commander of the faithful, because you saw your face but for an instant, but I see it all day and every day."

A Dubious Compliment.

"It looks well, but I am afraid it is dubious," said a financier, speaking of a proposed scheme. "Yes, it is dubious. It reminds me of the Turkish pasha and his wife.

"A Turkish pasha lay dying. He summoned to him the youngest and fairest of his forty-six wives and said to her in a low, weak voice:

"'Put on your richest costume, your most brilliant jewels. Deck your hair with pearls and brighten your finger tips with henna.'

"The young wife blushed. Even in her grief she was flattered.

"'And why, my lord,' she said, 'do you desire me to make this sumptuous toilet?'

"'So that death when it comes,' the man replied, 'seeing you so beautiful, may perhaps carry you off instead of me.'"

The Partitions of Poland.

There have been three partitions of Poland. The first was in 1772, when Prussia took the palatinates of Malberg, Pomeria and Warmia, a part of Culm and a part of Great Poland. Austria took Red Russia, or Galicia; a part of Podolia, Sandomir and Cracow, and Russia took White Russia, with all the part beyond the Dnieper. The second partition was in 1793, by which Prussia acquired the remainder of Great and a portion of Little Poland, and the Russian boundary was advanced to the center of Lithuania and Volhynia. In the third and final partition, in 1795, Austria had Cracow, with the country between the Pilica and the Vistula. Prussia had the capital, with the territory as far as the Niemen, while the rest went to Russia. —New York American.

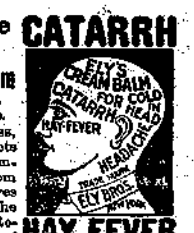
Square Bullets.

In 1718 an Englishman, James Puckle, secured a British patent for what seems to have been an attempt at a breechloading rapid firing gun. An original feature of the invention was the use of two different breech plates, one for square bullets, to be used against the Turks, and the other for round bullets, to be used against Christians. It is curious to find two opposing tendencies in the same invention—first, the desire to construct a gun that should be more effective because more destructive, and, second, a desire to recognize certain ethical distinctions in its use. If a round bullet was too good for a Turk, a square one was too bad for a Christian.—London Chronicle.



Motion of the Sun.

Owing to the revolution of the earth the sun seems to make its daily circuit around us, which of course is not the case. But the sun is revolving about its center quite as truly as the earth is. It was one of the conceptions of that most remarkable man, Sir John Herschel, that the whole solar system had a motion in space and was advancing toward a point in the heavens near the star Hercules. Sir John's conception—as bold an idea as ever entered the human mind—is now generally accepted by astronomers, and the opinion is quite universal among them that the entire system is tracing out a curvilinear path in space, a course around some mighty center, probably at Hercules.

A Caustic Reply.

A gentleman once said to a barrister, "That was a very good sermon of your father's today." To which he replied: "Yes. He must have cribbed it from some one." But the father overheard this remark and reminded him that the Bible says, "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib." This caustic reply silenced the barrister.—London Telegraph.

CATARRH

HAY FEVER

THE labor troubles at Goldfield, Nev., which caused the sending of federal troops to the scene, were started by unusual circumstances. The strike of the miners was originally due to their dissatisfaction with being paid in the cashiers' certificates issued by the banks on account of the difficulty of obtaining the ordinary forms of money. The Goldfield strike is perhaps unique in being due to such a cause. When the financial stringency began two of the three banks in Goldfield closed, and in order to tide over the days of tight money the bank of John S. Cook & Co., which is controlled by the Goldfield Consolidated Mines company, decided to inaugurate a system of "emergency currency." The men in the mines were paid in cashiers' checks, and the latter were cashed for one-half gold and one-half script. The bank went so far as to make arrangements with railroads, merchants and saloon men to accept the script at par. In Goldfield, as in many other mining towns, gambling is a very important line of industry, and the bank even went to the extent of arranging for the acceptance of the script by the proprietors of faro tables and roulette wheels. The state of Nevada licenses gambling houses, and such arrangements by a financial institution are not looked upon as anything unusual in places like Goldfield. But the miners objected to being paid in this way, and a strike was called. The mine owners maintained that this was a violation of a referendum agreement and announced a shutdown of all the mines in camp. Then followed the appeal of Governor John Sparks for federal troops and the order to Brigadier General Frederick Funston, commanding the division of the Pacific, with headquarters at the Presidio, San Francisco, to dispatch a force of men to the seat of the labor war.

Nevada has no state militia. Therefore when Governor Sparks felt that the security of life and property was endangered by the conditions at Goldfield he believed his only course was to call on the president of the United States for troops. His action in doing so has been criticised on the ground that the sheriff of the county was able to cope with the situation. President Roosevelt dispatched Labor Commissioner Charles P. Neill, Herbert Knox Smith, head of the bureau of corporations, and Assistant Secretary Lawrence O. Murray of the department of commerce and labor, to make an investigation of the prevailing conditions at this camp and the cause of the trouble. It was their preliminary report on the conditions they found which decided him to order the withdrawal of the federal troops.

The claim has been made by the miners that the action of the mine owners was in violation of a compromise which had been reached as to paying wages half in cash and half in cashiers' checks. The labor men said that they decided to strike only when the mine owners refused to stick to the terms of the bargain and declined either to guarantee the checks or to pay any part of the miners' wages in cash. The certificates, the miners said, were not accepted at par except at a few places.

Goldfield is in the heart of what is called the Nevada desert. The California line is not far away, and by train the town is about eighteen or twenty hours' distant from San Francisco. It is a field of gold, but a visitor is apt to be reminded that all is not gold which glitters; also that money is the root of all evil. The comforts of home and the refinements of a high state of civilization are things the stranger should not look for in Goldfield. It has not progressed to the stage of bathtubs and trolley cars and million dollar hotels yet. But that is not strange, considering that three years ago there was nothing there but sagebrush, alkali dust and coyotes. The citizens of Goldfield have so far been too busy amassing the coveted yellow metal to pay a great deal of attention to town improvement and city beautification societies. The shacks, of which the town is largely composed, stand wherever they happen to have come into existence, without much regard to the lines of future streets or the possibilities of sidewalks and pavements in the by and by.

The first people who died in Goldfield were buried pretty close to the heart of the town. A legend exists to the effect that the first citizen who met his end in Goldfield died suddenly, as often happens in mining districts, and his surviving friends constituted themselves a burial committee and employed a man to inter the corpse, giving him $5 for the job. Like many another man who has been paid too soon, the impromptu gravedigger spent a portion of his earnings at once in internal irrigation, with the result that he was soon in a condition which prevented him from conveying the body to the appointed spot, at some distance from the business center, so he dug the grave where he happened to be. As a member of the burial committee put it later in referring to the matter:

GENERAL FUNSTON.

"Nobody had time to bother about it, so we planted the stranger right there, and that was how the first graveyard started."

Recently Goldfield has acquired a few substantial buildings, and if its prosperity continues its appearance will rapidly change for the better. Its future is regarded as bright on account of the wonderful deposits of the precious metal which nature has made in its vicinity; but, being located in a desert, the first comers had a hard time in making themselves barely comfortable, not to speak of surrounding themselves with all the conveniences and luxuries of New York or Chicago. Wood, stone and brick at first sold for almost as much as their weight in gold. During a blizzard one winter coal went up to $80 a ton and wood to $60 a cord. It is said to have cost $50,000 to erect merely the front wall of a two story building which was recently constructed of Nevada sandstone. The difficulty of getting material for house building forced the miners to set their wits to work. One miner got a load of bottles from the back yard of a saloon and out of them constructed one of the warmest houses in town by laying the bottles in tiers and placing mud between them. The mud soon dried into hard cakes like adobe, and when he had put on a tin roof the miner had a home worth the name. Some houses have been built of oil cans and others of barrels. Water is too precious in Goldfield to be used in putting out fires, so when a blaze starts the members of the fire department commonly let the house which is on fire burn up and hitch a few burros to the adjoining buildings, place some rollers under the latter and drag them out of danger from the flames. This helps to keep the town on the move.

A SADDLE HIS HOME.

New Bishop of Eastern Oregon Will Live Much on Horseback.

There will be nothing easy and luxurious about the ecclesiastical duties of the Rev. Dr. Robert L. Paddock, who was chosen missionary bishop of eastern Oregon at the recent Episcopal general convention in Richmond, Va. Dr. Paddock is a young man and the son of a bishop. He won fame in New

REV. DR. R. L. PADDOCK.

York's "red light" district as an enemy of vice and is accustomed to being on the firing line in the war waged by the church against all forms of wickedness. He did not seek the western bishopric, but accepted the appointment as a soldier accepts duty from his commanding officer. He will have no see house—in fact, no fixed abode at all, and, as he expresses it, "my office will be in my saddle." But he is used to the Indians and the cow punchers and their primitive ways. His father, the late Right Rev. Dr. John Paddock, was bishop of the state of Washington, and the younger Paddock had a chance to find out what life in a new community was like. So he will know how to get along without vested choirs and churches with stained glass windows and expensive organs. He expects to conduct services in saloons if necessary and to be preacher, choir and organ all in one. As for clerical attire, he will preach in a cowboy's costume if that will help him to get any nearer the rough and ready but usually good hearted men he wishes to reach. He knows how to get close to plain people, as was shown while he was vicar of the Episcopal procathedral in New York, with headquarters in the tenement district. He started a wave of reform in this district that had lasting results. In his new jurisdiction he will have to cover a territory embracing 75,000 square miles, in which the institutions representing religion and philanthropy and education are at present few and far between. He expects to travel for days at a time without seeing a sign of a human habitation and to go down into mines sometimes to find the material for his congregations.

CHIEF DINIZULU.

African Warrior Recently Arrested by British Is a Son of Cetewayo.

The danger of another Zulu uprising is making the British in South Africa feel uneasy, and the fact that an expedition set out to capture Dinizulu, the late King Cetewayo's son, is regarded as evidence that the authorities consider the situation one that calls for serious attention. Dinizulu once had the experience of being a British prisoner at St. Helena and did not like it. He was exiled on the lonely isle associated with the great Napoleon and was permitted to return to Zululand in 1898. It is not so very long since he sent a letter to the British magistrate at Nongoma expressing astonishment that doubts should be felt as to his loyalty and offering to assist in capturing the "dog Bambats."

Notwithstanding these expressions he was held responsible for the increase in boldness of the natives in Natal and their exhibitions of hostility to the British. However, when the latter took the precaution to send an expedition into Zululand with authority to cause his arrest he surrendered without offering resistance.

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But then it doesn't really matter about growing old, if we grow in other ways, if we grow in wisdom, in kindness and patience and strength.

Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period than the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars, when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

The Corner Days.

Some aged country folk like to take note of what they call the corner days—the 20th of March and the 20th of September—when the sun crosses the line and the days and nights are of equal length and the 20th of June (the longest day of the year) and the 20th of December (the shortest). After the 20th of June they say, "When the days grow shorter the weather grows hotter," and after Dec. 20, "As the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen."

Levi Beebe, a noted old weather prophet, who used to watch the weather from his eyrie on Beartown mountain, southern Berkshire, Mass., made prophecies which were greatly prized. He made his prognostications from a study of the winds, the clear, cloudy and stormy days for ten days each side of the corner days and multiplied them by 3 to tell the weather for each succeeding quarter, and he made some marvelous guesses.—New York Press.

Italian Diet.

The low resisting power of the Italian, even among the more favored classes, to the assaults of disease has long been ascribed to the profession of the well nigh farinaceous and leguminous fare on which he subsists—the call on the heart in the later stages of pneumonia, for example, too often finding inadequate response from the defect of the muscle forming constituents in the diet of the patient.—London Lancet.

Time and the Man.

Some one may suggest that if Cromwell and Napoleon Bonaparte and Bismarck and George Washington and Abraham Lincoln had not appeared to do the work they did others would have arisen equally capable of doing it, though perhaps in a different way. To this suggestion there are two answers. One is that it is pure conjecture. The other answer is that history shows us many occasions when the great man was needed, and when the need of him was acutely felt, and yet when he did not appear. The greatness of some men is largely due to favoring conditions. Other men, perhaps more brilliant, achieve less than their powers seemed to promise because they were not quite in key with their own age. Perhaps they were ahead of it.—James Bryce in Pall Mall Gazette.

Great Events From Little Causes.

While staying at the court of Frederick II. of Prussia Voltaire presented Mme. de Pompadour's compliments to the king, who scornfully replied, "Je ne la connais pas." Out of vengeance for so much insult, as she deemed it, madame induced the weakminded Louis XV. to convert his country's long standing hostility against Austria into friendship. A Franco-Austrian army then took the field against Prussia, and as it was an easy matter for madame to enlist the practical sympathy of Elizabeth of Russia, who had been the subject of Frederick's indiscreet remarks also, half a million lives were lost.—London Notes and Queries.

A Cane in Defense.

"If you want to keep off holdup men," said an old detective to the observer, "carry a cane. A holdup man is more afraid of a cane than he is of a revolver. He's deathly afraid that the man carrying it will jab it in his face or eyes or get the end of it in his mouth. On this account they're just as much afraid of a small light stick as they are of a heavy one. There are so many different ways of using a cane that a man doesn't know just which way to guard against it. And any man can use it. Nine men out of ten who carry revolvers couldn't hit the side of a barn with them, and the 'holdups' know it, but it doesn't take any skill or practice to learn to slambang away with a walking stick."—Columbus Dispatch

The Up-to-Dates will hold a social at Fred Whittemore's on Friday evening of this week. Ladies are requested to bake.

Mrs. Burnham was buried from the home of Isaac Chesbro on Sunday, Rev. Pullen officiating, and the burial was at Roosevelt. She was a sister of Mrs. Temple.

The Grange social here was attended beyond our greatest expectations and another one will be held in four weeks, when we hope to have an entertainment to present.

Mrs. Lewis Ives has been under the Doctor's care the past week on account of a fall on a walk in Fulton, when she injured her arm seriously.

The many friends of Hiram Tallman will be pained to hear he is dangerously ill with appendicitis at his home on the Kingdom road. On Monday Drs. Wallace of Syracuse and Wallace of Minetto and Gladman of Fulton operated on him and at latest reports he was in a precarious condition.

Hiram Tallman, aged 28, died on Tuesday night. The funeral will be be held from the late home on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. W. H. Puller officiating. Burial will be made on Friday. The deceased is survived by a stepmother, his father having died a year ago.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Politics, Not Legislation, Leading Topic With Lawmakers.

KELSEY'S RECENT REPORT.

Superintendent of Insurance Takes Reactionary Views In His Annual Statement — Insurance President Sides With Him—Doings in Senate and Assembly.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, Jan. 29.—In spite of the fact that the session of 1908 of the legislature is now well under way, the members of both houses give primary consideration to political topics, and matters relating to lawmaking are given but secondary consideration in many respects. Politics, politics, politics, is the topic of the hour. Has Hughes a chance for the presidential nomination by the Republican party? Will Taft be the second choice of the delegates from New York? Will William J. Bryan be the standard bearer of the Democratic party? Could Taft carry New York state? Will the anti-Roosevelt Republicans obtain control of the Republican party in New York state?

ASSEMBLYMAN CHARLES M. HAMILTON OF CHAUTAUQUA COUNTY.

[Mr. Hamilton is looked on as one of the ablest members of the assembly. His home is in Ripley, where he has a large estate. As chairman of the committee on military affairs he has large responsibilities devolving on him in relation to the reorganization of the state national guard, which is now in progress. This reorganization calls for the most important military legislation of recent years. Mr. Hamilton is also a member of several other important committees.]

These are some of the questions debated on at length in the hotel corridors and in every place in which legislators meet and discuss the timely topics.

Just what general effect on Governor Hughes' chances for the presidential nomination his recent announcement of receptiveness will have cannot of course be definitely ascertained, but so far as this state is concerned there is no doubt that his statement has considerably advanced his cause. The popularity of the governor with the individual Republican voters is best described by the word "tremendous." Statements are freely made in Albany by legislative representatives from various parts of the state that Governor Hughes would, if nominated for the presidency, carry the state by the biggest majority ever polled in the history of the state.

The Insurance Report.

The annual report of Superintendent of Insurance Otto Kelsey has been widely commented on because of the fact that his attitude on certain phases of insurance is construed to side with that of the big insurance companies and opposed to that of the governor.

The superintendent's statements regarding the much discussed section 97 of the new insurance laws resulting from the investigation of the Armstrong committee are as follows:

Section 97, limiting for new business the amount which may be expended or incurred in any calendar year by a life insurance company after the year 1906 and defining the objects for which such moneys may be paid, has been a cause of constant inquiry and controversy since its enactment. The department files show more than 150 letters with respect to this section, some of them duplicates, construing clauses or rulings upon formal applications presented. Many hearings have been granted and such decisions of the department as have been subsequently at the request of interested parties reviewed by the attorney general have been sustained by that officer. The section prescribes with fullness what expense may be permitted and for what purposes. Without direction from a court or an amendment by the legislature the department must hold to conclusions taken after deliberation even if consequences are as baleful as is alleged to be probable.

As construed and enforced to date the department has in one phase of applying the law acted upon a reasonable assumptions that its provisions were intended to cover all familiar details of insurance contracts and practice and that commissions, compensation and advances to agents were to be computed upon an aggregate of loadings upon premiums received for the first year of insurance and the present values of assumed mortality gains for the first five years of insurance, on policies on which the first premium or installment thereof has been received during said calendar year and which remain in force to the end of the first year or for such proportion thereof as may be available after deducting from premiums received a sum sufficient to carry the insurance to the end of the calendar year or such part of the year as the premium or installment of premium will pay for.

In other words, that expense for new insurance above loadings is to be taken only from premiums received on insurance in force, together with assumed mortality gains on such insurance in force for the calendar year and not from the general funds of a company upon a basis of the total of new insurance issued in a calendar year upon which a premium or installment may have been paid, regardless of whether all or any of such new insurance proves worthless and is lapsed.

The Opposing View.

Opposed to this is the claim that the legislature did not intend the language to apply to actual business in force, but created a standard for measuring the expenditure to be allowed for procuring new business and did so by using words fixing an aggregate sum based upon the total of new insurance for the calendar year on which a premium or installment is received and upon which full amount it is asserted assumed mortality gains may be predicated for five years and allowed to a company, without reference to the termination of all or any of the policies issued.

If the department has herein misapprehended the intent of the legislature and is also in error by including term insurance within such statutory limitations in construing this section, then assuredly an amendment declaring the true intent and purpose should be made.

The effect of the limitations of this section is declared to be calamitous. In that agency organizations and field forces in this state have disintegrated and thereby demoralized the business of soliciting insurance owing to an excessive reduction in agents' commissions, and the deprivation to general and supervising agents of a custom of expending from their own funds for services of assistants and brokers a sum beyond the expenses now limited for the first year, which was formerly returned through increased renewal commissions.

An Instance of Workings of Section 97.

An instance of the peculiar and unexpected effects of the limitations imposed by section 97 is noted in one of the successful, but smaller, life companies, which has on its books quite a volume of old business originally written with a small expense loading. A portion of this old business was issued in contracts under the terms of which loadings upon premium payments have ceased. For 1907 the company has written a good volume of new business and kept the expense of the same closely to the line of the limitations. It materially decreased its fixed expenses; shows a substantial increase in assets and some increase also in surplus, based even on present market values of securities, yet for the ensuing two or three years, by reason of the character and volume of old business, in all probability the business of the company cannot be conducted so as to meet its actual contract obligations and not exceed the expense limitations prescribed, notwithstanding the company remains prosperous and shall practice extreme economy. In the meantime there seems to be a purely technical, not actual, violation of the law.

The stringency of the provisions of section 100 as to what investments may be made for the selling of bonds and stock owned, the manner of making loans and the prohibition of participation in underwriting, the purchase or sale of securities, etc., is in occasional instances a barrier to proceedings in which a company holding bonds in default or large holdings of stock required to be sold, may be asked to join with other parties in an agreement as a necessary salvage measure of great immediate advantage.

Later President Kingsley of the New York Life Insurance company indorsed publicly the views of Superintendent Kelsey, stating in part:

"Mr. Kelsey is extremely conservative in his statement. The companies of New York state lost about $150,000,000 in 1906 They have lost $255,000,000 in two years."

A President Making Senate.

The senate has been devoting so much of its attention to presidential nomination matters, so far as many of the Republicans are concerned, that legislative progress has been somewhat slower than in the assembly. But the lower house, too, has been suffering in a measure from "politicitis." One veteran member a day or two ago said in answer to a query as to the probable length of the session, "Well, if the assembly and senate continue along their present lines I look for an adjournment about the 1st of September."

Most of the Democrats in the legislature view with apprehension the Bryan presidential boom. A leading member from New York city said to the writer: "If Bryan is nominated the fight is over. In fact, in that case there won't be any real fight. All the Republican candidate would have to do would be to go home, take a long sleep through what otherwise would be the campaign and wake up to find himself elected. The Democrats should nominate Judge Gray of Delaware. He could, I believe, unify the party. But, of course, the best man of all to nominate would be Grover Cleveland. He would, in my opinion, sweep the country. He offers such a relief to the present presidential situation."

Barge Canal Bills.

Assemblyman Frisbie of Schenectady has introduced two bills bearing on the barge canal. One bill provides for the appointment of a commission of six persons—one by the governor, two senators to be named by the president of the senate and three assemblymen to be appointed by the speaker of the assembly. This commission is to confer with a similar commission from the federal government in regard to the advisability of building a national deep waterway from the great lakes to the Hudson river under the plan of the national survey completed in 1900.

The other bill prohibits the further expenditure of any money on the $101,000,000 barge canal until the report of the commission is presented to the legislature. The bill permits moneys to be expended to keep in repair the work already commenced, but no new work is to be undertaken.

By a party vote the assembly referred to the committee on taxation the resolution of Assemblyman McGrath, which requires the superintendent of banks to submit a report showing how much money has been derived from the tax on the surplus of savings banks, together with what has been done with the money.

The open season for lobbyists at Albany has arrived. The "carrion birds," as some legislators refer to them, may be seen buying cigars and drinks for any one and every one connected with the state government and proving companionable and ingratiating at all times. Indications are that the lobbyists, or, as they are sometimes termed, the "third house," will have considerable work this year, as new legislation seriously threatens "the interests" in many respects.

CANDIDATES CONGRESS

Judge Merrick Stowell Announces His Candidacy—Hon. Charles L. Knapp Desires Renomination—Isaac L. Hunt of Adams Also a Candidate.

Since the Senatorial reapportionment of last year, when Jefferson and Oswego Counties became one district, making the Congressional, Senatorial, Judicial and State Committeeman districts the same, political gossip has been rife as to "who would be who" when combinations became the order. The past week has developed who desires to become the Congressional "who," the decision of course remaining with the electors. Judge Stowell whose term of office as County Judge will expire on Jan. 1, 1909, had been frequently mentioned in this county as a possible candidate, and on Saturday, in response to an inquiry made him as to the truth of the supposition, the following reply was made:

"I have received many honors at the hands of the Republicans of this county, for which I am most grateful, but the highest and greatest honor of all would be to represent Oswego county and this Congressional district in the House of Representatives at Washington, and feeling so I have decided to ask the Republicans of this county and district to support my candidacy for the nomination to that most honorable position.

"Oswego county is entitled to this nomination. It is now twenty-two years since a man from this county has been in the House of Representatives. The last Congressman from this county was the late Judge Nutting. He was elected in 1882 and re-elected in 1884. In 1886 he resigned and Sereno E. Payne, of Auburn, Cayuga county, succeeded him. Mr. Payne has been in the House ever since.

"When there was a reapportionment of the Congressional district Oswego county was joined with Jefferson and Lewis counties, and the late Charles A. Chickering, of Lewis county, was elected to represent this district. Upon his death the late General A. D. Shaw, of Watertown, Jefferson county, was elected to fill the vacancy. General Shaw died after a few months in office and the Hon. Charles L. Knapp, the present incumbent, of Lewis county, was elected in 1901 and has since held the office.

"Many assurances of support have been received by me from all parts of the county, not only from old political friends, but also from those who at times have not been in full accord with me in political affairs. Such encouragement is very gratifying and I hope that if nominated and elected I shall not disappoint the friends who place confidence in me."

It is a significant fact that many of the anti-organization forces have frequently expressed themselves as not opposed to Judge Stowell, and now it is loudly whispered that he has received encouragement more than a little from these same men, in their promises to assist him in the securing of the nomination and election. It has been Judge Stowell's ambition—an ambition as deep seated as his loyalty to his friends—to round out his busy public career with a seat upon the deliberative board at Washington. The opportune moment arrived, the fates appeared to point the way to the fulfillment of the ambition, and he determined to make public announcement of his candidacy.

The Oswego Times of Monday, in editorial comment upon the Judge, says in part:

"His has been the strenuous life, both in and out of politics. He has come up from strenuous conditions. Something, or more than something, maybe, of the born fighter seems never absent from his career. There are battle signs, signs of conflict, all along his trail. We have just commented that Judge Stowell came up from strenuous conditions. Garfield like, he learned the towpath as a youngster, and he has more or less made others toe the path since—those early influences always make their impressions. Then, like the man whose birthday is the 12th of February and is now a national holiday, he showed an inclination for books and from this passed into the role of teacher, and no legend survives that he wasn't "boss" in the school room. But let that pass. Then, too, there was the rebellion, when he wore the fadeless blue. It is hinted that from that time forward he has chronic dislike of rebellions—wants to fight 'em at sight, and if, perchance, at times, he has put a little blueing into the lives of his opponents there are those who incline to attribute it to that blue uniform habit of his worn in his warrior days. And why shouldn't they?

"For a space after giving up the profession of teaching Judge Stowell devoted himself to commercial transactions, but with an eye all the time, we must believe, towards a career at the bar. Almost from necessity, his advent into this field was later in life than is usual, but the zeal with which he applied himself fully made up for the later start and makes his success, or, we might say his successes, all the more creditable. In his announcement of his present candidacy and requests for support, Judge Stowell refers, in substance, to the many honors already received at the hands of his fellow citizens. And they have been considerable. He has been a city school commissioner, County Clerk for one term, two terms District Attorney, and three terms elected County Judge, his present distinction. On one or more occasions he has had the delegates of this county for Justice of the Supreme Court. From a farmer's son and work on the canal—Judge Stowell was never less than a worker—on and up through the several gradations named is achievement to be spoken of, and that speaks for itself, in terms of merited commendation. Now, to round out a career thus hardly striven for with a seat in the Capitol at Washington is simply in keeping with his well-known characteristics. Judge Stowell always was ambitious. And, sent to Congress nobody doubts that he would do the best that is in him and do it well—that he would be no idler there more than here, for his nature as said before, is work."

Congressman Knapp has announced his candidacy for renomination for the fourth term. That he will be Lewis County's candidate is a foregone conclusion, and that he has many friends in all three counties comprising the Congressional district, is an established fact. Congressman Knapp has rendered invaluable service to each county and he is held in the highest esteem. He is no stranger to political and diplomatic life, having served as senator and as Consul-General at Montreal prior to his election to Congress. He has done well by his constituency at all times and appreciation of this is meted out to him in unmeasured lot.

Isaac L. Hunt of Adams on Monday announced his candidacy as Jefferson County's favorite son, completing a trio of contestants, formidable enough to make all other aspirants tremble. Each possessing strength as yet untried and making the situation one perplexing enough to test the astuteness of more than three wise men to determine the victor, at this early date.

SKILLFUL OPERATION

Dr. Murney E. Lewis Earns Distinction at Bellevue Hospital.

The following item was clipped from the New York World of Jan. 30. The Dr. Lewis referred to is Dr. Murney E. Lewis, son of Hon. and Mrs T. D. Lewis of this city. Dr. Lewis is House Surgeon in Bellevue hospital, New York city. The item says: An operation that it was said at Bellevue Hospital will open the eyes of the surgical world was performed there last night by two graduates of the Columbia Medical School, class of 1905. Apparently the broken back of a patient whose case had been declared hopeless, was mended.

Michael Fitzpatrick, aged 23, of No. 170 West Tenth street, fell six stories down the elevator shaft in the Tombs on Dec. 9 last and broke his back. He was a "trusty" in the City Prison and had become friendly with Harry Thaw. When taken to Bellevue even visiting surgeons said nothing could be done for him.

He hung on to life with a surprising tenacity though, and Dr. Murney E. Lewis and Dr. Dudley S. Conley, who were graduated from Columbia in the same class, took a special interest in his case. They decided yesterday upon an operation.

They took what is called a "gigli" saw, which is crescent shaped and has four teeth on each edge, and inserted it in the center of the patient's back, where four of the dorsal vertabrae were broken. These pressed against the spine, paralyzing the whole body.

With the queer shaped saw the young surgeons cut off the four broken bones and then wound the stubs that were left with tissue rubber, making a cushion on the end of each one.

After the operation Fitzpatrick was placed in a rubber water bed, where he must remain for several months. Apparently the operation was successful.

Congratulations were showered upon the youthful surgeons later by the entire medical and surgical staff of the hospital.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Friday afternoon and Monday morning were devoted to grading and re-arranging the rooms, following the mid-year examinations.

Manager Milnes of the Basketball team is ill at his home on the west side.

Gilmour VanWagenen expects to try his Princeton entrance examinations in June. Mr. Van Wagenen contemplates entering Princeton in 1910.

Several hundred invitations have been issued to the ball to be given in Church's hall on Friday evening by the A. K. A. fraternity.

Mr. Ray Goodfellow, class of '08, expects to teach school in the Fall.

Miss Hazel Perine is ill with grip at her home in Lysander.

Messrs. Mearle Mellinger and Glenn Chesbro were admitted to the High School on Monday, having obtained the necessary number of Regents counts.

To Expedite Work.

Plans have been perfected whereby the mills along the hydraulic canal whose tailraces discharge into the Oswego river, will close off their water power for 30-days to permit the expediting of the barge canal work along the lower level. The water will be cut off on Sunday, March 1. The mills to be affected are the L. C. Seymour, the Ditts, the Emeny, the Allen Excelsior, the Victoria. The State and the contractors, as well as the localities through which the construction work is to be done, are alike desirous for the speedy completion of the waterway and it behooves the individuals who may be inconvenienced to an extent, to be generous and patient under the inconveniences, in view of the great good to the great number to accrue from the completed work. With the shutting off of the water, the contractors will put on larger forces of men, and the work on the immense lock to be constructed on the lower level, will be pushed to completion as expeditiously as possible.

STAR ROUTE DISCONTINUED.

Patrons on Mail Route Between Mexico and Fulton will Be Served By R. F. D. Carriers.

On Feb. 1 the carrying by stage of the mail between Mexico and Fulton was discontinued by order of the postal authorities at Washington. The patrons of the route covered by the stage will be served by rural carriers from the local and Mexico post offices. Henry Sternberg, the accommodating stage driver, will continue to run the stage between the two points two or three times a week, which days he has not definitely decided upon. This will be done for the convenience of passenger and freight patrons.

On Feb. 15, the Volney post office, located in Rowe & Jennings' store, will be discontinued and patrons will be served by R. F. D. carriers. Strenuous effort is being made to retain the post office at Palermo and as yet no instructions have been received to discontinue it.

DIED.

David Rudd, aged 63, one of the Grand Jurors of the present term, died on Friday at his home in Boylston. The deceased was a sufferer from heart disease but was present during the first two weeks of the session.

John Wickham, aged 77, died on Friday afternoon at his home in West Broadway. The deceased was a member of the G. A. R. and the funeral services, which were held on Monday afternoon, were under the auspices of that organization. The deceased is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. J. F. Judge; two grandchildren, Mrs. H. Olin and Ivan Judge, this city; one sister, S. Cameron, Syracuse; and two brothers, George Wickham, Buffalo, and James Wickham, Milwaukee. The remains were taken to Oneida Castle for interment.

The death of Mattie Vickery, aged 20, a daughter of the late Horatio Vickery, occurred on Thursday, Jan. 30, at the home of her sister in Sauquoit where she was taken early in November in the hope that the change might prove beneficial. She seemed to gain from then until late in December when a severe illness came upon her and she passed away. The deceased had been a great sufferer for several years but bore her cross bravely, always trying to make the burden of her sickness as easy as possible. For her mother she had the deepest affection and she was never so pain racked that she did not greet her with a smile and a cheery word. Her happy, unselfish nature made friends of all who knew her. The body was brought to this city on Saturday and the funeral was held from the First Methodist, the Rev. John Richards officiating. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah. The deceased is survived by her mother and three sisters, Mrs. Brimfield, Sauquoit; Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Hutcheus, Syracuse.

The Coldwater, Mich., Courier of Jan. 31, contains the following announcement: Jacob C. Andrews died this morning, Jan. 31, 1908, at his home on the corner of Chicago and Polk streets, after an illness of several weeks from paralysis, at the age of nearly 83 years. In the death of Mr. Andrews another veteran of the Civil war is lost to mortal ken and a good and upright citizen has passed to his reward. Mr. Andrews was born March 25, 1825, at Sodus, N. Y., and was married in that place April 20, 1853, to Susan F. Seeley, who survives him, with three children: F. E. Andrews of St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. Fanny Goodjon of Fulton, N. Y. and M. S. Andrews of Coldwater. Mr. Andrews was one of a family of nine children, of whom four are living. At the breaking out of the Civil war Mr. Andrews enlisted as quartermaster sergeant in the Eighth N. Y. Volunteer Cavalry and served for four years. He was in 23 active engagements. In 1866 Mr. Andrews and his family came to Branch county and settled on a farm four miles northwest of Coldwater, where he lived until 1892, when he moved to this city and purchased the home where he has since resided. The funeral will be held at the house Sunday afternoon at 1:30 and interment will be made in Oak Grove cemetery.

Susan, aged [illegible], widow of the late Michael Farrell, was suddenly stricken with death on Monday morning at her home in Second street. She had been an invalid for nearly four years but on Monday when her daughter left her to go to school she seemed as bright and comfortable as at any time during her illness. At 10 o'clock she suffered a stroke and before noon she had passed away, only rallying long enough to recognize her son and daughter when they reached her bedside. The deceased had resided in this city for 57 years, occupying the present family home for 36 years. During all the years of pain she retained her faculties and her unfailing happy disposition gave pleasure to all with whom she was acquainted. The funeral services will be held from the family home on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev. A. H. Grant officiating. Interment will be made in Mt. Adnah. The immediate surviving relatives are one daughter, Gertrude; one son, William, and three granddaughters, Gertrude, Alice and Susan; one brother, Nicholas Lester, all of this city, and one sister, Mrs. George Gates of South Scriba. To the bereaved family the deepest sympathy of the community goes out in their hour of sadness.

F. L. Smith Seeks Nomination.

Mr. Frank L. Smith of Phoenix has announced his candidacy for the assemblyship to succeed Hon. F. G. Whitney, whose term expires this year. Mr. Smith is one of the best known Republicans in Oswego county. He was for ten years, from 1896 to 1906, a member of the Board of Supervisors and had served upon all of the important committees and as Chairman of the Board. He is very active in good roads work and the farmers have a deep regard for him and the position he takes in that matter. Mr. Smith was a candidate last Fall, providing Oswego county was reapportioned into two districts, and in a short canvass which he made he found the heartiest spirit of co-operation in this district, toward his candidacy. He will make a personal canvass of the county.

Candidate for Sheriff.

Mr. D. O. Whitney of Altmar, ex-Chairman of the Board of Supervisors; ex-Commissioner of Highways in his town; a Mason, a Maccabee and a scientific farmer, has announced that he is in the fight for Sheriff of Oswego county on the Republican ticket and that he is in the fight to win. Mr. Whitney is exceedingly popular in his own town and with his fellows on the Board of Supervisors. The announcement of his candidacy but adds zest to the merry-go-round of candidates already announced and some dark horses yet unwhispered.

Changes Will Be Made.

The meeting held in the City hall on Wednesday evening at which were present the Board of Health and the owners or those most directly interested in the buildings recently placed under the ban by the Board of Public Works, proved exceedingly sprightly and interesting, several sharp tilts taking place until an understanding was reached. F. R. Leuscher, lessee of the Foster theatre, was present and he gave from his experience as theatrical manager and one interested in many theatres, suggestions as to how the Foster theatre, by slight changes, might become as safe as any theatre in the State. After discussion between Messrs. J. M. and C. E. Foster, the Board of Health and the lessee of the theatre, it was agreed to make the changes necessary to comply with requirements as demanded by the Board of Health. The several hotels and play houses also agreed to make the desired changes relative to exits, fire escapes, etc.

GRAND JURY IN LONG SESSION.

District Attorney Baker is arousing a great deal of favorable comment in this and other counties, in his firm stand that all charges against any or all county officials shall be thoroughly investigated by the present Grand Jury. For some time past allegations have been made relative to the conduct of several county offices, many for political capital, others from cause. Last week District Attorney Baker made the request of Justice Scripture that Supreme Court be not adjourned until the jury had heard all evidence possible to obtain on all alleged irregularities.

In rendering his decision Justice Scripture said:

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury—On several occasions during the progress of this term you have seen fit to exercise the right that you have to apply to the Court for further instructions in regard to your duties. If the instructions that you receive from the District Attorney, who is the law officer, are not satisfactory, or for some other reason you desire instructions, you have a right to apply to the Court for these instructions, which right your foreman and secretary and several of your members have on one or two occasions exercised.

You know, gentlemen, in your application to the Court in regard to investigations of different subjects involving official and other actions, that the Court has always been willing and has advised you to entertain all applications of that kind whenever there was any evidence presented to you upon which you could find an indictment upon proper proofs, and that the District Attorney has always been ready and willing to advise you in your investigations, and, as I understand from the District Attorney, you desire to proceed further in your investigations of these cases of officials and other people your desire is granted and I shall take adjournment of the Trial Term this afternoon.

The clerk, however, may enter on his minutes that the Court is not adjourned, but that it will remain in continuous session until the further order of the Court, and when you are fully through with a fair, honest and searching investigation of every matter that is before you, you may inform the Court, through the District Attorney, that you are ready to report and the Court will come here.

After Justice Scripture's decision District Attorney Baker said: The examination will continue until every rumor of alleged crime has been presented to the Grand Jury and indictments will be asked against every person who under evidence obtainable has committed any crime without reference to the person's position and standing, either socially, politically or professionally.

Mr. Baker has asked the Grand Jury to subpoena as many witnesses as they may see fit in the conduct of the investigations. When Clarence E. Pitts was telling the Grand Jury what he "knew" relative to the conduct of the District Attorney's office, Mr. Baker and his assistant, Attorney Don Colony withdrew, it is stated, leaving the Jury alone with Mr. Pitts. It is not probable that Mr. Baker wished the wild flight of Mr. Pitts's imagination hindered by his presence.

The Grand Jury is composed of reliable, fair minded men and it is devoutely to be hoped that their findings will be satisfactory to all men and that the charges against our present or ex-county officials, if unsustained, may be forever hushed. Attorneys Pitts and Bulger, as well as hundreds of citizens, any and all who have been suggested as knowing any facts relative to the charges, have or will be called to testify before the Jury rises and it will thus be impossible for any guilty man to escape.

CANDIDATES CONGRESS

Judge Merrick Stowell Announces His Candidacy—Hon. Charles L. Knapp Desires Renomination — Isaac L. Hunt of Adams Also a Candidate.

Since the Senatorial reapportionment of last year, when Jefferson and Oswego Counties became one district, making the Congressional, Senatorial, Judicial and State Committeeman districts the same, political gossip has been rife as to "who would be who" when nominations became the order. The past week has developed who desires to become the Congressional "who," the decision of course remaining with the electors. Judge Stowell whose term of office as County Judge will expire on Jan. 1, 1909, had been frequently mentioned in this county as a possible candidate, and on Saturday, in response to an inquiry made him as to the truth of the supposition, the following reply was made:

"I have received many honors at the hands of the Republicans of this county, for which I am most grateful, but the highest and greatest honor of all would be to represent Oswego county and this Congressional district in the House of Representatives at Washington, and feeling so I have decided to ask the Republicans of this county and district to support my candidacy for the nomination to that most honorable position.

"Oswego county is entitled to this nomination. It is now twenty-two years since a man from this county has been in the House of Representatives. The last Congressman from this county was the late Judge Nutting. He was elected in 1882 and re-elected in 1884. In 1886 he resigned and Sereno E. Payne, of Auburn, Cayuga county, succeeded him. Mr. Payne has been in the House ever since.

"When there was a reapportionment of the Congressional district Oswego county was joined with Jefferson and Lewis counties, and the late Charles A. Chickering, of Lewis county, was elected to represent this district. Upon his death the late General A. D. Shaw, of Watertown, Jefferson county, was elected to fill the vacancy. General Shaw died after a few months in office and the Hon. Charles L. Knapp, the present incumbent, of Lewis county, was elected in 1901 and has since held the office.

"Many assurances of support have been received by me from all parts of the county, not only from old political friends, but also from those who at times have not been in full accord with me in political affairs. Such encouragement is very gratifying and I hope that if nominated and elected I shall not disappoint the friends who place confidence in me."

It is a significant fact that many of the anti-organization forces have frequently expressed themselves as not opposed to Judge Stowell, and now it is loudly whispered that he has received encouragement more than a little from these same men, in their promises to assist him in the securing of the nomination and election. It has been Judge Stowell's ambition—an ambition as deep seated as his loyalty to his friends—to round out his busy public career with a seat upon the deliberative board at Washington. The opportune moment arrived, the fates appeared to point the way to the fulfillment of the ambition, and he determined to make public announcement of his candidacy.

The Oswego Times of Monday, in editorial comment upon the Judge, says in part:

"His has been the strenuous life, both in and out of politics. He has come up from strenuous conditions. Something, or more than something, maybe, of the born fighter seems never absent from his career. There are battle signs, signs of conflict, all along his trail. We have just commented that Judge Stowell came up from strenuous conditions. Garfield like, he learned the towpath as a youngster, and he has more or less made others toe the path since—those early influences always make their impressions. Then, like the man whose birthday is the 12th of February and is now a national holiday, he showed an inclination for books and from this passed into the role of teacher, and no legend survives that he wasn't "boss" in the school room. But let that pass. Then, too, there was the rebellion, when he wore the fadeless blue. It is hinted that from that time forward he has chronic dislike of rebellions—wants to fight 'em at sight, and if, perchance, at times, he has put a little blueing into the lives of his opponents there are those who incline to attribute it to that blue uniform habit of his worn in his warrior days. And why shouldn't they?

"For a space after giving up the profession of teaching Judge Stowell devoted himself to commercial transactions, but with an eye all the time, we must believe, towards a career at the bar. Almost from necessity, his advent into this field was later in life than is usual, but the zeal with which he applied himself fully made up for the later start and makes his success, or, we might say his successes, all the more creditable. In his announcement of his present candidacy and requests for support, Judge Stowell refers, in substance, to the many honors already received at the hands of his fellow citizens. And they have been considerable. He has been a city school commissioner, County Clerk for one term, two terms District Attorney, and three terms elected County Judge, his present distinction. On one or more occasions he has had the delegates of this county for Justice of the Supreme Court. From a farmer's son and work on the canal—Judge Stowell was never less than a worker—on and up through the several gradations named is achievement to be spoken of, and that speaks for itself, in terms of merited commendation. Now, to round out a career thus hardly striven for with a seat in the Capitol at Washington is simply in keeping with his well-known characteristics. Judge Stowell always was ambitious. And, sent to Congress nobody doubts that he would do the best that is in him and do it well—that he would be no idler there more than here, for his nature as said before, is work."

Congressman Knapp has announced his candidacy for renomination for the fourth term. That he will be Lewis County's candidate is a foregone conclusion, and that he has many friends in all three counties comprising the Congressional district, is an established fact. Congressman Knapp has rendered invaluable service to each county and he is held in the highest esteem. He is no stranger to political and diplomatic life, having served as senator and as Consul-General at Montreal prior to his election to Congress. He has done well by his constituency at all times and appreciation of this is meted out to him in unmeasured lot.

Isaac L. Hunt of Adams on Monday announced his candidacy as Jefferson County's favorite son, completing a trio of contestants, formidable enough to make all other aspirants tremble. Each possessing strength as yet untried and making the situation one perplexing enough to test the astuteness of more than three wise men to determine the victor, at this early date.

SKILLFUL OPERATION

Dr. Murney E. Lewis Earns Distinction at Bellevue Hospital.

The following item was clipped from the New York World of Jan. 30. The Dr. Lewis referred to is Dr. Murney E. Lewis, son of Hon. and Mrs. T. D. Lewis of this city. Dr. Lewis is House Surgeon in Bellevue hospital, New York city. The item says: An operation that it was said at Bellevue Hospital will open the eyes of the surgical world was performed there last night by two graduates of the Columbia Medical School, class of 1905. Apparently the broken back of a patient whose case had been declared hopeless, was mended.

Michael Fitzpatrick, aged 23, of No. 170 West Tenth street, fell six stories down the elevator shaft in the Tombs on Dec. 9 last and broke his back. He was a "trusty" in the City Prison and had become friendly with Harry Thaw. When taken to Bellevue even visiting surgeons said nothing could be done for him.

He hung on to life with a surprising tenacity though, and Dr. Murney E. Lewis and Dr. Dudley S. Conley, who were graduated from Columbia in the same class, took a special interest in his case. They decided yesterday upon an operation.

They took what is called a "gigli" saw, which is crescent shaped and has four teeth on each edge, and inserted it in the center of the patient's back, where four of the dorsal vertabrae were broken. These pressed against the spine, paralyzing the whole body.

With the queer shaped saw the young surgeons cut off the four broken bones and then wound the stubs that were left with tissue rubber, making a cushion on the end of each one.

After the operation Fitzpatrick was placed in a rubber water bed, where he must remain for several months. Apparently the operation was successful.

Congratulations were showered upon the youthful surgeons later by the entire medical and surgical staff of the hospital.

If the instructions that you receive from the District Attorney, who is the law officer, are not satisfactory, or for some other reason you desire instructions, you have a right to apply to the Court for these instructions, which right your foreman and secretary and several of your members have on one or two occasions exercised.

You know, gentlemen, in your application to the Court in regard to investigations of different subjects involving official and other actions, that the Court has always been willing and has advised you to entertain all applications of that kind whenever there was any evidence presented to you upon which you could find an indictment upon proper proofs, and that the District Attorney has always been ready and willing to advise you in your investigations, and, as I understand from the District Attorney, you desire to proceed further in your investigations of these cases of officials and other people your desire is granted and I shall take adjournment of the Trial Term this afternoon.

The clerk, however, may enter on his minutes that the Court is not adjourned, but that it will remain in continuous session until the further order of the Court, and when you are fully through with a fair, honest and searching investigation of every matter that is before you, you may inform the Court, through the District Attorney, that you are ready to report and the Court will come here.

After Justice Scripture's decision District Attorney Baker said: The examination will continue until every rumor of alleged crime has been presented to the Grand Jury and indictments will be asked against every person who under evidence obtainable has committed any crime without reference to the person's position and standing, either socially, politically or professionally.

Mr. Baker has asked the Grand Jury to subpoena as many witnesses as they may see fit in the conduct of the investigations. When Clarence E. Pitts was telling the Grand Jury what he "knew" relative to the conduct of the District Attorney's office, Mr. Baker and his assistant, Attorney Don Colony withdrew, it is stated, leaving the Jury alone with Mr. Pitts. It is not probable that Mr. Baker wished the wild flight of Mr. Pitts's imagination hindered by his presence.

The Grand Jury is composed of reliable, fair minded men and it is devoutely to be hoped that their findings will be satisfactory to all men and that the charges against our present or ex-county officials, if unsustained, may be forever hushed. Attorneys Pitts and Bulger, as well as hundreds of citizens, any and all who have been suggested as knowing any facts relative to the charges, have or will be called to testify before the Jury rises and it will thus be impossible for any guilty man to escape.

Stereotyping.

It is claimed that stereotyping was known in 1711. It was practiced by William Ged of Edinburgh about 1730. Some of Ged's plates are to be seen at the Royal institution, London. A Mr. James attempted to introduce Ged's process in London in 1735, but failed. Stereotype printing was used in Holland during the last century, and a quarto Bible and a Dutch folio Bible were printed there. It was revived in London by Wilson in 1804. Since 1850 the durability of stereotypes has been greatly increased by electrotyping them

Gossip About a Few Celebrities Who Are Mentioned in the Dispatches—The Pope's Doctor Carries a Sword.

Dr. W. Seward Webb's Odd Experience — Allan Ryan, Who Will Take His Father's Place — Sulzer's Marriage.

DR. W. SEWARD WEBB.

DR. W. SEWARD WEBB, who, with his wife and son, had to leap from his burning automobile in New York recently, can well afford to burn up a big touring car now and then and never feel the loss. Mrs. Webb was Miss Lila Vanderbilt, daughter of William H. Vanderbilt. Dr. Webb is a successful speculator in and out of Wall street and has money and automobiles to burn.

That Dr. Webb is a born speculator is indicated by a little story told of him. Some years ago his daughter conceived the idea of proving her business ability. She paid $20 for a brood sow and made arrangements for having the animal looked after on Dr. Webb's magnificent country estate of 5,000 acres in Vermont. The sow waxed fat and multiplied. In three years Miss Webb's profits had grown into hundreds of dollars. The fourth year the litter sold for $700. Dr. Webb concluded to go into the pig line himself, so he bought his daughter out and established one of the biggest and best appointed piggeries in the country.

Some years ago Dr. Webb bought a tract of country in the Adirondacks and made it into a splendid hunting camp and preserve. There was a big lake on the land called Smith's lake. The new owner rechristened it Lake Lila, after his wife. A man with money enough to buy a lake and change its name, thus altering the map of a county, may be considered fairly well to do.

Dr. Giuseppe Petacci, physician to Pope Pius IX., is a highly important dignitary in the papal household. While his official salary is only $50 a month, there are certain compensations in the way of honors which make the post one greatly to be desired by physicians. The man who looks after the physical welfare of the spiritual father of so large a portion of humanity is a person of distinction.

DR. GIUSEPPE PETACCI.

Dr. Petacci, like his predecessors in this office, was chosen because of his demonstrated skill and ability in his profession. He succeeded the late Dr. Giuseppe Lapponi, who died shortly after the new pope entered the Vatican. Dr. Lapponi became famous as the physician of Pope Leo XIII. during the latter years of the aged pontiff's life.

The pope's physician wears a uniform prescribed by the regulations of the papal residence. It may seem odd to an American that one who corresponds to "family doctor" should go about the premises with a sword dangling at his heels, but it does not look odd in the Vatican, where practically everybody wears some sort of uniform.

Representative John A. Keliher of Massachusetts tells of a teacher in his district who read "The Old Oaken Bucket" and then told the little ones to make three drawings that would illustrate what they had heard. One of the little chaps made a circle, three rude pails and some dots.

"What is the circle, Johnny?" the teacher asked.

"That's the well."

"And what are the three pails?"

"One is the old oaken bucket, one is the iron bound bucket, and one is the moss grown bucket that hung in the well."

"And what are the dots?"

"Those," said Johnny, "are the loved spots which my infancy knew."

Joseph W. Folk, governor of Missouri, is just at present the proud possessor of two booms—one for the presidency and the other for the United States senate. He is willing to succeed Theodore Roosevelt as president or William J. Stone as senator. He tells a story about a colored man who was brought before a court for a trivial offense.

JOSEPH W. FOLK.

"The state of Missouri against John Anderson," was read in a loud voice, and the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets, and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment.

When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honor, ef de whole state of Missourah is agin dis one pore niggah, I's gwine to give up right now."

The governor is a shrewd judge of men, as the following story shows: One day upon reaching his office at the capitol in company with a friend Governor Folk found a number of men waiting in the anteroom. He paused as he passed through and made a that was a decided chestnut. When the governor and his friend were in the private office, the friend remarked:

"Say, that was a fearfully old one you got off just now."

"I know it," was the reply.

"Then why did you do it?" the puzzled friend asked.

"Did you notice which of those fellows laughed? Well, they are the ones who have favors to ask."

Congressman William Sulzer of New York, who recently surprised his friends by getting married, was at first reported to have eloped with his bride, Miss Rodelheim of Philadelphia. It was also said that the legislator fell in love with her while she was nursing him through an illness in a hospital. The congressman corrected these reports, saying:

"I met her in a hospital, but my only ailment at that time was a case of love at first sight, which I hardly believe she will be able to cure in our lifetime. There was no elopement, but we wished to fool the people who had expected that we would have a big wedding, and I guess we did it.

WILLIAM SULZER.

"Another reason for our marriage at Atlantic City was my desire to carry out a promise made long ago to the Rev. Herbert Gessner to allow him to marry me should I ever wed. We were boys together in Elisabeth, N. J., and later, while we were classmates at Columbia, I promised to let him marry me when I had picked out a wife. He acknowledges that he had about given up hope of ever fastening me with the shackles of matrimony when myself and my intended bride descended upon him and asked to have the knot tied."

Martin W. Littleton, chief counsel for Harry K. Thaw, is always in great demand as an after dinner speaker and is noted for his stories. "One day," the lawyer said recently, "I misbehaved at the table, and my father told me to go upstairs. I knew that meant he would be around after awhile with a paddle. So I got busy as soon as I reached the bedroom.

"When he came up he dumfounded me by saying briefly, 'Take off your pants!' I began to whimper. 'I don't want to,' said I. He inspected me narrowly. 'Strikes me you look rather stout,' said he.

"Executing a flank movement, he caught me over his knee and stripped down my trousers. Under the first pair he found another. Under the second pair he found another. Under the third pair he found another. When he got to the fourth pair he stopped and said gravely:

"'How many pairs of pants did you put on?'

"'I dunno; I put on all of mine and all of Jim's,' said I weakly.

"He burst out laughing, and from that day on I never got a licking. But he used to talk to me when I was bad, and it wasn't long before I would have taken half a dozen lickings thankfully rather than one of those grave, earnest lectures that made me feel ashamed of myself for hours and hours afterward."

It is announced that Thomas F. Ryan, the noted New York financier, is shortly to retire from active business and that he is coaching his third son, Allan A. Ryan, to succeed him in the commercial world. The elder Ryan proposes to retire to his native state, Virginia, with a winter home in Richmond and a summer home in Nelson county.

ALLAN A. RYAN.

Allan A. Ryan, on whose shoulders the financier's mantle of responsibility will fall, is already a member of the New York Stock Exchange, having received his father's seat in 1905. He is married and is in business with one of his four brothers under the firm name of Allan A. Ryan & Bro. He is also president of a typewriter company.

Thomas F. Ryan is building a million dollar residence in Richmond. It is said also that he will erect a costly skyscraper for his favorite city and that he has political inclinations. Mr. Ryan at present is a member of the Democratic state central committee of Virginia, having always maintained his official residence in the state.

An Ohio representative has discovered the "original Taft man." He declares that at a banquet given in Cincinnati in 1897, when Secretary Taft was then only a judge on the federal bench, Hiram Rutison made the prediction in a speech that "Judge Taft will some day be president of the United States."

It is related by persons in Washington who attended that dinner and heard this proclamation that Secretary Taft turned the incident aside by saying: 'Why, Hiram, what have you

HUGHES' PLATFORM.

Governor Announces His Views on National Issues.

FUNDAMENTALLY REPUBLICAN

He Stands on the Record of His Party. Praises President Roosevelt's Vigorous Opposition to Abuses—Declares Constitution Must Be Observed

New York, Jan. 31.—Governor Charles Evans Hughes at a meeting of the New York City Republican club called at the governor's suggestion announced his views on the issues he expects will be paramount in the coming presidential campaign. The governor said:

Fellow Members of the Republican Club—In the adoption of the resolutions which preceded the call of this meeting you have conferred upon me an honor of which I cannot express adequately my appreciation. It is enhanced by the fact that it comes from old friends and associates—the fellow members of an organization with which it has been my privilege to be identified for twenty years and from a body of loyal and earnest Republicans whose zeal for the welfare of the Republican party and unselfish devotion to its interests are known throughout the country. I cherish your friendship. I esteem your confidence. And in recognition of both and of the obligation imposed upon me by your action I shall define my position.

Since I took office I have sought to make it clear that I would not become involved in factional strife or use the powers of office to further any personal interest. I am and have been constantly solicitous that the administration of the affairs of this state shall not be embarrassed by collateral considerations and that every question shall be presented and decided upon its merits, unaffected by suggestion of ulterior motives. For this reason I have avoided gratuitous discussion of questions foreign to my official duty. But when in justice to those who have honored me with their confidence and to the party which, as we all desire, should act freely and with full information it becomes a duty to speak I have no desire to remain silent. Nor should I in any event care to preserve availability at the expense of candor.

The Republican Record.

The Republican party is the party of stability and the party of progress. Its fundamental policies have determined the course of the nation's history. Largely they are now without serious challenge and are removed from any controversy the issue of which might be regarded as doubtful. They include the policy of Union in opposition to every divisive sentiment or disrupting force. They include the policy of establishing the national credit upon a sure foundation in opposition to those financial vagaries which, paraded at one time with solemn argument and fervid appeal as the hope of the people, are now by common consent relegated to our museum of political absurdities, wholly amusing save for our keen appreciation of the peril we narrowly escaped. And they also include the policy of protection to American industry in the interest of the wage earners of our country and in order to safeguard those higher American standards of living which our people will never permit to be reduced. The Republican party has maintained the national honor, and under its direction American diplomacy has attained the highest levels of honorable purpose and distinguished achievement. The great names of the party are the priceless possession of the American people, who, irrespective of partisan affiliations, are grateful that the violence of oppression did not deprive the nation of their leadership.

The Republican party today is charged with weighty responsibility. By reason of its ascendency in congress nothing can be accomplished save through its instrumentality. It has been the party of constructive statesmanship, and with its present opportunities its destiny is in its own keeping.

President Roosevelt's Administration.

We are contemplating a new administration at the close of one which to a degree almost unparalleled has impressed the popular imagination and won the confidence of the people. The country is under lasting obligation to President Roosevelt for his vigorous opposition to abuses and for the strong impulse he has given to movements for their correction. Differences of opinion now, as always, exist with regard to the best means of solving some of the extremely difficult problems that are presented. But those who earnestly desire progress and the establishment of our security on its necessary foundations of fair dealing and recognition of equal rights appreciate the great service he has rendered and the fundamental importance of the purposes he has had in view. We shall have in the next campaign a notable vantage ground, gained through the general admiration of his strong personality and the popular appreciation of the intensity of his desire to promote the righteous conduct of affairs and the welfare of his fellow men.

The Historic Struggle For Popular Rights.

The most impressive revelation of modern history is the picture it affords of the widespread struggle against every form of oppression and exploitation and the onward march of the people toward the realization of the ideals of self government. This movement, sometimes checked by arbitrary power, sometimes impeded by ignorance, sometimes suffering from the perversions of selfish ambition, sometimes under the urgings of passion running into wanton excesses with their inevitable reactions, nevertheless broadly viewed, is an irresistible movement against which in the long run the opposition of class or of privilege will be powerless to prevail. There is no rest in human affairs. The watchword of humanity is progress. And the administration of government in proportion to the enlightenment of the people will reflect in ever increasing degree their insistence upon the enjoyment of equal civil rights and upon the elimination of all evils which threaten equality of opportunity.

Our Advantages.

In this country of extraordinary resources there are presented to an unprecedented degree the advantages of a free society. We are blessed with a system of government admirably adapted to maintain the rights and to safeguard the opportunities of all. It has not been designed for the benefit of a few, but for the many. It is not a government for any class; it is not a government for the holders of privilege; it is not a government for the talented or for the rich; it is a government for the people, and it derives its strength and its assurance of permanence from the fundamental conception of equality before the law and from the appreciation of the common rights of manhood.

Socialism Un-American.

Our government is based upon the principles of individualism and not upon those of socialism. It was not established to substitute one form of despotism for another. It was founded to attain the aims of liberty, of liberty under law, but wherein each individual for the development and the exercise of his individual powers might have the freest opportunity consistent with the equal right of all others and wherein the rewards of industry and thrift—the gains of honest effort—might be secure.

We do not seek to multiply the activities of government so as to bring about vexatious interference with liberty or to restrict legitimate enterprise. We deprecate all unnecessary governmental action. But our individualism does not justify unbridled license. Its aims may demand and frequently do demand the intervention of government with necessary restrictions and regulations not to curtail the liberty of the people, but to protect it. Wherever in order to maintain civil rights, to secure the public from aggression or to compel the performance of public obligation the action of the government as the organ of the popular will is necessary there its power should be firmly, adequately and impartially exercised.

Fundamental Principles.

Now, I do not profess to be able to speak the last word with regard to the questions which confront us. Many of them are difficult, and in the effort to reach true conclusions mistakes may be inevitable. But before these are dealt with specifically we may properly make closer inquiry as to the principles which should be the guide of our action and to which we should render unquestioned allegiance.

What are the conditions so far as government is concerned of progress in the United States?

Purity of Elections.

There must be the freest opportunity for the honest expression of the popular will. To this end every practicable means should be employed to preserve the purity of the ballot. Political contributions from corporations have wisely been prohibited, and publicity of campaign expenses should be enforced. The most stringent measures should be adopted to prevent corrupt practices.

Representative Government.

This is a representative government and not a pure democracy. The latter would be unworkable in a country of this magnitude. Except with regard to fundamental questions or matters comparatively simple, it is impracticable for the electorate directly to express its views. Our system presupposes the fidelity of the chosen representatives of the people. I believe in party government to enforce and apply party principles. I believe in the responsibility of party administration in accordance with the policies announced in the party platform. These policies are but the described methods of public service and the defined means believed to be conducive to the public welfare. In short, I believe in fidelity to principle publicly professed and in honorable obedience to the oath of office. Upon the fulfillment of these paramount fiduciary obligations and upon the public intolerance of the perversion of the authority conferred by the people to the service of any private interest the safety of our institutions depends.

Efficiency In Administration.

I also believe in securing the highest possible degree of administrative efficiency. Our first object should be to derive from existing laws the maximum of benefit according to their intention. The firmness and the impartiality of justice in the execution of the laws insure that respect for law and order and that stability of government which conditions every honorable enterprise and underlies the prosperity of every man, whatever his work.

Special Privilege.

The battle for free institutions has been a struggle against special privilege. It is not won merely by the creation of new forms of government. Against every attempt to make government the instrument of selfish purpose a free people must constantly be on the alert. Every franchise granted by the people is a privilege justified only by considerations of the public welfare, and the conditions of its exercise should be such as to insure the performance of public obligation. There must be no encroachment on the common right for the purpose of serving the interests of the few at the expense of the many.

Rights of Property.

Of fundamental importance also is respect for the rights of property. This is the security of thrift. It is of even greater importance to the poor than to the rich. The unlawful acquisition of property should be prevented or punished. The conditions underlying grants of public franchises should be enforced. But property lawfully acquired must be safeguarded.

Labor and Business Conditions.

We are a nation of workers. Idlers are comparatively few. Our people are employed in a vast network of activities. We must respect the demands of industry and be solicitous to promote the welfare of those who in agriculture, in manufacture and in the various enterprises incident to the exchanges of commerce are contributing to the sum of national effort. The prosperity of the nation means the prosperity of its millions of toilers. We are so interdependent that any disturbance or dislocation has a farreaching effect, and their most injurious consequences are borne by those least able to endure disaster—the wage earners and the men of limited resources. We desire to see the opportunities for labor protected and enlarged, the conditions of labor improved, the reasonable adjustment of controversies, and above all we should seek to maintain stability and confidence in order that the talent of our people for productive industry may have the widest scope for honorable employment and that we may enjoy to the greatest possible extent that wisely diffused prosperity and happiness to which we are entitled by virtue of our resources and our energy.

Constitutional Government.

In this country progress cannot be made save in harmony with our constitutional system. The constitution in its entirety must be observed. The power derived from the people must be exercised upon the conditions which they have laid down. The functions of each department of government—executive, legislative and judicial—are defined, and the responsibilities of each department are fixed. The people have not only thus marked out the spheres and limited the powers of their representatives, but the provisions of our constitution are also checks upon the hasty and inconsiderate action of the people themselves. According to our system, the controlling will of the people is found in constitutional provisions, and these must remain effective until the people change them by amending the constitution in the prescribed manner.

Federal and State Powers.

We must also recognize the division of powers between the federal and state governments. Through the latter necessary local autonomy is secured. It is essential to the permanence of free institutions that each community should attend to its particular affairs, and through the powers and responsibilities of local administration independence, public spirit and capacity for self government are developed, which not only secure the enforcement of local rights, but make possible the just exercise of the powers of the central authority over those matters lying outside the proper limits of local jurisdiction.

These considerations are more and not less important because of the development of interstate commerce and the powerful forces in the world of business which in their practical operation ignore state lines. And the necessary extension of the activities of the federal government as to matters inevitably committed to its control should make us the more solicitous that the administration of state governments should show the highest degree of efficiency.

There are two dangers. The one is that serious evils of national scope may go unchecked because federal power is not exercised. The other lies in an unnecessary exercise of federal power, burdening the central authority with an attempted control which would result in the impairment of proper local autonomy and extending it so widely as to defeat its purpose. It must be remembered that an evil is not the proper subject of federal cognizance merely because it may exist in many states. All sorts of evils exist in many states which should be corrected by the exercise of local power, and they are not evils of federal concern, although they may be widespread.

On the other hand, it cannot be regarded as a policy of unwise centralization that wherever there is a serious evil demanding governmental correction which afflicts interstate commerce and hence is beyond the control of the states the power of congress should unhesitatingly be exercised.

But we are not left to the consideration of general principles of governmental action. Congress has the power given to it by the constitution. It cannot if it would invade the rights of the states. It has express authority to regulate commerce among the several states. The scope of the interstate commerce clause and the boundaries of the federal powers which it authorizes are the subject of determination by the supreme court. Congress can act only within the limits so fixed, and in acting within those limits the question is not one of power, but of the nature of the evil and of the appropriate remedy for its cure.

Having stated these principles, I shall define briefly my position with regard to certain particular questions.

Conservation of National Resources.

There is no matter of greater importance than the conservation and development of our natural resources. It is of the most urgent necessity that our forests should be protected and that these priceless treasures should be preserved from ruthless destruction. All the property of the people should be safeguarded from spoliation. I am also deeply interested in the development of inland waterways, to provide increased and adequate facilities for our growing commerce. We should further do all in our power to extend the area of productive activity through irrigation and suitable plans of reclamation. The common right in our public lands should be protected from encroachment, and wherever governmental power may properly be exercised the sole object should be the promotion of the general welfare, and all schemes of rapacity should be frustrated.

Railroads.

I do not believe in governmental ownership of railroads. But regulation of interstate transportation is essential to protect the people from unjust discriminations and to secure safe, adequate and impartial service upon reasonable terms in accordance with the obligations of common carriers. In order to have supervision which is both thorough and just an administrative board is necessary. I may assume that my attitude with regard to this matter is so well understood through my recommendations in relation to the enactment of the public service commission law in this state that an extended statement is unnecessary.

I approve the recent extension of the authority of the interstate commerce commission by what is known as the rate bill and I believe that the commission should have the most ample powers for purposes of investigation and supervision and for making rules and orders which will enable it to deal to the fullest extent possible within constitutional limits with interstate transportation in all its phases.

This is a just policy. The power of congress to fix rates for interstate transportation so as to prevent improper discriminations and to compel carriage upon reasonable terms is undoubted. The sole question is how and under what circumstances it shall be exercised. But it is manifestly impossible for the legislative body, on account of the conditions under which it works, to make that thorough examination of specific cases which in justice must precede action. It may establish general standards of conduct, but the exigencies of particular cases can be met only by the painstaking consideration of an administrative board. The alternative to this policy is either the abandonment of regulation or sporadic legislative intervention under the influence of agitation and almost necessarily without proper examination of the facts or recognition of the different requirements of varied situations. No one can properly complain because legal machinery is provided for the rectification of abuses. And the aim should be to make the machinery adequate to the purpose of providing redress for every grievance and to insist upon standards of administration which will secure intelligent and patient inquiry and impartial enforcement of the law.

Trusts and Combinations.

The Sherman antitrust act should be clarified and made more explicit. The law may be made stronger and more effective by being made more definite. Sweeping condemnations of uncertain meaning do not aid, but rather embarrass, the prosecution of those who are guilty of pernicious practices. Combinations and practices in unreasonable restraint of trade and which menace the freedom of interstate commerce should be condemned in precise terms. At the same time provision may well be made for joint agreements, under proper circumstances, as to railroad rates, which should be subject to the approval of the interstate commerce commission.

Various means have been suggested—of doubtful validity and still more doubtful utility—to prevent oppression through the conduct of large enterprises and to secure the enforcement of the law against illegal attempts to monopolize and the various devices resorted to in unlawful restraint of trade. In my judgment the most effective course is explicit definition of what is wrong and adequate punishment of the guilty. Such laws, like laws in general which are definite and supported by public sentiment, are to a very large extent self executing—that is, they are generally obeyed.

Punishment by Imprisonment.

I am not in favor of punishment in the shape of fines upon corporations, except for minor offenses. The burden of fines imposed upon such corporations is either transferred to the public or is borne by stockholders, the innocent as well as the guilty. Nor am I impressed by the argument that American juries will generally be indisposed to convict where the evidence is clear because the crime is punished by imprisonment of the offenders. But if the law be definite and the evidence warrants the presentation of the case to the jury it is better, in my judgment, that the responsibility for failure to convict should lie with the jury than that conviction should be followed by penalties which are either inadequate or bear unjustly upon those who have had no complicity in the offense.

Tariff Revision.

I believe in a protective tariff. It is an established policy. Our opponents would not undertake to present to the voters of the country the issue of free trade.

A protective tariff is essential to the interests of our wage earners, in that it makes possible the payment of wages on the scale to which we are accustomed in this country and thus maintains our American standards of living; hence the difference in the cost of production here and abroad is the fundamental consideration.

But I do not believe in making this policy a cover for exorbitant rates or for obtaining special privileges from the government which are not based upon consideration of the general welfare. I believe that the tariff should be revised. And in order to effect whatever readjustment may be necessary to make the tariff schedules consistent with the principles underlying the protective policy I favor the appointment of an expert commission, so that the facts may be ascertained without delay and that congress may dispose of the matter in the fairest possible manner.

Labor Laws.

So far as the matter is within the power of congress the interests of labor should be safeguarded and the conditions of labor improved. I am in favor of the enactment of a law aptly expressed to apply exclusively to interstate commerce which would embody the principles of the employer's liability bill recently declared unconstitutional because too broad. I also approve the laws which have been enacted with regard to safety appliances and hours of labor in railroad service. The matter of railroad accidents deserves special investigation, and every effort should be made to obtain adequate information which will lead to appropriate measures for the protection of life and limb.

Wherever the government comes into direct relation to labor proper conditions with regard to hours, wages, safety and compensation for accidents should be provided.

The Philippines.

With regard to the Filipinos, we are placed under the most sacred obligations. In justice to them and in justice to ourselves we must omit no effort to prepare them for self government. When they are able to govern themselves and are in a position to maintain their independence, the American people will not deny them the boon which we ourselves have so highly prized. In the meantime the work of education and training must proceed, and everything that can be done consistently with the interests of our people must be done to promote their prosperity.

The Army and Navy.

We are devoted to the interests of peace, and we cherish no policy of aggression. The maintenance of our ideals is our surest protection. It is our constant aim to live in friendship with all nations and to realize the aims of a free government secure from the interruptions of strife and the wastes of war. It is entirely consistent with these aims, and it is our duty to make adequate provision for our defense and to maintain the efficiency of our army and navy. And this I favor.

Within the limits of this address it has been possible to touch upon only a few subjects which from a national standpoint are worthy of consideration. But I have endeavored to say enough to give suitable information of my attitude.

Our Attitude Toward the Future.

We have no problems that cannot be solved. Our citizens are intelligent and alert. There are fresh evidences daily of quickened public spirit. The conscience of the people has been aroused, and their common sense is not impaired. Through the lavish provision for education and technical training, the unexampled opportunities for cultivation and enjoyment and the varied efforts of philanthropy we are making steady progress in the improvement of the conditions of our life.

I do not believe in arbitrary action. We desire prosperity. We are anxious that there should be fair opportunities for all the workers of the land and that there should be the widest diffusion of blessings among a contented people.

To attain these ends the rule of the people must be the rule of reason, and every effort must be dominated by the sense of justice. We must be patient, impartial and thorough; investigation must precede action; good will must displace passion, and the sole motive must be to seek the truth and to do the right.

Fellow Republicans, I do not come before you in any spirit of rivalry or self seeking. There are many Republicans who by virtue of their character and distinguished services are worthy of the highest honor the party can bestow. I ask no favor and I make no claim. I desire that the party shall act for its best interest.

Party Harmony Essential.

We must not underestimate the labors of the next campaign. It will be a hard fought battle. We cannot expect victory unless we are united, and nothing should be done to imperil success in this state. I appeal to you in the name of the party to which you are all loyal to forget every personal difference and to make the work which precedes the convention a fitting preparation for the united effort which later will be essential.

And let us not forget that the Republican party does not exist for itself. Our efforts on its behalf are justified by our conviction that through the party we may render patriotic service to the nation. Let this thought dominate our activities and love of country be the inspiration and the motive of every partisan effort.

Queer Sort of Coat.

"Well, I declare!" exclaimed little Willie's mother. "I see Mr. Nextdure has put a new coat of paint on his fence."

"Is that a coat?" asked Willie. "It looks more like a sweater; it ain't got any buttons on it."—Boston Herald.

If You Read This

It will be to learn that the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice recommend, in the strongest terms possible, each and every ingredient entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia, catarrh of stomach, "liver complaint," torpid liver, or biliousness, chronic bowel affections, and all catarrhal diseases of whatever region, name or nature. It is also a specific remedy for all such chronic or long standing cases of catarrhal affections and their resultants, as bronchial, throat and lung disease (except consumption) accompanied with severe coughs. It is not as good for acute colds and coughs, but for lingering or chronic cases it is especially efficacious in producing perfect cures. It contains Black Cherry bark, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot, Stone root, Mandrake root and Queen's root—all of which are highly praised as remedies for all the above mentioned affections by such eminent medical writers and teachers as Prof. Bartholow, of Jefferson Med. College; Prof. Hare, of the Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., of Cincinnati; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., of Cincinnati; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago, and scores of others equally eminent in their several schools of practice.

"The Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes, that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its formula is the best possible guaranty of its merits. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous, harmful or habit-forming drugs and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful agent in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native, medicinal roots and is safe and reliable.

Insect Contrivance.

As Dr. Darwin was walking one day in his garden he perceived a wasp upon the gravel walk with a large dy nearly as big as itself which it had caught. Kneeling down, he distinctly saw it cut off the head and abdomen and then, taking up with its feet the trunk or middle portion of the body, to which the wings remained attached, fly away. But a breeze of wind, acting on the wings of the fly, turned round the wasp with its burden and impeded its progress. Upon this it alighted again on the gravel walk, deliberately sawed off first one wing and then the other and, having thus removed the cause of its embarrassment, flew off with its body.

Good Enough to Charge For.

When William H. Scott was managing clerk in the early sixties for the firm of Cleveland & Titus, a client came in and wanted an opinion right away. No member of the firm was in. Accordingly, Mr. Scott, with some hesitation, wrote the opinion. When his principal, Mr. Cleveland, came in, he explained the circumstances and showed him the opinion. Mr. Cleveland looked at him with a smile and then read it with care. "Humph," said he; "pretty poor opinion, but it will do to charge."—New York Times.

What is a cold in the head? Nothing to worry about if you treat it with Ely's Cream Balm. Neglected, the cold may grow into catarrh, and the air passages be so inflamed that you have to fight for every breath. It is one thing Ely's Cream Balm masters quickly promptly. But you know the old saying about the chance of prevention. Therefore use Cream Balm when the cold in the head shows itself. All druggists, 50c, or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

His Punishment.

It was beginning to rain, and a man who was on the point of starting for church discovered that there wasn't an umbrella in the house fit for use.

"You can borrow one from the T—s next door," suggested his better half. "They never go to church."

"No, Laura," he answered with firmness. "It is wrong to borrow umbrellas on Sunday. I shall punish myself for my carelessness by not going to church this morning."

The annual cost of sanitation on the Panama Canal zone is, approximately, $2,000,000, and since this government took over the project the entire cost amounts to $5,307,000, for sanitation alone. While this sum seems a large one, no one doubts that it is a wholly legitimate and absolutely necessary expenditure. Col. Goethals has recently cited the possibility of an outbreak of yellow fever as one of the elements that may greatly increase the cost of canal construction and such an outbreak would so completely demoralize the force of workmen on the zone that the work of reorganization would have to be practically done over again. Sanitation, therefore, not only contributes to the ultimate success of the canal enterprise by reducing the probability of a serious epidemic of disease to a minimum, but it also contributes to the reduction of its possible total cost.

The Democrats are continually furnishing a demonstration in real life of the old nursery rhyme, "The king of France and forty thousand men marched up the hill and then marched down again." With a great blowing of horns and sounding of cymbals they recently announced that they purposed to ask Mr. Bryan to withdraw in favor of a Presidential candidate who could win. Mr. Bryan went to Washington and every Democrat promptly lost his nerve. The request was never made.

It is to be hoped that Congress will respond to the President's earnest recomendation that the Census Bureau be placed under civil service provisions. This, it is alleged, has been one of the worst spoils bureaus in the government in the past, and the examinations of employes, of which members of Congress prate so loudly, the President believes were only a blind to hide the rampant spoilsism which prevailed in the selection of appointees.

Senator Bailey of Texas was a staunch supporter of the Aldrich bill. When he heard that he was being criticised in his State he immediately became sponsor for a bill providing for 1,000 millions of greenbacks. Mr. Bailey is a shrewd enough politician to know that one of the surest ways to defeat a measure is to make it appear ridiculous. Unfortunately for his party, there are many Democrats who do not see through Bailey.

Secretary Taft has won the gratitude of every "favorite son" in the country. Fairbanks in Indiana, LaFollette in Wisconsin, Knox in Pennsylvania and Hughes in New York will each be left to gather in the solid delegation of his own State. The contest for delegates will be made in other States which have no favorite sons.

A poll of the Senate showed, not of 50 Republican Senators in Washington, 29 for Taft, 3 for Knox, 2 for Hughes, 2 for Fairbanks, 2 for Cannon and 2 for LaFollette. It would be interesting to know how the various Senators voted, but such polls are made in confidence. The totals may be published, but the way an individual Senator votes may not.

Caused Sensation.

Acting upon information which he had received, on Tuesday evening Mr. James Bogue, the Oneida street piano dealer, went to Syracuse to locate his wife whom he suspected was in the society of J. Frank Lester, an optician from Norwich, Conn., who had been located at the Lewis House, this city for several weeks. Mr. Bogue found that a couple answering to the description of his wife and Mr. Lester were registered at the Yates hotel and in the morning his suspicions were confirmed by seeing the couple leave the hotel in company. Mr. Bogue asked that the couple be brought in on a summons under the new law, and Mrs. Bogue, protesting that she was Mrs. Wilson of Rochester, was taken to Police Chief Cadin's private office where she refused to see Mr. Bogue. Mr. Lester made good his escape.

Mrs. Bogue finally decided to confer with Mr. Bogue but refused to sign a paper which he presented for her signature, promising that if she would acknowledge the facts in the case he would grant her immunity from arrest. Later in the day all of the parties returned to Fulton.

Mr. Bogue has retained Sidney J. Kelly to look after his interests and Mrs. Bogue has retained Attorney W. L. Barnum to represent her. It is stated that an action for absolute divorce will soon be commenced by Mr. Bogue and it is also expected that an action will be commenced by Mr. Bogue against Mr. Lester, whose present whereabouts are unknown.

Fulton Milk Producers' Association.

The annual meeting of the Fulton Milk Producers' Association was held in the City Hall on Tuesday afternoon. Despite the extreme cold and the poor condition of the roads, there was a large attendance and the best of satisfaction was expressed with the year's work just completed.

At the conclusion of organizing, etc., the following Board of Directors was selected for the ensuing year: Messrs. C. C. Wilcox, F. I. Palmer, Noah Merriam, W. H. Owens, George Coles, G. S. Piper, William Hinsdale, R. W. Hawthorne, W. H. Mace, James Vant and V. W. Shattuck. The directors met and elected the following officers: President, C. C. Wilcox; vice president, F. I. Palmer; secretary, V. W. Shattuck; treasurer, Noah Merriam.

Secretary Shattuck, in his report to the members showed the result of the year's work in dollars and cents and it was a report which proved conclusively that much good had been derived from the association's location within our midst. Not only has Fulton been benefited substantially, but the entire vicinity. During the year 1907, the Fulton Milk Producers' Association has handled 10,439,655 pounds of milk and its sale has brought from foreign sources to be expended here, $136,569.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

"Undigested Legislative Matter," Ballot Reform Measures.

THE ANTI-VIVISECTION BILL.

Assemblyman Johnston Sponsor For Measure That Doctors Oppose—Suffragettes Show Activity In "Campaign of Education"—Minority Leader Palmer's Resolution.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, Feb. 5.—A tremendous mass of undigested legislative matter is piling up in both the senate and the assembly, and continued activity will be necessary to dispose of it and the bills yet to be introduced. However, the "powers that be" in both houses face the situation with untroubled mien, realizing full well that the state legislative machinery can be set going swiftly enough at the proper time to dispose of almost any imaginable amount of work.

Considerable speculation is heard concerning the ballot reform bill introduced in the assembly by Warren I. Lee of Brooklyn. The bill is referred to as the "Massachusetts ballot bill." It follows to a great extent the recommendations of the governor's message.

The bill differs from the Page-Prentice bill of last year in one essential particular. It provides for the party emblem in front of the names of the candidates, making three important changes in the election system.

EDWIN A. MERRITT, JR., OF ST. LAWRENCE COUNTY, FLOOR LEADER OF MAJORITY.

[One of the ablest men intellectually in the assembly. Mr. Merritt is chairman of the ways and means committee and leader of the majority party on the floor of the house. He is now in his seventh year in the assembly.]

The bill provides for the arrangement of names of candidates for each office in alphabetical order, the name being followed by the name of the party which he represents and a space left in front for the marking of a cross. In front of the voting space is the party emblem. For the presidential ballot the names of the candidates for president and vice president would be arranged alphabetically and the names of electors of each party would be grouped under the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates.

Palmer's Banking Resolution.

George M. Palmer of Schoharie, Democratic leader of the assembly, recently offered a resolution creating a committee of three senators and five assemblymen to investigate the "banking department, the methods thereof and the condition of the banking law," for the purpose of drafting and recommending to the legislature before adjournment such amendments to the law as may be needed. The sum of $10,000 is appropriated for the expenses of the committee.

The Anti-vivisection Bill.

The many medical men in favor of the continuance of practically unlimited vivisection are facing a serious fight. Various humane societies, clergymen and private individuals who are anxious to wipe out the practice of operating for purposes of experiment on dogs, cats, horses, mules, etc., are conducting a vigorous campaign. Legislators in both the senate and assembly have been receiving numerous communications exploiting the evils of the practice. Some of the medical authorities have stated that these communications greatly exaggerate these evils; that the statements are fanatical and prompted by fears having no foundation in fact.

The so called anti-vivisection bill about which the controversy centers has been introduced in the assembly by Frank Johnston of New York county. The bill, which is No. 256, does not prohibit vivisection. It merely regulates the practice.

The most important provisions of the bill, which has been read once and referred to the committee on judiciary, are as follows:

Section 1. Restrictions on the performance of experiments.—No person shall perform upon a living animal an experiment of a nature to cause pain or other agony or distress to such animal except subject to the following restrictions:

1. Such experiment shall be performed only under the authority of the faculty of a college or university incorporated under the laws of this state or under the authority of the state commissioner of health or of a board of health of a city.

2. The building or part of a building in which it is proposed to conduct such experiment must be registered with the state commissioner of health, who shall issue annually upon application to the corporation or board of health applying and entitled to apply therefor a license describing such building or part of a building and authorizing animal experimentation therein in accordance with this act.

3. The animal before the beginning and during the whole course of such experiment shall be sufficiently under the influence of a general anaesthetic to prevent it from feeling pain or other agony or distress. The substance known as urari or curare shall not for the purpose of this act be deemed an anaesthetic.

4. Every animal subjected to an experiment, if the pain is likely to continue after the effect of the anaesthetic has ceased or if any serious injury has been inflicted, shall be killed immediately upon the conclusion of the experiment and while under the influence of the anaesthetic.

Purpose of Experiment Limited.

a. The experiment must be performed with a view to the advancement of knowledge which will be useful for saving or prolonging life or alleviating suffering, and such an experiment shall not be made for demonstrating facts which have already been proved.

Sec. 2. Inspection of places licensed.—Every place where such experiments are conducted, as authorized in this act, shall at all times be open to and subject to the entry and inspection of any properly accredited agent of any duly incorporated society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, acting within the jurisdiction of said society.

Sec. 3. Reports.—Every person or corporation performing experiments under this act shall make a report in writing on the first day of January and July in each year, stating the anaesthetics used, the number and species of animals used and the methods, nature and result of such experiments in detail and file such report in the office of the state commissioner of health. All such reports shall be published in the annual report of the state commissioner of health, except that, in the discretion of the state commissioner of health, the publication of any paper of a series of experiments not then completed may be postponed until his next report.

Penalty For Violation.

Sec. 4. Violation of act.—Any person who shall perform or assist in performing upon any living animal an experiment of a nature to give pain or any other agony or distress, except as provided by this act, or who excludes or assists in excluding any agent at any time from a place which he is empowered by this act to enter, or who prevents or attempts to prevent such agent from exercising the powers of inspection conferred on him by this act, or who, being in such place, refuses to disclose his true name and residence to any such agent, or who violates any other provision of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than sixty days nor more than one year or by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500.

The Suffragettes Active.

The suffragettes are bent on overriding all opposition to placing the ballot in the hand of the humble housewife. But there seems no hope for them in the New York legislature as at present constituted. They are carrying on an active campaign of education. Every morning the senators and assemblymen find on their desks copies of some new argument favoring voting by women. The latest one gives the testimony of the governors of the four states, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and Colorado, where women are now allowed to vote at general elections. These states the suffragettes term the "four free states."

All four governors agree that divorces have not increased nor marriages decreased since the women were enfranchised.

The governor of Colorado says:

The women of the state of Colorado are just as devoted to their homes and families as they were before they were granted the right of suffrage—in fact, I am of the opinion are more so for the reason that they are better acquainted with the necessities of good citizenship and are trying to raise their children, both boys and girls, with a realizing sense of the duties devolving upon them.

The best men of Colorado do not object in the least to the presence of women at the polls or in office, and, while the names of women do not predominate on the ticket, still the men vote for them just as readily as they do for members of their own sex, and the experience has been that women officials make most excellent public servants. As to the latter part of your third question, I cannot see that women are chronic office seekers—in fact, not nearly so much as are the men.

The governor of Idaho says:

In my judgment, political parties have been more careful in their nominations. The moral tone is distinctively better and character has its reward. The example thus set has an elevating influence in all departments, social, political and industrial.

Saxe's Banking Amendments.

Senator Martin Saxe of New York has caused considerable comment through his measures proposing amendments to the banking law. Some of the bankers of Albany, Buffalo, Syracuse, Elmira, Rochester and other large cities feel that they should not, for important local reasons, be restricted in all respects like those of New York city, where local conditions are vitally different in various details.

One of the Saxe amendments to the banking law provides that "it shall not be lawful for more than a third (instead of a majority, as at present is the law) of the board of trustees of any savings bank to belong to the board of directors of any one bank or trust company, and where more than a third of the trustees are directors of any trust company the offices shall become vacant ninety days after this act takes effect."

Another Restriction.

Another Saxe bill provides an amendment relative to officers of trust companies being identified with savings banks whose deposits are held by the trust companies. The provision reads:

"It shall not be lawful for an officer of any bank, trust company or national banking association to be a trustee of any savings bank or institution for savings which is a depositor with the bank, trust company or national banking association of which he is an officer, nor shall it be lawful for any trustee of a savings bank or institution for savings to be a trustee of more than one savings bank or institution for savings at the same time, nor shall the trustees of any savings bank or institution for savings hereafter to be incorporated be directors at the same time in any bank, trust company or national banking association wherein any part of the moneys of such savings bank or institution for savings shall be deposited."

THE KIERNAN RECITAL.—RIP VAN WINKLE.

Feb. 22, Under the Auspices of the D. A. R., at Universalist Church for Benefit of Monument Fund.

"Rip VanWinkle" was peculiarly Jefferson's own play, by virtue of the gradual and wonderful development that the character received at his hands. For a good part of his life he lived the part, and gradually grew into it, making it a thing distinctive, unique. But unlike the production of a maker in almost any other art, this very real entity, this Rip that was known and loved by thousands, ceased with the passing of Jefferson himself.

Forseeing this, years before the event, Mr. Kiernan was inspired with the conception that perhaps he could preserve for another generation the essential lineaments. This he has done beyond cavil.

Jefferson himself gave much sympathetic encouragement to the project, and, especially during the last year of his life, appreciated perfectly the aim of Mr. Kiernan.

The story itself, as told by Irving, offered little dramatic material beyond the 20-years' sleep, and the return of Rip, a tottering old man, his wife dead, his village changed and his country a Republic. Boucicault's play, as presented by Jefferson's father and his uncle, added much in dramatic interest.

In Jefferson's version, Gretchen, the wife, is living and married to a Derrick Von Beekman, who has usurped Rip's place as the master of his house and the owner of his property. Meenie, Rip's daughter, and her sailor sweetheart, Hendrick, are reunited on the same day that the old white-bearded man returns from the mountains. The villian Derrick is turned incontinently out of doors and all ends happily.

George Kiernan is an impersonator of the Leland Powers type but whose work is entirely distinctive owing to the fact that in the Jefferson recitals he presents a psychological study of the great actor himself suggesting in voice and mannerisms the personality of the beloved Dean of the American stage.

Chamberlain's Bond Accepted.

Among other routine business the bond of O. S. Bogardus, city chamberlain, for the amount of $25,000, was accepted. Edward Quirk and F. A. Gage being sureties.

A resolution was passed authorizing an appropriation of $20 to help defray the expenses of the farmers' institute to be held in the Universalist Church February 14 and 15.

A resolution approving of the bill recently introduced in the State Legislature providing that the larger portion of the excise money go to the locality where it is collected was passed, and the Oswego county representatives in the Legislature were requested to use all honorable means to secure the passage of the law.

A claim for $1,000 damages was presented by W. W. Coe for injuries which he alleges were the result of a defective sidewalk on Erie street between Fourth and Fifth streets. The sidewalk in question is said to be between the properties of C. S. Murphy and Oliver Pullen, at which point, planks are necessary at the end of a cement sidewalk to enable pedestrians to reach the lower level of the sidewalk beyond, and the planks form a sharp grade between the two levels. It is said that the Department of Public Works was previously notified of the condition of the walk.

The monthly report of the Commissioner of Charities was approved and placed on file.

Base Ball Matters

Last week the Empire Baseball League organized at Auburn by electing M. T. Roche, Cortland, president, secretary-treasurer. Among those present were President E. G. Cary and F. J. Schem, of this city. Cortland and Oneida requested membership in the league but as the league now stands Oswego, Fulton, Auburn, Geneva, Lyons, and Canandaigua are the towns.

The Auburn franchise was granted to Thomas Quinn, and the following directors were elected: P. R. Schilling, Oswego; E. J. Schem, Fulton; E. J. Meyers, Lyons; F. J. Gallagher, Geneva, and Thomas Quinn, Auburn.

Oswego says that a team in the Lake City depends upon protection being guaranteed, and unless it is, Oswego will not go in. Several prominent business men of that city who are enthusiastic fans say that hereafter a baseball team must be considered as a business proposition and maintained without funds from the city at large. This should be Fulton's attitude. This city was one of, if not the most enthusiastic baseball towns in the former league but she should demand protection before committing herself again.

CHAPTER IX.

BREAKFAST the next morning did not pass pleasantly for Richard, who began to detest the role he was assuming with all his honest American heart—honest until this mad idea of substitution obsessed him, that is. First of all, he wanted to get away by himself and think the thing out undisturbed by troublesome surroundings. He determined to go for a long ride—alone, if possible—and with a good horse under him perhaps his brain would work and devise some loophole of escape. Fatuous dream! There was no loophole. He would palter with the truth no longer. No! He would speak at once and get the worst part of it over. Then he would be free—free from his own conscience—and she would be hopelessly and forever lost to him. Well, he couldn't help it; his heart would break, but it had to be done, whatever the consequences to himself and the heart aforesaid.

Fully determined—so he thought—on this desperate course, he volunteered to drive Mr. Renwyck to the station in the trap. They would start early and drive slowly. There would be time. He would tell the old shark all and defy him to wreck Bill Williams with any underhand scheme. He would claim to have come to Irvington for the very purpose of unearthing the conspirators. He would join forces with his dad and fight Jacob Renwyck in the open, flinging aside discretion, love.

It was hard to think all this, and it would be harder still to say it. As he considered it the pendulum of his thoughts swung to the other extreme. Could he lay love aside? How sweet she looked in her simple morning gown—over which some artist of dress creation had labored days to produce that effect of artless innocence had he but known it—as she smiled and passed him those delicious rolls, as if it were breakfast food he lacked. He wanted her more than anything else on earth. She was worth a thousand harbor companies. His dad would understand and forgive after seeing her. But would conscience understand and forgive?

I am afraid Lord Croyland did not shine as a table companion that morning, and his muttered excuse about a headache seemed too feminine for credulity. When an irresistible force meets—

The drive to the station was rapid and brief. The undecided Richard did not speak after all. His host persisted in doing all the talking, which was mainly enlarging on that precious scheme of his.

"Au revoir!" said Mr. Renwyck, stepping from the trap. "That's my train. Think over my proposition and let me know this evening. I'll send the veterinary out to look at Hawk today. Goodby, Croyland."

Richard drove slowly back. None of the ladies was about when he arrived, so he wandered into the billiard room. He was knocking the balls around aimlessly when he was suddenly accosted by the one person in the world whose company he least desired.

"Good morning, Lord Croyland," called Mr. Michael Corrigan from the doorway. "I just came over to look you up."

Now, what did he want? Well, whatever it was, he would find the Texan was not to be bluffed. Richard's spirits actually rose. This was something tangible that threatened, and Richard loved to deal with the real. It was the abstract that involved him in difficulties that he hated.

"That's very kind of you, indeed," drawled Richard, with a ring of challenge in his voice which the lawyer did not fail to note with concealed amusement. "Fond of billiards?"

"Oh, in a way, yes. I'm most too short and fat to play without the bridge, but I'll take a cue from you with pleasure if I may."

"Now, I wonder if he means anything by that remark," thought Richard as he handed him the stick.

The game began briskly, but soon languished, as did the conversation, Richard making an occasional brilliant shot and missing the easy ones. Mr. Corrigan by steady, consistent play ran up a good score and between times watched his opponent out of the corners of his eyes.

"I shouldn't say you were up in your usual form, Lord Croyland. Sleep well?"

"No," said Richard, eagerly seizing the opportunity to speak the whole truth and nothing but it, "I didn't."

"Too bad!" murmured the little man, with an exaggerated sympathy that did not impose on his victim, while he gravely chalked his cue. "American beds are hard to get used to, eh?" He received no answer and leaned across the table for a difficult shot, paused and regarded the young man thoughtfully. "Lord Croyland, I am after a certain piece of information and have reason to believe that you can give it to me."

"I shall be pleased, I am sure," said Richard, with admirably simulated indolence, although he was never more keenly alive to the possibilities of a situation in his life.

The little man laid his cue upon the table, dusted his hands and planted himself squarely in front of the pseudo nobleman.

"What—in your opinion—is the most approved method—of branding a heifer?"

It was coming, then? Well, he would admit nothing, deny everything. There was no law of business, honor or love to compel him to confess anything to Mr. Corrigan.

"Branding a heifer?" repeated Richard vacantly while he screwed in his monocle and stared at his companion. "Really—'pon my word—I"—

Michael Corrigan burst into a laugh.

"Come, come, Dick"—! How good that monosyllable sounded after this cursed Croyland business! Now he could understand why Bills hated to be called Woolsey. "It won't do," continued Corrigan genially. "I'm too old a bird to be caught with such salt. Out with it, boy! What's the meaning of this tomfoolery?"

It had come at last, then! No confession would be necessary. With a sudden revulsion of feeling Richard experienced a great sense of relief. Fortune had decided for him.

"Mr. Corrigan," said Richard, holding out his hand—he knew when he was beaten—while his features became radiant with smiles, "when you came through that door awhile ago I wished you safely in hades. Let's get out into the sunshine. I want to make a clean breast of it, for, to tell you the truth, I'm in the devil of a pickle."

Mr. Corrigan laughed again and led the way through the front hall. On the veranda they met Miss Harriet coming from the garden with her arms full of fresh cut roses.

"Going for a walk?" she asked. "If you wait a moment I'd like to join you."

"Young person," said her uncle with mock severity, "there is hardly enough of Lord Croyland to go around, it seems. I've got him for half an hour, and I'm going to keep him! Shoo!"

He took Richard's arm and led him along the gravel path.

"Is that the reason?" he whispered, slyly jerking his thumb in the direction of his niece. Richard blushed. "Oh, you young dog! Well, I can't blame you, Dick. Great girl, isn't she?"

They had now reached a shaded bench in a secluded part of the grounds, where they seated themselves and prepared for the confessional.

"You see," began the fat little lawyer, who seemed to exude good humor from every pore, "at first I couldn't exactly make out what you were up to, you scamp, so I drew you out on our friend Napoleon. You are not well up on the history or the statuary of your beloved country, Dicky, boy. Brush up!"

Richard laughed and asked:

"But you were on to me when I took that paddock fence, weren't you? It gave me the creeps when I heard your compliment."

"Of course I was," assented Mr. Corrigan, shaking with amusement. "You don't suppose I lived in Texas two years for nothing but my health! And on your own father's ranch too! I had been told that Renwyck had 'captured a real live nobleman.' I was just strolling over to have a peep at him, when, lo and behold, I find him tearing around a horse lot on one devil as if another were after him!" Mr. Corrigan paused to chuckle. "But, Dick," he said presently, "you made one grave mistake."

"What was that?"

"You should have worn a two foot sombrero, scooped up Harriet's handkerchief at a mad gallop, fired off a brace of guns and plugged holes in Renwyck's hat. Then they would have known you were an Englishman. Now, let's have your story."

Richard looked at him, divided between seriousness and amusement.

"But how did you know that it was I?"

"Deduction," smiled the lawyer.

"I don't understand."

"It's simple. Had a letter from your father a few days since in which he told me you were in New York and asked me to look after the tenderfoot. When I saw you ride I guessed. When I heard you talk I knew, for, Dicky, boy, as an Englishman you might pass muster in Rio Janeiro, but as an actor—well, you'd starve!"

"Come, come, Dick. It won't do," continued Corrigan genially.

"But the others—do they suspect?"

"Not a bit, I believe. They're dazzled, blinded by your coronet. Few Americans in New York can see straight in the presence of a lord. You're safe so far."

"Thank heaven!"

"Don't count too much on the blindness of one, however."

"And that one?"

"Harriet. But fire away. I'm listening."

Richard thereupon recounted his adventures, beginning with the cattle stampede at home and his willingness to come north in the hope of finding the girl. He told of his meeting with the real Lord Croyland and how that gentleman had coolly taken the name of Richard Williams. Then he made a clean breast of his own deception and narrated every detail of his experiences, with the exception of his business conversation with Mr. Renwyck last night.

During the recital the lawyer fairly bubbled over with amusement, applauding each experience with a series of delighted chuckles. That Richard was pulling wool over the eyes of Jacob Renwyck was a keen joy to the little man, who vividly pictured the chagrin of his brother-in-law when the comedy came to an end. He loved Harriet dearly, and now as he looked at the handsome, manly boy before him he confessed in his heart that a match between them would please him beyond expression.

"My boy," he laughed, "it's simply glorious! And now that you have a friend at court it ought to work out beautifully. Don't mind if I bullyrag you a little. It will only make Jacob take your side. What is the next feature on the programme?"

Richard frowned thoughtfully, rose and began to pace up and down.

"Mr. Corrigan," he burst forth, "I haven't told you the worst part of it. What makes it the more impossible, I don't see how I can. It would be—well, it would be a sort of breach of confidence."

"Anything serious?"

"Yes, very. That's why I didn't sleep last night. Matters have come to such a pass that I feel I must tell Mr. Renwyck who I am, and take my medicine like a burglar caught in the act."

Mr. Corrigan's face fell.

"I am exceedingly sorry to hear that." He thought for a moment, then looked up with a confidential and contagious smile. "See here! I wouldn't have you betray a confidence for anything in the world, my boy, but there are two ways of looking at every question. Why not engage me as your lawyer? Every scalawag—forgive me—has a right to counsel, and you need not hesitate to bare your aching heart. Come, Dick, I'll accept one of Lord Croyland's excellent cigars as a retainer, and we'll get right down to business."

Richard brightened visibly. He handed a cigar, held a light and said:

"It's whipping the devil around the stump, I suppose, but I see no other way out of it. I do need advice, and need it bad. I'll tell you all about it on one condition."

The lawyer nodded, puffed at his cigar and gazed up into the thick leaved tree above his head, while Richard continued:

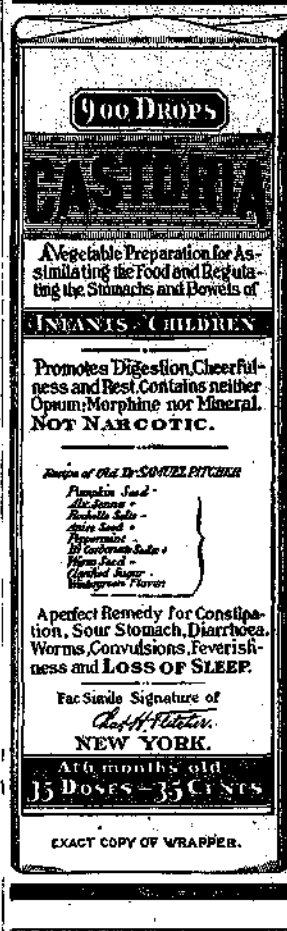
"The condition is that what I am about to tell you must be kept an absolute secret, no matter what your judgment happens to be. Promise that and I'll talk; otherwise I'm a clam."

"Dick," said the old gentleman, "I have followed the legal profession for thirty-two years, and few of my clients have found cause to complain of my discretion. This is a first rate cigar, and I'm going to earn it. What is troubling you?"

The moment Mr. Corrigan understood the proposition which Mr. Renwyck had made to Richard on the previous evening he choked with laughter until his latest client was forced to thump him vigorously on the back, while the balance of the narrative was so punctuated with his chuckles and gasps that it was concluded with some difficulty.

Richard was handicapped in his full appreciation of the joke, which appeared to him to be a very serious matter indeed. When his story was finished he observed solemnly:

"You see, Mr. Corrigan, it's this way. If I keep my mouth shut Mr. Renwyck will make it hot for dad. If I telegraph dad and give him the tip, why, just as sure as a gun, he'll turn around and wipe up the earth with Mr. Renwyck. I'm in a redhot saddle, Mr. Corrigan, with my feet tied underneath. I've just got to sit and blister. I can't see dad done up, but I'd rather do that than play a low down trick on a man who trusts me. And in any event I stand to lose the young lady. In my place what would you do?"



"Do!" shouted the little man, while huge tears trickled down his face and filled the creases of his double chin. "Do! Why, I'd do Jacob Renwyck; that's what I'd do. Go for him, Dicky bird! All's fair in love and Wall street. He isn't a lamb, I tell you. He's a ram, and a butter at that! Shear him, my boy, shear him to the skin!"

"I can't," said Richard quietly.

"Can't! The devil you can't! Why not?"

Gray Versus Brown Camels

The length of a stage varies throughout Persia, depending on the character of the country, and is reckoned in farsaks, the old Greek parasang. The farsak is a most elastic and uncertain measure, and as animals are paid for per farsak as many as the credulity of the traveler will allow are crowded into each stage. "How far," I once asked an old Kurdish muleteer, "is a farsak?" "As far as one can distinguish a gray from a brown camel," was the discreet answer. They average about four miles and the stage about six farsaks, or twenty-five miles. —Atlantic.

A Dramatic Author.

Like most actor managers, Macready was pestered by would be dramatic authors. An ambitious young fellow brought him a five act tragedy one morning to Drury Lane.

"My piece," modestly explained the author, "is a chef d'oeuvre. I will answer for its success, for I have consulted the sanguinary taste of the public. My tragedy is so tragic that all the characters are killed off at the end of the third act."

"With whom, then," asked the manager, "do you carry on the action of the last two acts?"

"With the ghosts of those who died in the third!"—Cornhill Magazine.

Gambetta's Lost Eye.

Gambetta, the French patriot, had but one eye. How he came to lose the other in childhood is told by a writer: "It appears that Gambetta had such a dislike to going to school that he said to his father that unless he were taken from school he would poke one of his eyes out. His father insisted on his remaining on at school, whereupon Gambetta did as he had threatened to do, and on his father remonstrating with him he said that if his father sent him back again to school he would poke the other eye out. Such a determined character was he that his father had finally to give way to him."

He Came Back at Her.

"Many mendicants," said a New York charity official, "are humbugs, and we do well to refuse their requests for help. What excellent digs, though, they sometimes give us in return. I remember the case of a farmer's wife who refused a tramp a night's lodging.

"'Well, then, ma'am,' said the tramp, 'would you mind if I slept in that big meadow there behind your barn?'

"'No,' said the woman, 'you may sleep there if you like.'

"'One thing more, ma'am,' said the tramp, 'before I say good night. Will you please have me called at 4 o'clock sharp? I want to catch the cattle train to market.'"

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But then it doesn't really matter about growing old, if we grow in other ways, if we grow in wisdom, in kindness and patience and strength.

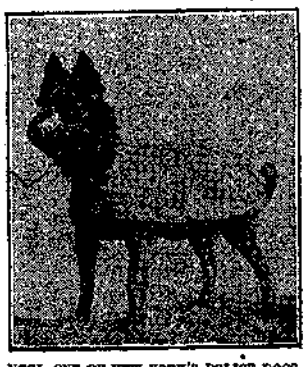
Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period that the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

The Police Dogs of New York City

Five Imported From Ghent, the Natal City of the Canine "Cop," Are Now on Duty. :: :: :: :: :: ::

They Obey the Uniform, Not the Individual, and to Them Plain Clothes Cover Undesirable Citizens. :: ::



"MOVE ON, THERE!"

"BOW, wow, wow!" is the new police call. New York city now has five dog policemen on duty, and if these canine sleuths prove valuable other American cities may adopt the innovation. The dogs are imported, like the idea. They were brought over from the famed old city of Ghent, in Belgium, where eight years ago the first dog policeman in history became a full fledged member of the force. Now Ghent has a regular dog squad, while Paris has a hundred dogs on her police force, and other European cities use trained canines as thief catchers.

Some months ago the New York police department determined to investigate the European dog police system with a view to adopting it in case it should prove feasible. Many horrible crimes had been committed by miscreants in lonely spots, the criminals escaping. It was believed that dogs might render valuable aid in catching these villains. Accordingly Police Lieutenant Wakefield, who was an expert on dogs, was sent over to Belgium. Wakefield thoroughly studied the dog division of the Ghent police force, learning just how to educate the canines for their duties in public life. The American police officer several times donned the uniform and helmet of the Ghent patrolman and walked a beat, the regular patrolman being in civilian clothing and serving as assistant in showing off the fine points of the dog.

The chief thing that Lieutenant Wakefield learned in dog education for police duty was that the animal must be taught to know and respect the police uniform rather than the man inside it.

Wakefield bought five Belgian sheep dogs six months old and brought them across the sea. One died the day after arrival, so to keep the force up to the desired number an American canine was added. The quintet of young dogs was taken to an old residence in a park in the upper part of the city and "matriculated" at once in America's first and only police dog college. For four months Lieutenant Wakefield, as principal of the school, with two patrolmen as professors, taught the dogs how to learn to do police duty. The first rule was that only uniformed members of the force were allowed to handle the dogs, and only a uniformed policeman was to feed them. Another policeman, in civilian dress, was assigned to snatch away the dish of food just as each dog began to eat with a relish and to do other tantalizing things. In this way the dogs were taught to look upon men in police uniforms as their friends and to regard all others with downright distrust.

Every day at stated intervals the dogs were taken out in the park for exercise and training. Each dog was muzzled, so that he could not bite, but he was left free to do all the barking he liked. While Lieutenant Wakefield would hold a dog in leash one of the patrolmen in an old suit of citizen's clothes would impersonate the bad man to be captured. He would slink around among the trees. When Lieutenant Wakefield released the dog, with the order, "Attack!" there was immediate trouble for the man in plain clothes. The dog assailed him fiercely, either tripping him up by twisting between his legs or bowling him over by jumping against his back with the fifty pounds avoirdupois of Mr. Dog. The dogs were taught to continue the attack if the captive attempted to arise, but if he lay still they were merely to sit and guard him until the arrival of a man in uniform. Each dog learned that he was to cease attack instantly when the officer cried "Down!" Thus, in case the dog should attack an innocent bystander just because said bystander was not in police uniform, the policeman could protect the citizen, or, in the case of a guilty person, he could preserve the prisoner, to be dealt with by the courts.

It is fully proved that the dogs respect the uniform and not the man by the fact that Patrolman Beekman, who fed the animals twice a day during their college course, was the same man who in civilian clothes acted as the supposed crook. The dogs leaped at him viciously when ordered to attack, but when Beekman was in uniform they appeared to both venerate and fear him.

Lieutenant Wakefield found much difficulty in procuring suitable police dogs in Europe. That fact should encourage our ambitious American dogs. Since one of the five police dogs in New York is an American and has proved that he can absorb police education like a Belgian there is excellent prospect that many of our own deserving dogs now running around out of jobs owing to the financial stringency or other causes may be elected to the police force. All they have to do is to make good.

BOOMERANG THROWING.

A Strange Sport That Is Becoming Popular In This Country.

Boomerang throwing as one of the diversions of country life is coming into favor in the United States as well as England and Australia. Evidence of this is found in the fact that dealers in sporting goods now carry stocks of boomerangs as well as of tennis rackets and golf sticks. The boomerang was originally the weapon of wild tribes of Australia, but the occasion is rare now when it is used with the intention of hurting anybody or anything. In the hands of an expert the boomerang is capable of furnishing considerable entertainment. No ordinary mechanic can construct it, and the trick of making it return to the thrower is by no means easy to learn. Not only must the instrument be held at just the proper angle when thrown, but there must be a peculiar twist, and the direction of the wind must be studied. In making the boomerang certain lateral twists are given the wood, and it is pitted with notches running laterally along the surface. In throwing it one must stand with the wind blowing toward one's left front. Experts can throw the boomerang as far as 270 yards and make it return and flutter down about the head like a butterfly.

THROWING THE BOOMERANG.

Naval Nomenclature.

The animal world has been extensively drawn upon to furnish names for various things on shipboard. Such, for example, are: "Flemish horse," a short footrope under the yardarms; "lizard," a short rope with a ring in the end for use in "tripping" one of the lighter yards; "hounds," a part of the mast; "bull rope," a rope used in hauling small spars into the rigging; "cathead," a protuberance from the bow to which the anchor is hauled up; "cat," the tackle used to haul the anchor to the cathead; "fish," another tackle used in securing the anchor; the "leech" is the side of a square sail; "dolphin striker," a short spar perpendicular to and under the bowsprit; "dog's ear," a piece of sail projecting when sails are furled; "snake," to join two ropes by zigzagging a smaller rope between them; a "jackass" is a big stuffed ball used to ping up holes to keep the water out.

Local and Personal

Mr. Arthur G. Gilbert is greatly improved in health.

Mr. Earl Loomis continues in very poor health at his home in this city.

Mr. Ray Goodfellow has been ill at the home of his sister, Mrs. F. L. Darling, Oneida street.

Mr. William D. Carr left on Tuesday for Ha-Ha Bay, Ca., where he has accepted a position.

Mrs. L. D. Streeter and Mr. Willis Streeter were called to Phoenix by the death of Mrs. Streeter's brother, Mr. Parsons.

Lena Ling, aged 18, but appearing much younger, was last week sentenced to the reformatory at Albion by acting City Judge S. B. Mead. The charge against the girl was street-walking.

Prof. Guy F. Taylor has returned from Oklahoma City and is straightening out the affairs in the brokerage office formerly conducted by Taylor & Ratnour in the Clark House.

Mr. Ralph VanBuren, junior partner in the shoe firm of Stanahan & VanBuren, has purchased the Ives property in Oneida street, and will take possession in the near future.

Mr. John Brannan was at Lyons Falls last week installing one of his own patented paper folding machines in a large paper manufactory. The Granby mill, this city, has been using one of the Brannan folders for some time but the Lyons Falls house is the first one outside of this city in which one has been installed.

The local basket ball team left on Saturday morning for Gouverneur. Owing to the heavy storm which prevailed the young men did not reach their destination until 9 p.m., and proceeded direct to the hall, where they played ball without the sustaining strength of a supper. The score was 15 to 18 in favor of Gouverneur. The local team returned home at midnight on Sunday, having been all day enroute.

Thursday was the coldest day experienced this winter, the mercury reaching a point of 14 below zero and not going much above zero all day. On Saturday the heaviest blizzard of the season struck this vicinity, blocking country roads and disarranging the train schedules. On Sunday the flyer due from the west on the O. & W. at noon, did not reach Fulton until 7:30 p. m. The storm continued throughout Sunday with fury.

JACK LONDON SAFE.

The Special Correspondent of the Woman's Home Companion in San Francisco has Telegraphed the following Message in Regard to Jack London:

"San Francisco, Jan. 27, 1906
"Jack London and wife arrived on the MARIPOSA, safe and well. SNARK laid up for repairs."

London's bankers in Oakland, despairing of his safety, recently recorded the mortgage against his home at Glen Ellen, which was drawn last April in order that the adventurous writer could obtain funds with which to fit out the SNARK. It was understood that the mortgage was to be held without being recorded as long as London's safety seemed assured. The action of the bank was taken as an indication that its officers feared he had met disaster.

London intends to spend seven years on his voyage around the world, describing for the WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION the life and customs and countries of strange people he meets. From the Society Islands he expects to touch at Samoa, Tasmania, New Zealand, Australia, New Guinea, then up through the Philippines to Japan, Korea and China, and so on to India. After this is to come Europe, the Atlantic Coast of America, and San Francisco again, via the Horn.

The SNARK is forty-five feet on the water-line, weighs thirty tons, and has an auxiliary gas engine, which, getting out of repair, caused the delay that has occasioned so much worry. The engines are now being overhauled at Papeiti. The boat as originally planned, was to cost $7,000. She actually cost about $25,000 before she left San Francisco, six months late, the terrible increase in cost being due to the earthquake and fire and to the subsequent scarcity of labor.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucuous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

FULTON WILL MAINTAIN SUCCESSFUL LIBRARY

Action was taken by the Common Council last night in regard to the request for the usual appropriation of $875 by the city in support of the public library, the amount being the payments for the months of October, November and December, 1907, in accordance with the agreement made with Mr. Carnegie when the gift for the library was accepted.

These payments are made from the general city fund and were taken into consideration when the budget was adopted. Therefore the question for the present was not one of raising the money, but simply as to whether payments should be authorized.

Upon being put to vote all the Aldermen favored a resolution authorizing payment, with the exception of Alderman Dwyer, who was of the opinion that the money could be used to much greater advantage if placed at the disposal of the improvement fund.

Arvin Rice spoke of the patronage of the institution, especially by the poor, who could not afford to buy books, and by school children to supplant their course of study in the schools, and stated that to raise the necessary $1,500 per year only 37½ cents were required for each $1,000 of assessed valuation. He concluded by remarking that the library was entirely without funds and must have some aid at once.

Thomas Hunter spoke in favor of the continuation of the appropriation, ending with the remark that he thought it a pity if the city of Fulton should be the first to question the constitutionality of the agreements by which so many libraries are supported and so great amount of educational work accomplished.

It is reported that the deficiency in the Water Department has been made good by the family of the late clerk to the Board of Public Works, Richard Carr.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whittemore entertained the Up-to-Dates last Friday evening. Some of the young people experienced considerable difficulty in reaching their homes as the storm was intense when they started for home. Anyone finding crockery along the road will return to those attending as some of those who capsized in the snow lost plates.

Friends of Harley Wright are showering congratulations upon the visit of the stork.

Earl View entertained the Birthday Club Tuesday Jan. 28. A fine time was enjoyed.

Fred C. Osborne accompanied the family of Hiram Tallman to Tully last Friday where Mr Tallman was buried. He leaves a large circle of friends who deeply mourn his loss as he was of genial disposition and to know him was a privilege.

Mrs. Jessie White spent Friday at Cass Hill's.

Earl Foster has his greenhouse about completed.

Glen Sanford of Fulton visited Byron Smith last week.

Lillian Moore of Fulton was the guest of Elizabeth Calkins.

Ernest Simons was lost for several hours in Saturday night's blizzard and was obliged to leave his horse in a neighbor's barn and return home on foot.

Mrs. Ida Foster was the recent guest of Mrs. Harmon Rockwood.

The Up-to-Date Club will hold a social at the home of Myron Osborne Friday evening, Feb. 7th.

Elizabeth Howard of Fulton spent several days with friends in Fulton.

Bennie Osborne was the recent guest of Miss Ethel Petrie in West Fulton.

Cheese making has been suspended at the factory here as Mr. Hale's engine is sadly out of repair owing to the severe cold weather.

Quarterly conference was held at the church last Saturday evening. A call to the coming year was extended to Rev. Pullen. Presiding Elder Loucks was present and intended to preach Sunday morning but an old fashioned Volney blizzard kept the people home so he had to postpone his sermon.

Miss Maud Marden of West Fulton spent several days with Mrs. J. W. Austin last week.

Johnnie Green suffered from a slight shock last week but is recovering.

Mrs. Chas. Osborne is the guest of Syracuse relatives.

The W. F. M. S. which was to meet with Mrs. Jasper Rowlee on Wednesday of this week has postponed its meeting one week.

Mrs. Melinda Sherman was at home to a few friends on Thursday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Rowlee entertained the Pearson family last Thursday.

Charles Ford of Ontario was a recent guest at George Views'.

Mrs. Jasper Rowlee visited her sister, Mrs. Hannah Austin in South Granby recently. Mrs. Grove Dutton of Minetto was also a guest.

Ruth Osborne is enjoying a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Osborne.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Dumont are home from a two months' visit with relatives in Palmyra.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Simons are smiling over the arrival of an eight pound son at their home.

STATE OF NEW YORK, COUNTY COURT, Oswego County—S. Ray Lockwood, plaintiff, vs. Robert McCarthy, et al., defendants.

Pursuant to a judgment of foreclosure and sale, rendered herein on the 27th day of November, 1907, and duly entered in Oswego County Clerk's office on the same day, I the undersigned, referee, duly appointed for such purposes by said judgment, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, on Saturday, the 25th day of January, 1908 at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at my office in the village of Hannibal, New York, the real estate in and by said judgment directed to be sold and therein described as follows:

All that tract or parcel of land situated in the town of Hannibal, County of Oswego, State of New York, being on sub-division number six (6) of military lot, number forty-one (41) in said town of Hannibal, being twenty (20) acres to be taken off from the south end of the following described parcel of land, viz.: Beginning at the southwest corner of the States' Hundred, so-called, running thence northerly Two (2) degrees east along the west line of the same to the northwest corner of said States' Hundred, thence north eighty-eight (88) degrees west, fourteen (14) chains to the center of the highway leading north from North Hannibal to Oswego Center, thence south thirty (30) degrees, thirty (30) minutes east, along the center of said highway, thirty-one (31) chains and seventy-three (73) links to the four corners at North Hannibal, thence east along the center of the east and west highway leading from North Hannibal to the Oswego River, to the place of beginning, containing twenty acres of land, more or less. The north line of these premises is a straight line, drawn parallel to the center of said east and west highway; the south line of these premises across such described parcel far enough north to include twenty (20) acres of land, excepting and reserving herefrom the parcel of land containing four (4) acres of land, the southwest corner heretofore sold to Martin H. Cox, also one-fourth (1-4) acre, being the North Hannibal Grange lot.

Dated Nov. 25, 1907.

Fraternal Pool Tournament

The first games in the pool tournament between the fraternal organizations of this city were held on Tuesday evening and resulted as follows:

Citizens Club—A. F. Buell defeated W. C. Burns by a score of one hundred to fifty-four and B. J. Crahan won from Charles Bennett, one hundred to twenty-five.

Elks' Hall—William Cameron, one hundred; Paul Hagar, forty-eight; W. H. Davis, one hundred; Charles Lockrow, sixty-eight.

Masonic Club—George Chetney defeated Claud Guile, one hundred to seventy-six, and in the second conte t Edward Cole was defeated by Arthur Stewart by twelve points. This gives the Elks four victories and the Knights of Columbus two at the end of the first session.

The next series of games will be played on Friday evening.

Injunctions Granted.

Judge Stowell on Monday, on motion of Attorneys Fanning & Fanning, vacated a temporary injunction granted by him on Friday. This injunction restrained Fred J. Bradt from interfering with the machinery in a Fulton laundry now operated by Edward Park. Claude E. Guile represented Mr. Park. The matter has been settled by the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage held by Mr. Park on the machinery.

Judge Stowell on Friday granted an injunction to Edward D. Park, of this city, restraining F. J. Bradt, formerly of Oswego, from removing motors, tanks and other equipment from a laundry in this city and placing it upon the street. Mr. Bradt purchased the laundry from the plaintiff and gave a chattel mortgage of $1,000. It is alleged that he defaulted in his payments and that when Mr. Park wanted to sell the equipment that he threatened to remove the machinery from the building.

DIED.

Henry, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sparks, died on Thursday at the family home in Seneca street. The funeral was held on Thursday and interement was made in Mt. Adnah.

Mrs. Rowe, who is known in this city, died last week at her home in New Haven. Among those in attendance at the funeral from this city were Mrs. Bertha Royce and Miss Elizabeth Lee.

The death of Henry M. Barrett, aged 83, a well known attorney, occured on Wednesday at his home in Hannibal following several months of ill health. The widow and one son, Prof. H. E. Barrett, Syracuse, survive.

The remains of Albert Hammond, who died in Fair Haven last week, were brought to the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. G. Cary, from where the funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Mrs. Nancy Hall, aged 78, died on Tuesday at the home of her son, Mr. W. F. Hall in South First street. The funeral services will be held from the late home on Thursday at 11 o'clock, the Rev. F. A. Miller officiating. Interment at Riverside Cemetery, Oswego.

The remains of Edwin J. Howard, aged 54, a former resident of Hannibal who had been for some time in the employ of the Babcock Brothers at Ashtola, Pa., were brought to this city last week and were taken to the former home in Hannibal by Undertaker E. S. Brown, where the funeral was held under the auspices of the Maccabees of Hannibal. Interment was made at Bethel Corners.

The following was taken from the Utica Observer of Feb. 4; "Prospect, Feb. 4.—The remains of Daniel S. Bullock, who died in Chicago last Friday, were brought here yesterday. Daniel S. Bullock was born near here 75 years ago, being the second son of the late Rev. Seymour Bullock. When a young man he removed to Bainbridge, where for a number of years he conducted a large general store. Going to Fulton in 1878, where he remained until 1886, conducting a wagon making business. The son Frank died during their residence there. The family finally located in Elmira where he carried on the business until failing health compelled him to retire. In 1855 he married Nellie Chappell of Norwich, who survives. They had one son, Frank, who died in 1884. He was one of a family of 10 children, four of whom are living: Dr. E. B. Bullock, of Syracuse, Mrs. James Plumb o' Locks Village, Mass., Mrs. Edgar Gage of Milford and Mrs. Sara M. Wood of Chicago, at whose home he died. The widow, Mrs. Helen S. Bullock, will be remembered by many of our residents as having been very prominent in State and National W. C. T. U. work.

Lena Lucena, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dunning, died on Feb. 5, at the home of the grandfather, Mr. T. D. Ingersol in North Fifth street. The funeral was held on Thursday, the Rev. W. G. Bassett officiating. Interment was made in Mount Adnah. This is the second member of the family to die within two months from diphtheria.

Seldom does the demise of an individual bring sadness to so large a circle of acquaintances as did that of Grace E., widow of the late J. Cooley Tucker, which occurred at the home in Second street Wednesday evening. Mrs. Tucker had resided in Fulton for over sixty-two years, coming here a bride, and for fifty years she had resided in the Second street house. In her passing away the last of her generation was taken. The seven Tucker brothers, their wives, their sisters and all of the near relatives of the deceased had preceded her to the spirit land. Time had dealt so leniently with her that the frost never reached her heart and can be truly said that she was eighty-three years young, rather than eighty-three years old. Her interests, her sympathies, her friendships, were as bright and as keen, when she laid down upon the bed of pain two weeks prior to her death, as those of any young person. Her mentality had never become dulled with years but seemed to grow and expand with length of time. It was a blessed privilege to go into her home and receive the cordial greeting and listen to the conversation culled from years of companionship with the best reading, the choicest friends, to be found. She belonged to the old school of culture and gentleness and her beautiful womanly life is a heritage to the daughter, sons and friends who sincerely grieve, not that "she has won the crown," but that they have sustained such a loss. The funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late home, the Rev. A. H. Grant, rector of Zion Episcopal Church, of which the deceased was a communicant, officiating. The casket was fairly concealed by a wealth of floral tokens sent by friends. The immediate surviving relatives are one daughter, Miss Grace J. Tucker of this city, and two sons, Solon E., of Jersey City, N. J., and Willard C., of

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB.

Program of Unusual Interest Presented at the Last Session.

The usual fortnightly session of the Current Events Club was held on Monday evening, Feb. 3, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Wagenen on South Fourth street, and was largely attended. A program of unusual interest was presented by the leaders—the Rev. John Richards and Prof. L. D. Wilcox. Prof. J. R. Fairgrieve selected matters of domestic importance for his theme. He dwelt upon the Hughes and Taft Presidential bombs; the similarities and contrasts of the men. Taft, the speaker said, was eminently fitted for the office by ancestory and education, having been graduated at Yale in 1878, second in his class, then through the school of law and entering public life, first as prosecuting attorney, then Supreme Court Judge of Ohio, Solicitor-General at Washington, Federal Judge of the Circuit Court of Ohio, head of the Philippine Commission under President McKinley, Governor of the Philippines and Secretary of War.

Prof. Wilcox selected foreign matters of public interest, recounting the assassination of King Carlos of Portugal, the Prince Imperial and the incidents which led up to it—the dissolution of Parliament last May which was opposed by conservatives and liberals; the king and his minister, Franco, ruling by royal decree, which evidently did not suit the people. The excavation of Herculaneum, the conserving of our timber lands and the American home for the historic flag of the Chesapeake, etc., was a most interesting and instructive discourse.

A general discussion followed, led by Mr. Richards, on current events of interest, participated in by Mr. Louis Emerick and others, and a very full explanation of the temperance question in America and England by Mr. Richards, brought the program to a close.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Sawtelle, on Monday evening, Feb. 17. The leaders will be the Rev. F. A. Miller and Prof. Paul Hagar.

OSWEGO WATERSHED ASSOCIATION.

Important Meeting Held, Officers Elected and Resolutions Adopted.

The organization known as the Oswego Watershed Association met in this city on Saturday afternoon. The meeting was held in the City Hall and there was a large attendance of manufacturers of the Oswego, Oneida and Seneca watersheds. The association was formed for the purpose of fully equipping the manufacturers to present their interests collectively before the authorities of the State with a view to the protection and conservation of the natural resources of the locality.

The following officers were elected: President, F. A. Emerick, Oswego; secretary and treasurer, G. C. Warner, Phoenix; vice presidents, M. C. Murgatroyd of New York, C. B. Benson of Minetto, E. J. Rogers of Waterloo, S. M. Coon of Oswego, George Campbell of Baldwinsville, J. Harroun Howe of Fulton and C. V. Tooke of Syracuse; advisory board, S. M. Coon and H. L. Howe of the Oswego dam; F. B. Dilts and J. Harroun Howe of Fulton lower dam; C. B. Benson and D. B. Page of Minetto dam; the Mayor of Oswego and the chairman of the Oswego Water Board, or their successors, of Oswego high dam; H. Lester Paddock and J. W. Stevenson, or their successors as agents of the American Woolen Company, of Fulton upper dam; T. C. Sweet and M. C. Murgatroyd of Phoenix; J. C. Kenyon and George Campbell of Baldwinsville and E. J. Rogers of Waterloo.

"Whereas, We, the members of the Oswego River Watershed Association, representing business and manufacturing interests and the owners and users of water and water power in the watersheds of the Oswego, Seneca and Oneida rivers and their tributaries comprising more than 5,000 square miles of territory and drawing water from ten counties of the State of New York, and represent the employers of 169,327 wage earners; and

"Whereas, We are informed that the authorities of the State of New York are recommending that certain of the water powers of the State be conserved and augmented of which recommendation we heartily approve; and

"Whereas, Much of the work that the State of New York has done in the watersheds of the Oswego, Seneca and Oneida rivers has been a detriment to the waters and water powers therein, having lowered levels of lakes, destroyed storage basins and otherwise diminished the natural flow of the rivers; and

"Whereas, The plans for the enlargement of the improved Erie and Oswego canals provide for other work that will seriously affect the waters and water powers and the businesses dependent thereon in these watersheds, through lowering of water levels and through engineering plans having little regard for the said water powers.

"Now, Therefore, be it resolved, that we do protest against the spending of money by the State for the conserving and augmenting of other water powers unless conditions be remedied, and attention be given to the water powers in the Oswego, Seneca and Oneida watersheds."

Copies of this resolution are to be furnished to the proper State officers. The officers of the association were empowered to appoint any further officers, members of committees or to fill vacancies, their appointees to hold office until the next regular meeting of the association or until their successors shall have been elected.

Barge Canal Work Suspended.

Superintendent of Works F. C. Stevens, pursuant to action by the Canal Board, had suspended the work on the barge canal at this city, under the contract held by Moshier & Summers, of Buffalo. A dispatch says:

"The action of the Canal Board is based on the certificate of State Engineer and Surveyor that the work was not being performed in such manner as accords with the contract and to the best interests of the State, the certificates being based on the fact that the contractors either failed or refused to comply with the order of the State Engineer to proceed with the work of constructing lock No. 2, covered by the contract, in accordance with the plans and specifications, though such orders were given in writing repeatedly.

"Under the resolution of the Canal Board the Superintendent has directed subordinates to take charge of the plant of the contractors pending further steps to be taken, and has called upon the State Engineer and Surveyor to take an inventory of the plant and determine as to its capacity, and has set February 13th as the date when the contractors and sureties on their bonds are to appear for the purpose of giving such information as may be necessary to enable the Superintendent of Public Works to determine what future action will be taken with respect to this contract.

"Under the terms of the contract, based on the law, two methods are open: One, to cancel the contract and perform the work by the State forces under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Works; the other, to cancel the contract and re-advertise and relet it. Neither process would result in relieving the bondsmen on the original contract.

"The contract covers the construction of the section of the canal at Fulton, as well as the construction of locks 2 and 3, dams, bulkheads, and other incidental work, and was let to Mosier & Summers June 7th, 1906. The contract provides that the work shall be completed by July 1st, 1909.

"The thing that has led to present complications is the location of one of the proposed locks, as stated yesterday, the contractors claiming that its construction during the closed season of navigation on the Oswego canal is an impossibility. Under the contract the prices bid by the contractors cover the maintenance of navigation."

State Grange.

The annual report of the Secretary of the State Grange submitted at the annual meeting in Hornell shows a total membership of 77,000 on September 30th, an increase of 6,179 for the year. The total number of Granges in the State is 673, of which thirty-five are in Oswego county.

The membership in this county is 4,429, an increase of 139 over last year, making the Oswego County Pomona the fifth largest in the State.

Among the resolutions introduced at the meeting was one by Herman Kandt of Oswego county, relative to the maintenance of academic schools.

Officers were elected, F. L. Godfrey of Otean, being renamed as Master. In his annual address Mr. Godfrey declared for the Government construction of the barge canal and for the pushing of the good roads work. Other officers elected were:

Overseer, W. H. Vary, Watertown.
Lecturer, S. J. Lowell, Fredonia.
Steward, J. M. Powell, Hornell.
Assistant Steward, R. W. Eggleston, Wadham's Mills.
Chaplain, S. J. Robbins, Fairport.
Treasurer, W. L. Bean, McGraw.
Secretary, W. N. Giles, Skaneateles.
Gate Keeper, John Krause, Monroe.
Flora, Mrs. P. S. Aldrich, Palmyra.
Ceres, Miss Eva Finger, Germantown.
L. A. S., Mrs. Mervin H. Lent, Peekskill.
Executive Committee for three years, W. W. Ware, Batavia.

Masonic Election.

The grand chapter of the Royal Arch Masons of the State, in their one hundred and eleventh annual convocation elected the following officers: Willis W. Rice, Grand High Priest, Watertown; Charles C. Hunt, Deputy Grand High Priest, New York City; Jay B. Kline, Grand King, Syracuse; Edward F. Hill, Grand Scribe, Peekskill; James B. McEwan, Grand Treasurer, Albany; Christopher G. Fox, Grand Secretary.

High School Notes.

The A. K. A. fraternity gave a delightful dance in Church's hall on Friday evening. Refreshments were served at 11:30 o'clock by the members of the fraternity and dancing continued until 2 a. m. The hall had been tastefully decorated in purple and gold, the fraternity colors, by M. Katz & Co.'s trimmer and music was furnished by Wilson's orchestra. The out-of-town guests present were Messrs. John Gallagher and Fred Gallagher of Phoenix and Mr. and Miss Hilbert of Oswego. The faculty was represented by Professors Wilcox and Hager and Misses Fox and Phillips.

The P. K. G. sorority will enjoy a straw ride on Friday evening.

A farce under the direction of Miss Daisy Lounsberry will be presented in the near future by High School talent and everyone should plan to attend, for their own amusement as well as for the financial aid they can render the Athletic Association. Messrs. Graham Draper, George Johnston and Harry Andrews, the committee in charge, have secured Miss Lounsberry to drill the participants in the farce, and this guarantees a success. The Athletic Association, for whose benefit the entertainment will be given are heartily grateful to Miss Lounsberry for her assistance.

Manager Milnes has postponed the basketball game scheduled for Friday evening until Saturday evening of this week. A preliminary game is being arranged between the Sophomores and the Freshmen. This game should be well patronized to aid the Association in clearing up the deficiency in the treasury.

Matter Decided.

Health Officer Russell has received a decision from the State Board of Health to the effect that the local Board of Health has jurisdiction over all buildings or parts thereof, so far as means of ingress and egress are concerned. This is in accordance with section 1, of the State laws. The Board of Fire and Police have jurisdiction so far as fire limits, etc., are concerned.

Dr. Russell has been making a careful study of the subject of fire escapes that the Board might make no mistake in its decision and he now believes that the very best one possible has been decided upon and the proprietors of the several places condemned by the Board are desirous of installing them as speedily as they can be secured.

"THE MAN OF THE HOUR."

At Welting Opera House, Syracuse, Week of Feb. 17.

"The Man of the Hour," George Broadhurst's play which holds a record of two years' continuous run at the Savoy Theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the Welting Opera House Syracuse, for one week, beginning next Monday, Feb. 17. It is a timely play, full of dramatic incidents, with plenty of comedy, and telling a story of human interest. Dealing with one of the most burning topics of the day. The "grafting" of the political "machine" in many of the great cities of this country is the central theme of the story, particular delineation being the passage of a bill through the city council giving a perpetual franchise to a street railway.

The love interest in "The Man of the Hour" is that of the young mayor of the town for the young niece of the financier who is responsible for the bill. She has told her lover that in order to win her hand he must prove worthy, but it is at the risk of jeopardizing her fortune and losing her as well that the young mayor keeps up the fight of his life against the "bosses."

The company is one of the strongest ever assembled for the production of an American play and includes such well-known players as Orrin Johnson, Robert A. Fischer, Harold Russell, George C. Stiles, Thomas Meighan, William Dearing, Samuel C. Hunt, Bennet Southard, Samuel Forrest, Frank Russell, Basil West, Edward Culver and the Misses Francis Ring, Louise Everts and Kate Lester. Matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday and the sale of seats will begin Friday, Feb. 14.

President Roosevelt says "It is the best play he has ever seen."

The February American Boy

The boys will certainly smile over the picture (in colors) of the boy and the lemon which adorns the front cover of the March AMERICAN BOY. The paper itself is replete with stirring, interesting and instructive matter. There are further installments of the five serials: Jimmie Jones, Pirate; that Dillingham Boy; Canal and Jungle; and Four Boys on the Mississippi. Among the short stores are: A Retreat from the World, and Old Joshua. The Tragic Story of Pirates and Cannibals in Big Aquarium will incite the boys to greater interest in the inhabitants of the sea. General Washington's Life-Guard is an interesting story of the men who formed the personal body-guard of the revered Washington. A Great Boys' Club Journey gives an account of a walking tour of the Columbia Park Boys' Club. There are hundreds of shorter articles, all interesting, while the regular departments are as usual filled with matter which boys like. In addition, there are nearly 100 illustrations. $1.00 a year, The Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.

Bachelor Seal Skin.

"This skin," said the furrier, "came from a young seal bachelor, a youth ignorant of love and of life."

"How do you know?" the lady asked.

"By its fineness, its perfection," he replied. "The pile, you will note, is like close cut velvet. Only bachelor seal skins have such a pile.

"The bachelor seal," he went on, "has a rather sad life. The big bull seals in the seal islands have each a household of fifteen or twenty wives, but the young bachelors must herd by themselves. Let one of them attempt to marry and straightway a bull slays him. Not till he is big enough to fight and conquer a bull—not till he is fourteen or fifteen years old—can he know the delight of settling down in a home of his own.

"He leads a hard, ascetic, celibate life, only in the end as like as not to make a lady a very fine coat. All the very fine coats, I repeat, are made from the unhappy bachelor seals."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

His Nerve.

Speaking of a Wall street operator, a broker said: "The man's nerve is amazing. It shocks me. It reminds me of a money lender to whom a friend of mine, a great rider to hounds, once resorted.

"'Yes,' said the money lender to my embarrassed friend, 'I will renew your note, but only on one condition, sir—namely, that during the next paper chase at Lenox you scatter from your bag these 5,000 pink slips bearing my name and the words, "Money advanced on easy terms." Is it a go, sir?'"

Chemical.

In Prestbury churchyard, near Macclesfield, England, may be found the following epitaph on a chemist:

Willie's dead—we're full of woe—
We'll never see him more.
He thought to drink of H^2O,
'Twas H^2SO^4.

Brutally Frank.

Scribbles—When I take a dislike to a man I use him as the villainous character in one of my novels. Criticus—Ah, I see! You punish the poor fellow by burying him alive, as it were.

His Early Struggles.

"Tell me about your early struggles, grandpa."

"Oh, I never had no early struggles, Johnny. I allus took things jest as they come."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

At times when you don't feel just right, when you have a bad stomach, take something right away that will assist digestion, not something that simulates for a time, but something that will positively do the very work that the stomach performs under ordinary or normal conditions, something that will make the food digest. To do this you must take a natural digestant like Kodol For Dyspepsia. Kodol is a scientific preparation of vegetable acids with natural digestants and contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. Each dose will digest more than 3,000 grains of good food. It is sure to afford prompt relief; it digests what you eat and is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

The End Came Another Way.

A distinguished actor was one time engaged at one of our leading provincial theaters in a drama in which he attempts an escape from a convict prison, first by getting rid of his fetters by means of a file and lastly by getting over the prison wall. In the act of doing this he is shot at by a warder and killed.

One particular night the drama had run its usual course up to the point where the actor attempts the escape over the prison wall. The warder, as usual, presented his rifle, but instead of a loud report nothing but a faint clicking sound was heard. The rifle was lowered and after a brief delay again pointed, but with the same disappointing result.

The audience now began to hiss and jeer. The disgusted actor then got off the prison wall and, staggering toward the footlights, exclaimed, "It's all up—I've swallowed the file!" and fell prone on the stage amid the laughter and applause of the audience. — Pearson's Weekly.

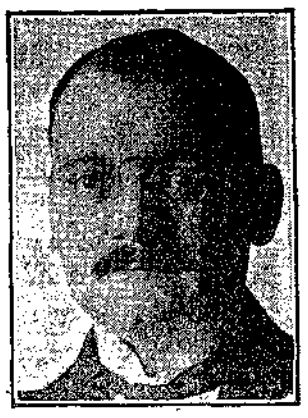
Secretary to The President.

The Office Has Been a Stepping Stone to Higher Honors—The Case of William Loeb, Jr.



THE position of secretary to the president has come to be regarded as a stepping stone to higher honors or more lucrative posts. George B. Cortelyou stepped from this position to that of first secretary of the new department of commerce and labor, later becoming postmaster general and then being promoted still further to the highly important post of secretary of the treasury, one of the most honorable in the gift of the chief magistrate. Mr. Cortelyou is now in the list of presidential possibilities.

Dan Lamont, as everybody used to call him, stepped from the position of private secretary to that of secretary of war in the cabinet of President Cleveland. Retiring from political life, he became a street railway magnate and when he died was worth millions. William Loeb, Jr., has been President Roosevelt's secretary since Mr. Cortelyou, in 1903, surrendered the post to accept a higher one. He was secretary to Mr. Roosevelt when the latter was in the executive chair at Albany, just as Colonel Lamont was secretary to Mr. Cleveland when our only ex-president was governor of the Empire State. When Mr. Roosevelt became vice president Mr. Loeb continued as his private secretary and on his accession to the presidency became assistant secretary to the president, serving under Mr. Cortelyou at first and thus demonstrating his ability to fill a higher position when the latter's promotion left a vacancy.

Mr. Loeb's tact has sometimes been questioned. But a man cannot always please everybody in a post so trying as that of secretary to the nation's presiding officer. The fact that for five years he has stood off those who like to take the president's valuable time unnecessarily and has made few enemies proves him a man of diplomacy. To help Mr. Roosevelt in the preparation of his 30,000 word messages, not to mention the voluminous state papers and correspondence of every description incident to the daily routine at the White House or the interviews and statements given out to the numerous press correspondents at the capital, requires no small amount of executive ability. There has been talk recently to the effect that Mr. Loeb would leave Mr. Roosevelt's service before long in order to take up duties as head of a Washington traction corporation. There has also been gossip about the probability of his being promoted to the cabinet the next time a vacancy occurs.

Mr. Loeb draws the comparatively modest sum of $5,000 a year as secretary to the president. It has been said that he might now be receiving $25,000 a year instead of $5,000 if he were doing the same work for a corporation that he is doing for Mr. Roosevelt and the nation, for he is a sort of "deputy president." Mr. Roosevelt himself is a tremendous worker. But he could hardly accomplish what he does were he not seconded in his efforts by a man who is able to be his second self, who is able, like himself, to lead a strenuous life, to stand as a buffer between the chief executive and a thousand and one persons and things pressing upon him and in danger of leaving him no time or energy for his most important duties.

Secretary Loeb is at his work so early and so late that he does not have much time for exercise, yet he keeps up to the mark physically and at forty-one is a good specimen of robust manhood. His favorite method of getting air and exercise is horseback riding, in which he indulges as often as he can. Though he calls himself only a "park rider," he can do a few tricks in that line as well as the president. When he was making preparations for his first trip with Mr. Roosevelt on a hunting expedition he heard the guides planning to give him for a mount a horse that in trotting would have shaken one of the pyramids from its foundations. But Loeb never gave the nag a chance to trot. He loped all the way to the president's camp and all the way back again, and the guides had to lope too. This programme was repeated day after day until the guides were so sore they could hardly walk. One of them went to the secretary and said:

"We picked you for a tenderfoot, but you ain't none. We're the tenderfeet, and if you'll just ride this other hoss and let him trot we'll be much obliged."

Loeb sticks closer to his chief than a brother. Vacations for him are few and far between. When he married the charming Miss Katherine Derr of Albany the president could spare him less than a week for his wedding trip. After he brought his bride to Washington he tried on three successive evenings to take her to the theater to see a play they both desired especially to witness. Each time an emergency called him back to the White House before he reached the theater door. Yet when asked awhile ago how he liked his office the secretary promptly replied:

"Best of anything I ever did. Wouldn't trade it for any job under the government."

People Mentioned In the Dispatches.

C. A. PEARSON.

THE so called "newspaper magnate," Cyril Arthur Pearson, who has been negotiating for control of the London Times, was once described by Joseph Chamberlain as "the greatest hustler I ever knew outside of America." He resembles President Roosevelt in his strenuousness and marvelous capacity for work. To most men the editing and publishing of one newspaper or magazine would seem a task of sufficient magnitude, but Mr. Pearson is never satisfied unless he has a big string of publications to look after. When it was rumored one time that he was about to start a newspaper in New York Mr. Pearson was asked his ideas about American newspapers and replied:

"I am not competent to criticise them, but from my standpoint I think they invade the privacy of the home too much and the rights of private citizens. I admire the enterprise of the American publisher, but I do not always admire the contents of his newspaper. It has seemed to me that too much prominence is given in your papers to trivial matters."

As to becoming an American journalist himself Mr. Pearson added:

"Heaven forbid! I don't want to be in American journalism. I prefer to live a little while I'm alive and not work twenty-five hours a day trying to cater to any public, however many millions there may be in it. Journalism is too strenuous in America for an editor who wants to edit and enjoy life at the same time."

Mr. Pearson is a son of a clergyman and only forty-two years old, a graduate of Winchester college and the reputed owner of a score of daily, weekly and monthly publications, including the London Standard, for which he is said to have paid $3,500,000.

Irving B. Dudley, who figured prominently in the doings at Rio de Janeiro on the arrival of Admiral Evans' fleet at that port, was appointed ambassador to Brazil to succeed Lloyd Griscom when the latter was made our first ambassador to Japan. Mr. Dudley is popular with Latin Americans and is making a most creditable record at the capital of the largest of the South American republics. When the officers of the American fleet were received by the Brazilian president, Dr. Penna, they drove, after the functions at the Brazilian White House, to the home of Mr. Dudley, where a superb banquet was given. The house and grounds were illuminated by Venetian lanterns and colored electric lights. Within, the salons were ablaze with graceful illuminations and gorgeous with the coloring of quantities of flowers. The tables were laid in two of the salons and were united by an arch of flowers.

IRVING B. DUDLEY.

Ambassador Dudley in an address said: "It is for me a great and deep satisfaction to call your attention to the warm welcome of the Brazilian government and the good people of this city have prepared for the fleet. I am confident that our people at home are keenly appreciative of the courtesy and honors being extended to you at this time by a friend of long standing, the friend who has stood the test, the United States of Brazil."

Turning to his Brazilian guests, Ambassador Dudley said:

"Permit me, gentlemen, to thank you sincerely for the welcome you have extended our fleet, and at the same time I have the honor and the pleasure of proposing the health of his excellency, your illustrious president, Dr. Penna, and that your great and noble nation continue long in the path of peace and prosperity."

The Finishing Touch.

While the organ grinder ate the thickly buttered slice of bread on the back porch the summer resident who had provided the repast amused herself by trying to turn the crank of the organ steadily.

"It must be quite difficult to turn the crank in such excellent time as you do," she said at last.

"No hard if you no have da monk," replied the organ grinder, with a melancholy smile. "Turna da crank, keepa da time and watcha da monk—dat taka da arteest!"—Youth's Companion.

NEW YORK FOR HUGHES

As Governor Enters Presidential Race, Republicans Unite to Support Him.

Chairman Woodruff of the State Committee Outlines Policy of the Organization.

In a speech at the dinner of the Richmond county Republican committee, given at the St. George hotel, Staten Island, Tuesday evening, Feb. 4, ex-Lieutenant Governor Timothy L. Woodruff, among other things, said:

"I understand that here in Richmond county you have not adopted resolutions indorsing Governor Hughes for the presidency. Neither have we in Kings county. Over there we took the dignified position that until the governor authorized support of his candidacy and made known his views regarding the great questions of the hour we would not be driven into premature declarations by a few men, some of whom were obviously actuated by purely personal and others by ulterior political motives.

"Furthermore, we knew that this forcing process in many cases, both in Kings county and elsewhere, was being resorted to for the sole purpose of disparaging President Roosevelt in the eyes of the American people, for whose welfare he has certainly tried to do as much as the most illustrious of his predecessors. It is now perfectly apparent to all, as it has been to many of us for a long time, that nothing could be more destructive of Governor Hughes' chances of securing the Republican nomination for president than the conduct of his campaign by those who are everywhere recognized as the enemies of the president and the opponents of the policies which will make his administration immortal in American history.

"At no time have I or those associated with me in the management of party affairs in Kings county or in the state been opposed to the candidacy of Governor Hughes for the presidential nomination, and now that he has signified his willingness to have his name presented to the national convention and declared himself a supporter of what all true Republicans consider the principles and policies of our party and in sympathy with the administration of President Roosevelt the Republican organizations of the various counties and of the state should and certainly will give him their sincere and steadfast support.

"The only apparent opposition that has at any time developed has been due solely to the efforts of certain individuals in various parts of the state to take advantage of the governor's availability as a presidential candidate to raise themselves into personal prominence, or to bolster up waning political fortunes, or to gain factional advantage at the expense of the organization as now constituted by the votes of the Republican electors at the last primaries, or to ultimately bring about the nomination of some other candidate altogether who stands in opposition to the present policies and principles of the Republican party. I have maintained that Governor Hughes' availability, springing, as it does, largely from the success attending his administration as governor of the state, should be recognized by all patriotic and unselfish Republicans as belonging to the party which made him its standard bearer in the last gubernatorial campaign. It has seemed as though it were the duty of all such Republicans to resent any attempt to seize upon this asset of the whole party and appropriate it for purely personal or factional gain.

"Up to the present time the movement to nominate Governor Hughes, instead of partaking of a broad, enlightened effort to educate the people of the state and particularly of the country concerning his unusual intellectual attainments, his great legal abilities and his almost unparalleled services to the state as its chief executive, has degenerated into a petty factional attempt to use the governor's great name to discredit the men who have been officially selected to bear the responsibility of party management in their respective districts and in the state at large. Some of these would be leaders have been trying to fool the people into the belief that they are entitled to a place at the head of the procession in the campaign for Governor Hughes' nomination when most of us are aware that many of them don't know from experience what the work of any kind of a political campaign really is. A few of these self constituted boomers, I regret to be obliged to say, have done their best at one time or another to belittle Republican principles and disintegrate the Republican party, having even gone to the length, it is said on good authority, of supporting Hearst against Governor Hughes a year ago last fall. Some one might ask the president of the Hughes State league if he has any idea to whom I refer. The most disappointed lot of advocates of any cause in the recent political history of our state are those who have been wildly shouting for Hughes now that the men who are really politically potential in their respective districts and in the state at large, have, upon the governor's invitation, made him his party's candidate. In these references to attempted machinations for personal and political advantage I do not, of course, include the honest and sincere efforts of many clubs and associations, such as the Republican Club of the City of New York, to which I have the distinguished honor to belong. Governor Hughes' recent declarations have clarified the political atmosphere and given to us who are his true friends and to all who are willing to join with us the very great privilege of presenting him to the national convention of our party as New York's choice for the great office of president of the United States.

"At the Republican state convention a year ago last fall many of us, including the able leader of Richmond county, Borough President George Cromwell, early appreciated the tower of strength the great insurance investigator would prove to be as our candidate for governor. Throughout the subsequent campaign we all did our full share to secure his election. In all my political activities, extending over a period of more than twenty-five years, I have never, not even for myself, worked with such zeal and energy as I did in that hard fought contest. From the first hour of Governor Hughes' administration until the present time I have been ever willing and anxious to do all in my power to aid him in attaining the fullest measure of success for his administration. At the memorable dinner of the Republican Club of New York shortly after his election you will remember that I unreservedly pledged to him the support of the state organization, and last spring I called a special meeting of the state committee to approve the legislation then pending at Albany, in the passage of which the governor was particularly interested. Neither the Republican organization nor I have any apologies to offer to any one for our attitude toward Governor Hughes or his administration.

"The presidential primaries are fixed by law to be held on the last Tuesday of March, which this year will be the 31st of that month. At these primaries delegates will be elected to the congressional district conventions, each of which will elect two delegates and two alternates to the national convention. There will also be elected at these primaries delegates to assembly district conventions, each of which will elect its quota of delegates to a state convention which will be held pursuant to a call of the state committee about the middle of April. At this convention there will be chosen four delegates at large and their alternates, two electors at large, an elector for each congressional district and a new state committee. Of particular importance, then, are these spring primaries; hardly less important than those of next September for the election of delegates to another state convention at which will be nominated a complete state ticket.

"Let all honorable Republicans of this, the foremost state of the Union, put forth every effort to insure the election of district delegates and delegates at large who will be recognized everywhere as thoroughly representative men on whom the electors of the party can safely rely to reflect the sentiment in the state as it exists at the time of holding the national convention. This sentiment is strongly for Governor Hughes. I, for one, am confident that if those who have been, for the present at least, deprived of political influence and power by their Republican constituents will honestly cooperate with us in promoting the object for which we should all now be united the sentiment for Governor Hughes' nomination will increase greatly, not only in New York state, but throughout the length and breadth of the land.

"When these delegates from New York meet their fellow delegates from other states at Chicago, the most careful deliberations will be given to candidates and platform, and the wisest counsels will certainly prevail. Out of these counsels and deliberations there will emerge a candidate for president whose character and qualification will inspire the confidence and support of a majority of the people of the land and victory will again perch upon the standards of the party to which we proudly give our allegiance and to whose principles and policies we are devoted. We are convinced that this result can be achieved by the nomination of Charles E. Hughes, whose name will be enthusiastically presented to the Republican national convendion by a solid delegation from the state of New York."

More to Come.

"Richard Mansfield," said a theatrical manager, "took the greatest pains to keep his figure perfect, and indeed he succeeded well in this. Such shapely legs and arms, such a slim, supple waist, such a broad back and deep chest never graced an American stage before.

"Mr. Mansfield insisted on good figures. He would not permit his players to get too fat or too thin. Some he made diet; some he made exercise. And, to show the figure's importance, he used to tell them a story about Henry Irving, a story told by Irving himself.

"Irving when he was young was a very skeleton. He once had a chance in the provinces to play Hamlet. The salary was good for the provinces—I think Mr. Mansfield said it was $8 a week—and if the actor got on well the first night his fortune was made.

"But when Irving made his first night's appearance in the black tights of the Danish prince one gallery god shouted across to another:

"'Is that him, Bill?'

"'No,' Bill roared back. 'Them's only the young feller's clothes. They'll shove him out later on!'"

Directing Folks in Boston.

The stranger had been searching nearly half an hour among the mysterious curving ways of the park for Fenway street. At last the trim figure of a hurrying student attracted her eye, and she resolved to ask for the necessary information.

"Can you tell me, please, where Fenway street is?" she asked.

"Yes, indeed," answered the student. "Why, we're in it now."

"Yes?" The stranger looked rather helplessly around at the wealth of shrubbery, the smooth roads that seemed to lead only to Mrs. Gardner's green roofed palace. "But I wanted to find a certain number on Fenway street."

"Oh!" said the student, a helpless expression for a moment clouding her face.

"Do you know, there's a street down there." She pointed a daintily gloved hand straight into a clump of elms. "I don't know the name of it. I never did know that it had a name. Why don't you try that one?"—Boston Herald.

Pretty Strong Lungs.

In "Through Luzon on Highways and Byways" the author, a naval officer, tells this expansive story. We vouch for the story only, not for the facts:

While traversing this attractive country, which offers so much to tempt the husbandman, we met with no sign of life until nearing a village, where could be seen native hunters after deer and carabao. The carabao furnishes a fine quality of meat and has a peculiar, instinctive craft in being the only denizen of the forest that can protect itself against the boa constrictors, which are somewhat numerous in these parts. When the carabao is pounced upon by the boa and the reptile has wrapped itself round the body for the squeezing process of killing the animal, the carabao slowly draws in its sides until the boa has his grip fixed securely and begins to tighten up, when suddenly the carabao inflates his lungs to their fullest and spreads his sides, tearing the vertebrae of the reptile into a thousand pieces.

How Tea Lead Is Made.

Tea lead for lining tea chests is superior at least from the standpoint of cheapness to any other metal. According to an article in the Brass World, the method practiced by the Chinese in the manufacture of tea lead is to press molten lead between two flat stones. The excess of lead is melted in an iron kettle by a direct fire underneath. Rice paper is carefully smoothed down over the surface of the stones to supply a nonconductor of heat and thus prevent the chilling of the lead. The stones are now placed flat upon the ground and the upper one raised a short distance, with one edge resting upon the lower stone. In other words, the stones are opened like a book. A ladle full of melted lead is now poured in between the stones, and the top one is quickly dropped. The lead is squeezed out until only a thin layer is left. Tea lead usually runs from .005 to .10 inch in thickness.

An Untamed Marquis.

The father of the Marquis of Bute had an amusing experience in the neighborhood of Rothesay. He met a cockney traveler who asked to be directed to a certain place. Deceived by the marquis' accent, the visitor took him for a southron and took occasion to make supercilious remarks about the barbarous islanders of Bute. He said, "Blime me, I suppose you're like me, an Englishman?"

"No," responded the marquis; "I'm a native of Bute, this island."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the Londoner, in amazement. "Then who in the dooce tamed yer?"

Lord Bute assumed a fierce expression and, raising a ponderous cudgel he was carrying, said angrily, "Who says I'm tame?" The alarmed cockney turned and fled.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Stories Told In the Cloakrooms

Senator Elect John Sharp Williams on Grammatical Errors—Representative Burton and His Wonderful Memory.

When Senator Johnston Posed as Gardener—Senator Crane, the Farm Boy and the Turkey.

WHEN John Sharp Williams, who has been promoted to the senate, takes his seat as one of Mississippi's senators, the house will lose one of its most entertaining story tellers. "The other day," he said recently, "I was amused by the remark of one of the messengers at a committee room door. He was disputing with another negro and in the most heated part of the argument said, 'That don't cut no signify.' I think that there never was a more ungrammatical expression than that except one. A man I knew went into a restaurant in Mobile and asked the waiter to bring him some underdone roast beef. The waiter came back with a piece that was pretty well done, and the man protested.

"'Best we got, mister,' said the waiter. 'We ain't got none that's no underdoner.'"

The new senator has to stand some good natured rallying now and then because of the name of the place from which he hails, Yazoo. It was the Washington Star which recently printed under a cartoon of the genial minority leader the following stanza:

WILLIAMS OF MISS.

If you say to this man, "Who are you? Where's your home? Oh, tell me, pray do!"
He will stare for awhile,
With a quizzical smile,
And reply, "J. S. Williams, Yazoo."

Marcus Aurelius Smith, territorial delegate from Arizona, tells a story of a girl who broke her engagement with the man she was to marry.

"Why did you break your engagement?" asked a friend.

"Oh," she replied, "I just couldn't marry a man with a broken nose."

"But how did the poor chap get his nose broken?"

"Why," said the young woman, "I accidentally hit him with my brassie when he was teaching me to play golf."

Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts is a somewhat serious minded man, befitting one whose paper mill manufactures the raw material out of which Uncle Sam's soft money is made. Nevertheless the senator can and does tell a funny story now and then.

"Once up in my part of Massachusetts," said the senator, "there was a farmer who desired to teach his chore boy how to tell the difference between a young turkey and an old one after killing. He said to the boy:

SENATOR CRANE—SECRETARY TAFT HUNTING CRANES IN MASSACHUSETTS.

"'Roger, can you tell a young turkey from an old turkey?'

"'I certainly can, sir,' replied the boy.

"'How do you tell?'

"'By the teeth.'

"The farmer was disgusted. 'My boy,' he said, 'that's silly. Turkeys have no teeth.'

"'No, but I have,' replied Roger."

Senator Crane was lieutenant governor and governor of Massachusetts before his appointment to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator Hoar. Later he was elected to a full term. Before his senatorial career began he declined the post of secretary of the treasury, it is said, because his acceptance would have made it necessary for him to sell his paper mill. His mill manufactures, under contract, the paper upon which our flexible currency is printed.

Senator Joseph F. Johnston of Alabama, who succeeded the late venerable Senator Pettus, has a sense of humor in nowise dulled by mature age and white hairs. Until Senator William J. Bryan of Florida, aged thirty, entered the august body a few weeks ago Johnston claimed to be a "baby senator" because he was one of the newest. He is considerably more than twice the age of Bryan.

One of the stories which Senator Johnston tells in the senate cloakroom is a joke partly on himself and partly on a society woman of Birmingham, where the senator lives in a handsome residence. One day Johnston was out in his garden hoeing some geraniums. Being clothed to suit the occasion, he did not present a dignified figure. The society lady, who was a newcomer and did not know the distinguished citizen by sight, sought to pay Mrs. Johnston a call. Her ring at the door not being answered, she walked into the garden to talk to the gardener.

"How long have you worked for the Johnstons?" she inquired.

"A good many years, madam."

"Do they pay you well?"

"About all I get out of it is my clothes and keep."

"Why, come and work for me," she said. "I'll do that and pay you so much a month besides."

SENATOR JOHNSTON AND A CARTOON OF HIM.

"I thank you, madam," he replied, bowing very low, "but I signed up with Mrs. Johnston for life."

"Why, no such contract is binding. That is peonage."

"Some may call it that, but I have always called it marriage."

Representative Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, whose work in the interest of rivers and harbors has made him a national figure, is quite different from the average congressman. He spends his spare time, it is said, reading French classics and English poetry. His bachelor apartments are strewn with books. Burton is something of a bookworm, though to excellent purpose. When McKinley was preparing to write his famous tariff bill, Burton supplied many of the important facts upon which the measure was based. McKinley appealed to Burton because he knew that Burton knew.

But despite Burton's bookishness and studiousness the man possesses truly human qualities like the average person. For one thing, he never forgets Jim Jones or Sam Simpkins. In Washington it is told of Burton that once an apparent stranger called to see him.

"How do you do, Mr. Smith?" was Burton's greeting. "You are—let me see—you are Mr. William Smith, I believe. Back in—wait a minute now—back in 1892 you sat with me on a platform at a meeting in the Twenty-third ward."

And Mr. William Smith gasped, for that was so. He and Burton had not met since nor before, but Burton "had him spotted." It may be that Mr. Burton's systematic study has resulted in giving his memory such a thorough training that it retains even trivial impressions like this.

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate womanly organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form at once witness to the fact in restored comeliness. Nearly a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. Made wholly of those native, American, medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken-down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers, to prepare the system for the coming of baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine nicely adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments.

The Story of Zero.

The word "zero" is from the Spanish and means "empty," hence nothing. It was first used for a thermometer in 1795 by a Prussian named Fahrenheit. By experimenting with snow and salt Fahrenheit found that he could produce a degree of cold equal to that of the coldest winter day. It happened that the day on which he made his final experiment was the coldest that anybody could remember, and, struck with the coincidence of his scientific discovery, he hastily concluded that he had found the lowest degree of temperature, either natural or artificial. He called the degree "zero" and constructed a thermometer graduating up from zero to boiling point, which he numbered 212 and the freezing point 32.

Thought He Could Buy Them Cheap.

Elderly German (as he calls at a lodging house door)—Gind lady, I saw, yes, der advertisement in der evening paper dat you have a pair of pajamas to sell, yes? Boarding House Mistress (indignantly)—Pajamas! You old fool, do you think this is a department store? Where is the advertisement? The German (producing the advertisement and reading it aloud)—"For sale, two almost new bedroom suit, cheap! Call and see it."—Bohemian.

The U. S. Government in its "Pure Food Law" does not endorse or "guarantee" any preparation, as some manufacturers in their advertisements would make it appear. In the case of medicines the law provides that certain drugs shall be mentioned on the label, and they are ingredients of the preparations. Ely's Cream Balm, the well known remedy for cold in the head, hay fever and nasal catarrh, contains a single injurious drug, so the makers have simply to print the fact that it complies fully with all the requirements of the law.

May Do It Now.

"In the olden times it is said that it was possible for a man to render himself invisible."

"Pshaw! That's not at all remarkable. Men in this country are doing it every day."

"You don't say so! How do they manage it?"

"By marrying famous women!"

How It Was Becoming.

"That dress is becoming, my dear," said the man who thinks he is a diplomat.

She looked at him coldly for a moment and then replied:

"Yes. It is becoming threadbare."

CONGRESSIONAL SITUATION.

The Congressional situation has become more excitingly complicated since a week ago, as within that time the Hon. Isaac Hunt of Adams has formally announced his candidacy for the Congressional honor. This gives each of the three counties comprising this Congressional District, a candidate — Congressman Knapp from Lewis; Judge Stowell from Oswego and Hon Isaac L. Hunt from Jefferson. It is highly probable that each candidate will be accorded the political courtesy of the delegates from his own county and that it will be left entirely to the convention to determine the victor.

Each candidate possesses many qualifications to recommend him to the electors and the various pros and cons regarding each, are being widely discussed. The campaign gives promise of being at least interesting but there is no evidence of its producing the bitterness nor the injustness of several campaigns not yet forgotten. The contestants are all men of known honor and reliability. Their fitness is unquestioned. Each has received many tokens of esteem from his constituents and each has rendered valuable service to his party

Republicans are predicting and hopefully anticipating a safe and sane campaign throughout the district for all of the County, State and National candidates. This is a boon devoutely to be hoped for.

WHATEVER may have been the weaknesses and faults of Portugal's late King, Carlos I, the world will remember him now only as a man, not as a ruler, and will recall that he was kindly disposed, cheerful and brave. The cause of republicanism in Portugal has been in no way promoted by this terrible assassination of the King and his heir, and outside of the kingdom the cause has been injured, as such crimes only serve to alienate the sympathy of true republicans. The reform of governmental abuses, under modern conditions, will never be accomplished by striking at the person of the sovereign. It is only by the pressure of a well directed and righteously inspired public opinion that such reforms can be brought about. The sympathy of the world will go out to the brave Queen Amelie, who tried to protect the life of her son with her own body, and who in the present crisis will have to face the responsibility of governing her people as Queen Regent, with all the wisdom and fortitude at her command.

THOSE over-anxious people who have feared that President Roosevelt would fall below that high dignity with which he has hitherto invested his office, now see that their fears were wholly unfounded, and if there are any who still doubt, let them carefully peruse the recent message to Congress and they cannot but be pleased with its poise, good sense and terse writing. This message will make the President stronger than he was before, as we believe that the country is back of the Roosevelt policies and that the further steps which he proposes will be ratified by public sentiment. These views are the legacy of Mr. Roosevelt's administration to the administrations which are to follow, and while they may not find expression in legislation this year, or next, or even the year following, they contain seed which is bound to bear forth good fruit in years to come. They are, therefore, of permanent value and deserve the careful and thoughtful consideration of the American people.

Recent decisions of the Supreme Court should demonstrate to organized labor that its real friends are not the men who are willing to pass any law the unions ask for, but those legislators who tell the unions frankly what is and what is not constitutional and who refuse to enact laws which will not stand the test of the courts.

Of all the guessing contests ever inaugurated the most popular seems to be the disposition of the present occupant of the White House after March, 4, 1909. The latest answer is a place in the Cabinet.

Subscribers Please Take Notice.

The new postal law makes it imperative that all newspaper subscriptions be paid promptly upon their expiration. We are left without choice in the matter. The law became effective on Jan. 1, 1908, and publishers were given 90 days in which to make collections. At the expiration of that time subscribers must be dropped from the list.

Will you assist us in making provision for this emergency by promptly remitting your subscription now due?

Foster Theatre.

Thomas Jefferson will be seen at the Foster Theatre on Friday evening, Feb. 14. He will be seen in "Rip VanWinkle," a play and character linked inseparable with the Jefferson name, and one that the theatre-goers never tire of. A visit from Mr. Jefferson is an event for lovers of clean, wholesome and high class dramatic work. Like all the Jeffersons there is something about him and his art that draws him closer to the playgoers' and the general publics' heart. His manner of life, his all round fondness for the ideal and artistic, his public and private associations, the gentleness and sweetness of his nature and the quiet, unostentatiousness with which he contributed to the glory and dignity of his profession, all recommend him as strongly as the heart, humanity and poetry he puts into his impersonations. No other character in the entire range of the drama has ever taken such strong and persistent hold on popular favor and esteem as Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle." He has been playing "Rip" now for eleven years. The secret of Mr. Jefferson's great success in the role is that he sincerely lives the character and that in enacting Rip VanWinkle he puts his soul and all the golden cheer of his own good nature into the portrayal, and that is why American audiences throng to and laugh over the play year after year.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

"Where You Get Your Money's Worth"

RIP VAN WINKLE.

In Fulton Under the Auspices of the D. A. R.

The Yonkers, N. Y., Statesman says in part regarding the work of George Kiernan who appears here February 22, in a recital of one of the Jefferson plays:

George Kiernan in "Rip Van Winkle," the concluding recital in his Jefferson Cycle, attracted to the hall of the Amackassin Club House, Saturday night, an audience that taxed its seating capacity to the limit. Once again he charmed and entertained with his magical impersonation of the great actor, and wove with the threads of memory a fabric so luminous and real that at times it seemed as if the personality of the creator of Rip was a "shadowy third" between the audience and Mr. Kiernan.

The following is from Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D. D., of New York:

I have had the pleasure of listening to the finished and artistic work of Mr. George Kiernan, and it gives me great satisfaction to recommend him most heartily as an honest and able, and in every sense competent portrayer of the character and of motive through his masterly elocution. His performances are high-class in every sense of the term.

Frank W. Gage, Ph. D., Shady Side Academy, Pittsburg, says:

Mr. Kiernan is one of the few public entertainers whom I am always ready to hear again, even in the same production. His Rip Van Winkle has the same perennial freshness as Joseph Jefferson's. His personality is winning and attractive. His impersonations are more than an entertainment; they are educational.

So greatly is Mr. Kiernan's artistic work appreciated among those who knew and loved the portrayals that Jefferson brought to the stage that his cycle of recitals are made society events in the larger cities, the subscription price being $5.00 to the three recitals.

The admission here will be within the reach of all who desire to avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this gifted artist.

One need not deny ones self the privilege of reading this desirable collection of new works of fiction when one realizes that any or all of the books may be taken home by any one, read and returned. The only rule to be observed is that two cents per day per book must be paid for the time the book is in the borrower's possession, when the book is returned.

On Thursday morning at 7 o'clock the fire department was called to the large storehouse of the Volney Paper company where a fire had started from spontaneous combustion deep in the center of the bales of rags stored therein. The smoke was so dense and the outlets so inadequate that it made the labor doubly hard for the fire fighters, several of them being forced to retreat. One fireman was completely overcome by the smoke and had to be carried from the building. The seat of the fire could not be determined until early midnight, but it was extinguished with ease as soon as it was located. The loss to the company is in the neighborhood of one thousand dollars.

P. A. Welling of Hannibal, who has just retired as treasurer of the New York State Grange, was presented with a handsome gold watch, chain and charm by the Grange at its annual meeting recently at Hornell. Mr. Welling served for twelve years as treasurer and has been succeeded by W. L. Bean of Cortland.

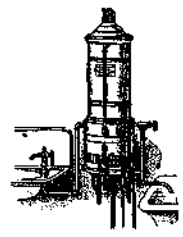
John Murphy, an employe of the Oswego Falls Pulp & Paper company, sustained a broken leg on Friday as the result of a piece of iron falling upon him. The injured man was removed to the hospital where Dr. L. F. Joy reduced the fracture.

The Grand Jury are taking an indefinite recess, commencing at 5 o'clock on Wednesday. It is not probable that they will reconvene until the report from the Comptroller's office relative to matters in the County Treasurer's office, is received. It costs the county about $100 per day when the Grand Jury is in session and the new evidence secured by Mr. Pitts and others can be received at that time as well as now.

The report of Chief of Police Ross shows sixteen arrests for the month of January—five were for public intoxication, five for assault in the third degree, one for assault in the second degree, one for grand larceny in first degree, one as a disorderly person and three on miscellaneous charges. Nine convictions resulted from the arrests, four of the accused persons were discharged, two are not yet disposed of and one was held for the Grand Jury.

Mr. A. J. Eller, foreman in the Times office, was called to Syracuse on Monday by the sad news that his grandmother, Mrs. Caroline F. Pfeiffer, aged 82, had been burned to death, while attempting to light a lamp with a piece of burning paper. She was alone in the house at the time and nothing was known of the dreadful accident until smoke commenced to issue from the kitchen window. Upon the firemen breaking in the door, the dead body, badly burned, was found on the kitchen floor.

One of the newest books in the Lasher Reading Club and one which is attracting a great deal of attention in the world of fiction, is "The stem of the crimson dahlia," by James Locke. The scene is in the Balkans; time, the present. Hero and heroine are both Americans who have become entangled in the web of Eastern intrigue, dragging with them, through a chain of curious circumstances, a young British diplomat who constitutes a character destined to celebrity. The action is of the swiftest and most exciting imaginable, and the panorama of Balkan life, diplomatic and political, is of the most fascinating kind.



The New York State Department of Agriculture Bureau of Farmers' Institutes, will hold a meeting at Fulton in the Universalist Church on Feb. 14th and 15th. The following speakers will be present: H. A Lion Tamer's Secret.

The bloodhound growled, and the great yellow lion leaped back in fear.

"The lion could kill the hound," the trainer said, "but he doesn't think so. He thinks the hound could easily kill him."

"Why?"

"When the lion was a cub this bloodhound, full grown, lived in the cage with him. The big dog could, of course, lick the little cub, and the cub therefore feared and respected him. Now the cub is grown up, but he still thinks the hound is the better. We rear a cub with a full grown hound in this way for a reason. The hound is a protection to our trainers afterward when the cub is grown, for then should he become rambunctious one look from the dog will send him, subdued and ashamed, slinking to the cage's far corner."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"Mr. Corrigan," said the Texan earnestly, "in business it may be a common thing to take advantage of another man when you can, and it may be foolish on my part to decline, but I tell you, sir, if I did a thing like that I could never look Miss Harriet in the face. To me it means more than money or dad or anything else. I may be a poor Englishman and a mighty bad actor, but I can't forget that I'm still a gentleman."

Richard looked his companion squarely in the eye and turned on his heel. He was about to stride angrily away when he felt two short plump arms clasped tightly around his waist and heard a laughing voice murmur in his ear:

"Oh, Dicky, Dicky, what a bully little minister you have spoiled! Sit down, young man, and let me tell you one thing soberly." He half dragged, half pushed Richard to a seat upon the bench and stood above him, resting two plump hands upon his shoulders. The laughter now was gone, and in its place came a wondrous tenderness. "My boy," he said, "I'd rather have seen you as you stood just now than as the owner of all deep water harbors that were ever dredged. You came here to win Harriet, and you're going to get her if I have to sit on Jacob Renwyck while you run off with the girl on Hawk—a la Lochinvar! God bless you, boy! I—I love you for what you said, and now I'm going to tell you something else."

Once more the merriment twinkled in the little gimlet eyes whose owner held his sides and shook from shoe to collar button. Richard waited patiently for Uncle Michael to speak, but that gentleman sat puffing his cigar and apparently studying the momentous question in all its lights and bearings.

"Dick," he said abruptly, "you have got yourself into a nice mess, haven't you? It's up to you to do something original. Any ideas on the subject?"

"Yes," said Richard; "I'm going to Mr. Renwyck this evening and make a clean breast of it. It's the only thing I can do."

Mr. Corrigan whistled softly.

"After which brilliant move I dare say you will apply for board in the state insane asylum."

"Any place will do for me after that," admitted the unfortunate adventurer.

"You would find its inmates congenial after you followed that course, I am sure, but if I were in your place I'd do nothing of the kind."

"Why not?"

"For various reasons. In the first place, what good will it do? Would you then be in a position to tell your father? No; you see that clearly for yourself. You will be invited to leave Irvington and will accept the invitation promptly. Thus endeth the first lesson. Miss Harriet Renwyck being the principal subject matter. Mr. Jacob Renwyck will then institute proceedings against one Bill Williams for obtaining information by fraud in the person of his son."

"But, my dear sir," cried Dick, with some asperity, "I had no such intention, I assure you. The information was—well, it was forced on me."

"Aha!" exclaimed the old lawyer knowingly. "That's just the delicate point. I'm speaking legally. Of course you're innocent. You know it, and I believe it, but how about a jury of your peers? To put it bluntly, you have taken the name of a wounded and helpless man without his knowledge or consent. You have bribed his servant. Bad point, Dick—very bad. Then you creep into a confiding old gentleman's house and worm away the secrets of his inmost heart. The alleged pursuit of the girl is merely a blind to cover your deep laid, crafty, nefarious designs, which"—

"Hold on, for God's sake!" vehemently protested Richard, appalled at the revelation of his perfidy by the lawyer's merciless logic, which was about as hard to bear as if it had been a truthful indictment. "Don't put it that way! You make me feel like an actual criminal. Next I'll be stealing their cut glass and silver hairbrushes."

"I am merely looking at it from a legal point of view," said the little man solemnly. "To confess to Jacob now is the very worst policy imaginable."

"Then what am I to do?" demanded the young man savagely.

"Brazen it out," advised his counsel, striving to suppress the dancing humor in his eyes. "But, for the Lord's sake, Dicky, boy, do brush up on English history."

"And what of dad?"

Mr. Corrigan began to chuckle and to rub his hands violently.

"I'm afraid," he said, with great conviction, "that Bill will have to play this hand alone. You can't help him, young man, and you've got to trust to luck. If your father finds out about the deal he may pull down Jacob's ladder; if not—well, I'm almost as sorry for Bill as I am for his son."

Richard drew his brows together in a troubled frown.

"And is that all the advice you can give me?" he asked, hoping against hope.

"No," said the little man; "there is one more suggestion, and a sound one, too, by George! My vision is a shade imperfect owing to creeping age, but I think I see Harriet over yonder under the trees. I, as your counsel, direct you to go and talk to her."

This last piece of advice was too good to be neglected, and Richard, dismissing his cares, followed it forthwith.

CHAPTER X.

WHEN the young Texan had got out of earshot Mr. Corrigan leaned back and laughed till his plump sides could stand the strain no more. Rarely had he passed so amusing and delightful a half hour. He lived the lonely life of a wealthy old bachelor, and the comedy had come to him in the shape of a godsend. He liked what he had seen of the young man immensely, and he was prepared to like him more for his father's sake, but he determined to make him suffer as much as possible in payment for his reckless assurance. Besides, he had another end in view, the success of which depended largely upon the son of his old friend Bill Williams. Every feature of the game was a joy to his merry heart, and in order to watch its progress he determined to be a frequent visitor at Restmore, which promised to belie its name and become a troubled spot, after all. Rising from the bench at last, he cut across lots toward his own home, half a mile away, measuring every stride with a sort of chuckling pedometer.

Meanwhile Richard followed the lawyer's counsel, not only as to closing his mouth with regard to Mr. Renwyck, but as to opening it without delay with regard to Mr. Renwyck's daughter. This at least was his intention, but he found himself once more disappointed. Miss Harriet was in her favorite seat on the lawn, with an open book resting in her lap. Richard's footfalls made no sound on the soft green turf, and, unconscious of his approach, before he was within hailing distance she arose abruptly and went into the house. He followed her forthwith, but just as he reached the veranda steps a sprightly little figure bounced out and greeted him effusively. Needless to say, it was not Miss Renwyck. Miss Imogene Chittendon was more fluffily irritating to the adventurer than usual. Her motions, like her manner of speech, were nervous and spasmodic, not unlike the movements of a humming bird over a bunch of honeysuckle, with the lord representing the fragrant blossoms.

"Why, Lord Croyland!" she twittered, with something between a giggle and a shriek, "how very fortunate! I was just going out to pick wild flowers. I've never picked wild flowers with a real nobleman. Please say you are just dying to give me a new experience."

She looked up at him with a baby-like air of innocence and admiration and laughed again.

"I—I should be delighted," said Richard, telling the first downright lie which had passed his lips since arriving at Irvington.

He relieved her of the absurd basket she was carrying on her arm and started across the fields, cursing inwardly at the fate which linked him with this troublesome and irresponsible little creature and striving outwardly to be decently polite to her. Unconscious of his cogitation, Miss Imogene fluttered at his side, now murmuring idiotic small talk into his bored ears, now pouncing with little squeals of delight upon some gaudily colored weed and depositing it in the basket.

"It is so good of you to come," she confided, with a melting glance. "It isn't heavy enough to tire you, is it? You are so strong, you know, and so brave."

She alluded to the basket, which weighed perhaps four ounces. Richard assured her that he thought he could stand the strain and that he was not in the least afraid of butterflies, the only living thing they had met so far, which brought forth a fresh outburst of gigglesome joy. Presently she took a seat upon a stone, begged him to do likewise and began fanning herself with her hat.

"Do you know," she whispered, "I think I shall trust you and tell you a secret."

"All right," he said carelessly. "Fire—er—I mean do so, by all means." He seated himself and added dramatically, "Believe me, maiden, it shall be sacred with me."

"There!" she cried in triumph. "I knew you could do it, though Harriet says flatly—just flatly—that you couldn't."

"Couldn't what?"

"Act."

"Well, she's right," agreed Richard "I can't. I've been told so before. Where do you get your strange delusions?"

Once more her big baby eyes looked upward with a pleading glance.

"But you'd try if I asked you, wouldn't you? You couldn't resist if I begged you—er—real hard, could you?"

"Nothing short of assassination could make me refuse you," said Richard, emphasizing the pronoun and looking sadly out across the Hudson. It was wrong, of course, but he couldn't help it, and really she was pretty enough to excuse so venial a lapse.

"Oh, you dear, delightful man!" chirruped the little lady. "Now, listen. Don't look at the river. Look at me."

"I dare not."

"Nonsense! You said you were not afraid of butterflies."

"I was wrong. I am of one."

"Don't be afraid of me. I won't hurt you," said the highly flattered girl laughingly.

"I breathe again. Go on."

"Well, Lord Croyland, we are going to have a little one act play on Friday evening, and you are in it, because you just said you would, and I know you will do it just beautifully, because I told Harriet you could, and, having promised, of course you can't refuse now, when everything has been"—

"I've never picked wild flowers with a real nobleman."

"Hold on; hold on!" interrupted Richard. "I'm sort of losing my grip on things. Slow down to a trot and let's get our bearings."

This sounded very unlike an English nobleman, but the young lady in her excitement failed to notice.

"You see," she began again, "the play is called 'The Man and the Bird.' You are the man, and"—

"And you are the bird," completed Richard. "I thought as much. Well, go on."

Miss Imogene dimpled with pleasure and applauded his quick perception.

"Yes," she said; "I am the bird, and you—it's only a play, you know, of course—and you're just desperately in love with me."

"I couldn't act that part. It's too real, and"—

"Oh, yes, you can! I thought you wouldn't find it difficult. I'll help you."

"That settles it. I'm lost."

"And, besides, it will make Cornelius Van der Awe just frantic. He isn't in the cast, you know. We've put him in the audience, and he has just to sit there and be wretched. Oh," she cried, "it will simply be too delicious! Don't you think so?"

"Rapturous, but dangerous for me," assented Richard gravely. "Is Miss Renwyck in the play?"

"Why, of course she is, stupid! She's getting it up herself and has the leading part."

Richard brightened. Private theatricals were not so silly, after all.

"What sort of a part will she play?" he asked.

"Oh, the serious part!" his companion advised him. "It's more real acting than mine, of course, but I like the love part best, don't you?" Richard nodded, and the debutante continued: "Harriet is the rich heiress, you know. And, oh, she's going to wear the Renwyck diamonds! Her father will bring them up from the city tomorrow night. She'll look awfully stunning in them. You are engaged to her—in the play, I mean—but you'll find out that you love me best, and it's an awfully exciting scene. You and I—in the play, I mean—you and I are in a room together, and you tell me how much you love me"—

"Hadn't we better practice a little bit now?"

"Don't you think you could do it without practice?"

"I shall need to acquire—er—restraint in the presence of such temptation, you know."

"Oh, I see. I guess it won't be necessary for you to be too restrained. It's beautiful, so impassioned—the language, you understand"—

"I shall try to live up to it."

"And just when you kiss me"—

"I'm sure it would be best for us to try that in private."

"Not at all. We can make believe about that part, you know."

"That's not true acting."

"Isn't it? Oh, we'll see about that later, and we needn't rehearse that anyway."

"But I'm sure to be so awfully awkward about that. I've had so little practice in my short life."

"You poor little innocent English man! We'll fix that later."

"Oh, happy hope!"

"Will you listen to me, Lord Croyland?"

"I'm silent."

"Harriet comes in and denounces you. Don't you think it's perfectly delicious?"

"Dazzling."

"Then it's settled. I'm so glad. Come on and let's dig up more roots."

Miss Imogene Chittendon proceeded to pick wild flowers. Mr. Richard Williams carried them in the four ounce basket and communed with himself. Denunciation at the present speaking was rather a sore subject with him and coming from the lips of the girl he worshiped in a one act play in which he was some one else was more than flesh and blood could stand. It had for definite a relation to his present circumstances to be comfortable. On the whole, he decided to get out of that play if he could. He did not want Harriet denouncing him, even in fun. She might have to do it in earnest later, and he did not wish her to have the advantage of a previous rehearsal. He was getting sensitive, he realized, but he wanted to see her alone, to talk with her as a kind of relief from the troubles that were gathering around him in uncomfortable, sticky coils. But at every turn his innocent purpose was frustrated, and he found himself in the clutches of some one else, an inquisitor like Michael Corrigan, a chatterbox like Miss Chittendon.

He was not so occupied with his thoughts, however, as to forget a plainsman's training, and during the latter half hour of his wild flower hunt he was conscious of a spy upon his trail. He had turned at some remark of his companion and had chanced to see a figure that dodged swiftly behind a bowlder some fifty yards away. He had paid no special heed to the occurrence. But when it was repeated twice he became convinced that some one was watching them—why, he could not imagine. As they neared Restmore Richard wheeled suddenly and spied the figure crouching along a boxwood hedge. It seemed a very strange affair, and he determined to get to the bottom of it. So, excusing himself on the steps of the veranda, he made a circuit of the house, cut across the rose garden and vaulted a fence into the road. The hedge ended at this point, and, to the vast surprise of two gentlemen, Richard came near to landing on the head of Mr. Cornelius Van der Awe.

One of Three Things.

Fred Jones, a man of no small dimensions, was a popular conductor on the Boston and Maine railroad, making daily trips between Boston and Plymouth. One day several years ago while collecting fares he encountered a man under the influence of liquor who would not show a ticket. After reasoning in vain with this passenger Mr. Jones said, "Now, see here, you'll have to do one of three things—give me a ticket, pay your fare or get off and walk."

"You've (hic) got to do one of three things," was the reply—"eat less (hic), hoop yerself (hic) or bust."

A Woman's Face.

No words can express the almost divine love and tenderness and the perfect trust and happiness of that girl wife's face as she looked into the eyes of her husband—and smiled. Other holiday impressions may grow dim and fade away, but that sweet woman's face remains stamped on my memory forever.—Wyona in London Reader.

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But then it doesn't really matter about growing old, if we grow in other ways, if we grow in wisdom, in kindness and patience and strength.

Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period than the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

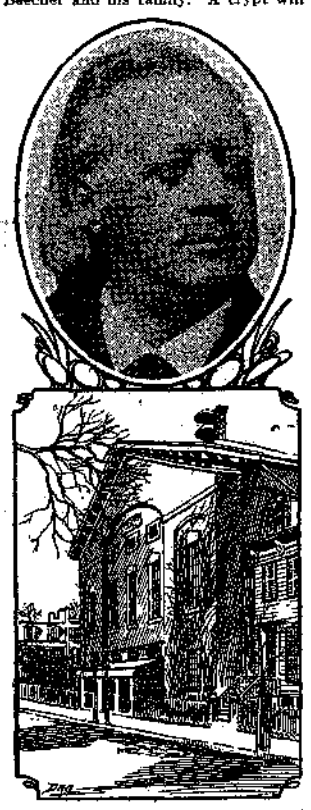
BEECHER MEMORIAL



A New Parish Building, a Park and a Second Statue Planned—Beecher's Old Pulpit Chair.

REV. DR. NEWELL D. HILLIS.

It is about five years since the long cherished dream of friends of Henry Ward Beecher regarding a suitable memorial to the great Brooklyn preacher began to take tangible form. It is over twenty years since Mr. Beecher's death. In the winter of 1903 a mass meeting was held in the old Brooklyn Academy of Music, since burned, at which the ideas of the promoters of the memorial were submitted to the public. Addresses were made by ex-President Grover Cleveland, Mayor Seth Low and other noted men, friends or admirers of the man who did so much in the course of his remarkable career for the cause of human liberty and liberal ideas. This meeting gave the project a good start. About one-half of the desired sum of $200,000 has since been raised, and some features of the proposed memorial have already been transferred from the realm of fancy to that of fact. Among the latter are the memorial windows depicting scenes in the history of the Puritans which were recently unveiled in Plymouth church, the scene of most of Mr. Beecher's ministry.

The memorial project has several phases. It is proposed to erect on a plot adjoining Plymouth church a fine parish building to be a center of work for the large population in the vicinity of the church. It will contain library, gymnasium, club and society rooms and a large auditorium for public meetings and lectures. One of its rooms will be a museum for souvenirs and relics connected with the history of Mr. Beecher and his family. A crypt will be built beneath it, with a door opening into the auditorium of the church, and here will be placed the remains of Mr. Beecher and his wife, which now repose in Greenwood cemetery. Four city lots across the street from the church will be converted into a park, and in the center of it will be a monument to Mr. Beecher. There is already a statue of him in Brooklyn borough. It occupies a conspicuous position in the plaza in front of the borough hall, is the work of the noted sculptor John Quincy Adams Ward and was erected in 1891. But it is felt that the immediate scene of his labors should also possess a monument containing his features and form in bronze.

Several years ago when the public authorities proposed to take two lots adjoining Plymouth church on the west for a public school the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the present pastor of the church, wrote in protest against the contemplated action and said:

"When a great man has lived in a city for forty years his dust belongs to his city and his tomb to our children and our children's children. The ideal thing is to use the two lots as a burial place for Mr. Beecher with the memorial room above, with his portraits, his manuscripts, his old pulpit and chairs, his writing desk, the manuscript of Mrs. Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin, Lyman Beecher's old pulpit from which he preached the sermon on 'Duelling' after the death of Hamilton and the five sermons on 'Independence,' with everything related to the career of Henry Ward Beecher in Brooklyn."

At the time Dr. Hillis wrote these words the memorial project had not taken definite form, but the authorities decided not to acquire the land for the purpose proposed, and fortunately it was thus left for use as the site of the memorial building. To carry out all the features of the plan will require some little time. Meanwhile the objects associated with Mr. Beecher's life work are being collected with the view of placing them in the museum or memorial room when it is completed. Prominent in this work is General Horatio C. King, one of Brooklyn's first citizens, a lifelong friend of Mr. Beecher and noted as civil war veteran, lawyer, orator, musical composer, writer, lecturer and after dinner speaker. He has in his own home numerous articles once owned by Mr. Beecher or in some way associated with his career. When the stained glass windows illustrating the history of the Puritans and their influence upon American institutions were dedicated in the old church recently those who attended the service noted on the platform a chair which to many had a familiar guise. It was the old chair which the friend of the slave and the exponent of freedom of thought in religious matters occupied in the pulpit for twenty years previous to 1869. It was in the latter year that the present pulpit and pulpit furniture were placed in the church. They were made out of a tree brought from the Mount of Olives, in Palestine, by Moses Beach, once owner of the New York Sun. Twenty years after its removal from the pulpit a search for the old chair once so familiar to attendants at Plymouth was instituted by Stephen M. Griswold, and it was found in the cellar covered with dust and almost crushed beneath the weight of several old and discarded pews. It was rehabilitated and placed temporarily in the Brooklyn Museum of Arts and Sciences. When the memorial room is built it will be placed in it, with the old pulpit desk behind which Mr. Beecher stood on Sundays during the score of years from 1849 to 1869, which formed so eventful a period both in his career and in the history of the nation.

Exchanging Amenities.

A blatant sample of the loud voiced, self conscious, look-at-me variety of man took his seat in a bus and called to the conductor:

"Does this bus go all the way?"

"Yes, sir," responded the conductor politely.

"Does it go as far as Oxford street? I want to get out there."

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"Well, I want you to tell me when we get there. You'd better stick a stamp on your nose or put a straw in your mouth or tie a knot in one of your lips, so that you won't forget it."

"It would not be convenient for one in my position to do so," said the conductor courteously, "but if you will kindly pin your ears round your neck I think I shall remember to tell you."—London Scraps.

The Sins of Hatters.

If any tradesman has a lot to answer for it is surely the hatter. He will most unblushingly tell you that a certain type of hat is suited to your particular style of beauty, knowing that the information is false, and all the while you have a dull suspicion that you don't look well in it. Yet you are obliged to believe him. His persuasive powers are so cultivated that I firmly believe he would make a dwarf think himself "a fine figure of a man."—Fry's Magazine.

Stevenson as He Talked.

He used to stand on the hearth rug in the smoking room, says Walter Crane in his "An Artist's Reminiscences" of Robert Louis Stevenson, the center of an admiring circle, and discourse very much in the same style as that in which he wrote. It gave one the impression of artificiality rather—I mean his manner of speaking and choice of words, as if carefully selected and cultivated. If a remark was offered by one of the company he would perhaps accept it and turn about, much as a conjurer does when he borrows a handkerchief or a hat from some one in his audience, or perhaps he would work it into his next sentence, returning it to his interlocutor improved—wrapped in silver paper, metaphorically speaking. His personal appearance was quite as unusual as his speech—a long, pale, thin face and lank hair, quick and penetrating eyes and a rather sardonic smile. The world in general, especially in clubland, wore white shirts and collars as a rule, but Stevenson sported black ones.

A Queer Ad.

"An Italian with a piano organ was turning the handle of his machine rapidly, but not a note was to be heard. I stopped at once. What on earth could be the matter?"

The speaker, an advertising agent, smiled.

"Finally," he said, "I went up close to the man.

"'A breakdown?' I asked.

"He pointed to a small placard on the organ's front, and I read:

"'The interior of the instrument has been removed. The relief that in consequence you experience is as nothing compared with that which immediately follows a dose of Sure Cure Cough Mixture.'

"It was an original ad.," the expert ended, "and I followed it up. From what the Sure Cure people told me, I found that the same ingenuity and money put in legitimate newspaper advertising would have brought 50 per cent more returns."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Governor Hughes Versus Otto Kelsey an Engrossing Topic.

SOME OF THE NEW BILLS.

Text of Important Sections of the Series of Anti Race Track Betting Measures—Legislative Humorists at Work—Auto Tax Innovation.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, Feb. 12.—Mr. Kelsey, the state superintendent of insurance, has been occupying a prominent place in the public mind and in the newspapers of late. The question as to whether or not it is possible for Governor Hughes to remove him, the governor's desires in this respect being known, is a topic that affords an unlimited field for argument.

It is evident that in the legislature Kelsey has made some new friends, though it cannot definitely be ascertained how many of his former supporters he may have lost. So far as the senate is concerned, it is generally believed that Majority Leader John

GEORGE M. PALMER OF SCHOHARIE, DEMOCRATIC LEADER IN THE ASSEMBLY.

Raines will stand with Kelsey through any fight that occurs, no matter how bitter.

The antagonists of Governor Hughes in the legislature will stand together against him on the Kelsey matter, feeling that a defeat would be a setback for his presidential nomination prospects.

Taking all things into consideration, it is not probable that the predictions of an early adjournment will be fulfilled. The fight over Kelsey and over the race track legislation will likely rouse the governor's ire to such an extent that he will keep the legislature at work until late spring.

Governor Hughes has a lengthy report on the insurance department as a result of the investigation of it by the special commissioner, Matthew C. Fleming, appointed by the governor.

Text of the Antiracing Bills.

The much talked of anti race betting legislation consists of four bills, each covering a different phase of the question. Senator Agnew introduced them in the senate. Assemblyman Hart of Utica proposed them in the assembly. The first bill of the series was introduced Jan. 8 and provides as follows for an appropriation of $250,000 to take the place of the percentage of racing receipts paid to the agricultural societies:

Section 1. The sum of $250,000 is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated for the promotion of agriculture in this state by appropriating and distributing the same as provided by chapter 820 of the laws of 1895 and the acts amendatory thereof.

Sec. 2. The amount hereby appropriated shall be appropriated and distributed as provided by chapter 820 of the laws of 1895 and amendments thereof.

The Crime and the Penalty.

The second bill provides that every person aiding in or acting in connection with any race between horses or other animals for any bet, stake or reward is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction is punishable by imprisonment in the county jail or penitentiary for a period of not less than six months or more than one year. The same penalty is provided for any person who upon any race course "shall make or record, directly or indirectly, any bet or wager on the result of any trial or contest of speed or power of endurance of horses," and also for any person who makes or records any sale or purchase of any pool of interest therein on the result of any trial or race or power of endurance of horses.

The other two bills were introduced Jan. 16. One amends section 351 of the penal code to read substantially as follows:

Any person who engages in pool selling or bookmaking at any time or place, or any person who keeps or occupies any room, shed, tenement, booth or building, float or vessel or any part thereof or who occupies any place or stand of any kind upon any public or private grounds within this state, with books, papers, apparatus or paraphernalia, for the purpose of recording or registering bets or wagers or of selling pools, and any person who records or registers bets or wagers or sells pools upon the result of any trial or contest of skill, speed or power of endurance of man or beast or upon the result of any political nomination, appointment or election or upon the result of any lot, chance, casualty, unknown or contingent event whatsoever, or any person who receives, registers, records or forwards or purports or pretends to receive, register, record or forward in any manner whatsoever any money, thing or consideration of value, bet or wagered or offered for the purpose of being bet or wagered by or for any other person or sells pools upon any such result, or any person who, being the owner, lessee or occupant of any room, shed, tenement, tent, booth or building, float or vessel or part thereof or of any grounds within this state, knowingly permits the same to be used or occupied for any of these purposes or therein keeps, exhibits or employs any device or apparatus for the purpose of recording or registering such bets or wagers or the selling of such pools or becomes the custodian or depositary for gain, hire or reward of any money, property or thing of value, staked, wagered or pledged or to be wagered or pledged upon any such result, or any person who aids, assists or abets in any manner in any of the said acts, which are hereby forbidden, is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary or county jail for a period of not more than one year.

Later bills were introduced in both senate and assembly providing for the appropriation of $250,000 annually for the benefit of the state fairs.

Anti Bucket Shop Bills.

Several bills introduced to wipe out bucket shops and other irresponsible traders in securities have attracted considerable attention. It is the particular aim of one or two of these measures to increase the difficulties of trading in stocks on margins and in going short on the market.

The superintendent of banking has had introduced on his recommendation a large batch of bills affecting banks, etc. One of the bills provides that in making reports to the state the officials of savings banks must give the original cost, date of purchase, date of maturity, the stated rate of interest and the estimated investment value of all stock and bond investments.

Public Hearings.

Dates for public hearings have been set for the banking bills, Sunday baseball bill, anti race track bills and other measures.

The legislative humorists had a chance to display their wit a few days ago when Assemblyman Wood's bill amending the vagrancy laws was considered. As the vagrants and tramps constitute a numerous body, it was generally conceded that they ought to be given a hearing and their consent to the amendments procured if possible. "Give both sides a chance to be heard," said one assemblyman, "and, as a matter of fact, do not the tramps come under the provisions of the interstate commerce act?" Any vagrants interested in this matter should call on the chairman of either the senate or assembly codes committee.

Expensive State Government.

The expenses of the state government have run up to so large an amount that there is talk in some quarters to the effect that unless many of the appropriation bills are not materially cut down the state will have to fall back on direct taxation for certain purposes, and this is not relished by the Republican leaders, as the Democratic party would be certain to use such a proceeding as a telling campaign argument.

It is feared as a result that several important measures calling for appropriations will have to be modified.

The Minority Leader in Assembly.

George M. Palmer of Schoharie, the Democratic leader in the assembly, is a particularly vigorous worker. He gives practically all important legislation close scrutiny. He has a position of great influence by reason also of his membership on both the ways and means and rules committees.

Dr. Mary Walker has served notice that she will appear at the capitol shortly to speak in favor of a proposed amendment to the penal code. One prominent senator when he heard this said, "Well, we all should give a great deal of attention to whatever Dr. Mary Walker says, for, after all, she is a self made man if ever one can be found."

New Mode of Taxing Autos.

Automobilists are interested in a newly introduced bill that is thought more equitable than the one levying a set tax of $5 a year for every auto regardless of weight. It provides for an annual tax of 50 cents a hundred pounds or any fraction thereof, to be collected by the secretary of state and used by the state engineer for the repair and maintenance of highways.

This bill meets the objections of the owners of small machines, who state they should not be taxed as much as the owners of larger and heavier machines.

The bill compels the secretary of state to prepare a list of automobiles registered with the department by the 1st of July of each year and furnish it on request to the local police officials throughout the state.

The operating of an auto without the consent of the owner is made punishable by a fine of $100. This provision is aimed at stopping the use of autos by chauffeurs when their owners are not using them, a use that has resulted in many serious accidents.

Cuvillier Versus Oliver.

Considerable amusement is afforded the assembly by the verbal combats between two Democratic members from New York county, Louis Cuvillier and "Paradise Jimmy" Oliver, who last year was minority leader. These men are bitter political enemies, representing opposing New York factions. Cuvillier is a personal and political friend of Mayor McClellan, and Oliver is a close associate of C. F. Murphy, head of Tammany Hall.

Cuvillier takes a shot at Oliver almost every time the latter speaks on any subject. Oliver does vice versa. They at times keep the house in an uproar. Cuvillier places himself open to criticism because of the many, many bills he introduces and to which he then pays no attention. Last year he introduced about seventy bills, most of which were carelessly prepared. Of his more than threescore bills it is said that only three passed both houses, and of these only one became a law. He introduces so many bills that no one can be persuaded to take any of them seriously.

What is a cold in the head? Nothing to worry about if you treat it with Ely's Cream Balm. Neglected, the cold may grow into catarrh, and the air-passages be so inflamed that you have to fight for every breath. It is true that Ely's Cream Balm masters catarrh promptly. But you know the old saying about the ounce of prevention. Therefore use Cream Balm when the cold in the head shows itself. All druggists, 50c., or mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren street, New York.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

An Interesting and Instructive Programme Presented---Inclemency of Weather Prevents Large Attendance.

The importance of the Farmers' Institute as an educational institute is every year made more prominent by the increased attendance, and the one held Friday and Saturday fully demonstrated the growing interest among the cultivators of the soil. While the condition of the roads were such as to preclude many from coming to the city who lived at a distance, yet at the afternoon session on Friday the Universalist Church was crowded, most of those present being farmers.

The first session was lightly attended and was opened by a talk by the conductor, H. E. Cook of Denmark. It was a practical discussion relative to dairying for profit and was a strong argument for the feeding method of grown crops against the large pasturing plan.

Mr. Cook said we have much pasture land which should be growing trees instead of furnishing pasture. He insisted upon farmers using skill in bringing up the productiveness of their soil, and recommended rotation of crops for pasture lands. He said farmers could not afford to keep cows when they produced only an average of four or five thousand pounds of milk yearly. By scientific farming he had brought the average up to ten thousand pounds. For early feeding a crop of rye was desirable, this to be followed by alfalfa, where it could be raised. Winter wheat makes good green fodder when cut as the heads are forming. Corn and pumpkins for fall feeding was recommended, and one half acre of pumpkins should be raised for ten cows. Cabbage, also, when the market is dull and the price low, was recommended to be fed in moderation. Mangel beets are among the best foods for milk cows and a variety of foods is best for milk production.

Friday Afternoon.

Mr. Cook conducted a question box and the raising of potatoes was discussed at length by him. The practice of hilling potatoes was condemned by Mr. Cook, unless a wet soil was used. Potash was recommended for a sandy soil. The cost of nitrite of soda is high but it is a good fertilizer for potatoes. It hurries the growth. If cotton seed meal is used it should be thoroughly mixed with the soil. The need of thoroughly spraying potato vines was urged and as many as five times during the season was recommended. Mr. Cook said that the yield of potatoes could be greatly increased by the careful selection of seed. They should be taken out of the pit and spread out before they start to sprout and those only planted which show strong and stocky sprouts. It is best to select those hills for seed which show vigorous growth and big yield. In planting in rows only put one potato in the hill. Lime for light soils was recommended.

The question of ventilation for stables was brought up and Mr. Cook recommended both the King flue system and cloth for open windows.

The Tuberculosis Question.

The fact that the tuberculosis question was to be discussed increased the attendance Friday afternoon, and among those present was the Board of Health and Doctors Nodyne and Kennedy. Dr. B. S. Moore, State Veterinarian at Cornell University, had been asked to address the Institute by the Board of Health and was present and in an address of over an hour told what he knew about the ravages of the disease among cattle and also as it affected the human system. The doctor said tuberculosis was the worst plague on earth, destroying more people's lives than any other disease, one hundred and ten thousand lives being lost yearly in the United States to the disease, and as many as fourteen thousand in New York State alone. And the ravages of the disease is great among cattle. People become accustomed to seeing their friends and cattle die of the disease. The destruction is perpetual. Do we believe that it is infectious, he asked. And his arguments and illustrations showed that he was decidedly of this opinion. He recommended that a bill be passed by the Legislature to compel a registration of consumptive patients that the Boards of Health might know who and where such persons resided. He said that because the disease was slow in development made it all the more dangerous. The nature of tuberculosis is to live on the tissues of the body and sometimes it attacks the lungs and sometimes other parts of the body. Nature sometimes with its resistance power, destroys the germs, and the leisions made by the disease heal over. Tuberculosis may be confined to the glands for years, but when they attack the vital organs death comes more sure and speedy.

How do the germs spread? That is the important question. Tuberculosis is not heriditary. But it is transmittable, said Dr. Moore. Among cattle it is spread from cow to cow by the discharge from the nose and mouth. The Doctor made claim to the statement that a healthy cow might take the disease from an infected animal, and gave history of herds where the disease had spread throughout the entire herds.

As to the question of the possibility of the disease being communicated from the cow to the man the Doctor said that it might where the udder of the cow became diseased, and by the use of milk from such cows. Microscopical examinations have shown the presence of the germs in milk.

The Doctor by a chart showed how by segregation an infected herd of cattle may be saved from further contamination, and he argued strongly for the separation of diseased animals from healthy ones.

The question of how to detect the presence of the disease was the vital one and he claimed that a certain serum had been found in tubercalin which made it possible to pick out the affected animals. He showed by chart how the use of tubercalin reacted upon the cow if it was diseased so that a well versed veterinanian could determine whether the animal was diseased or not. He argued that it was impossible to detect the disease by physical examination.

As to the use of infected animals for food, Dr. Moore said if the disease was localized upon examination by a veterinarian, it might be used with safety. That is if the disease was confined to the lungs for instance. He said that suspected milk should be sterilized.

The lecture brought out numerous questions and some differences of opinion, as to the disease being infectious.

Friday Evening.

After a short time devoted to the question box, Prof. C. E. Jones of the Educational Department at Albany, gave a very instructive lecture upon the education given by the rural schools. He urged cleanliness for the schools, saying that cleanliness was as important for scholars as to have it observed in the stables to secure a good quality of milk. He spoke of the necessity of harmony between the teacher and the parent, and complimented the grade of education secured in the rural schools as to the best plans of dirt road shall be done. Under the money system the towns, through the Board of Supervisors levied a tax for road construction. The Town Board with the Road Commissioner meet and determine the work to be done early in the winter, and this report has to be filed with the State authorities, and also with the Town Clerk. The State sends men to sit with the Town Board as counsel, and the public is invited to attend these meetings that the best and most economical plans may be adopted.

Mr. Ryan made the statement that if all the money and labor spent on our country roads for a hundred years could have been intelligently spent we might now have a complete system of stone roads throughout the State. Where the State aid is used in connection with the local funds, it is required that something shall be done each year toward permanent road building. The State also advises

D. C. Case of this city gave a talk of some length on general farming. Mr. Case advocated the growth of a variety of crops as being more certain of making money on his investment. Mr. Case's remarks were practical and well received.

Dr. Smead failed to reach Fulton so his part of the program was omitted.

Saturday Morning Session.

The down-pour of rain and the wretched condition of the roads prevented many from attending the Saturday morning session. State Examiner of Highways from the State Engineer's office at Albany, Stephen Ryan, gave the first address, and was of local interest because of the fact that many of the towns of the county have lately voted to adopt the money system of road building and maintenance. Mr. Ryan stated that the Department sent out men who were holding nine meetings daily throughout the State for the instruction of the people in good roads building. He said the old system is a thing of the past. Seven hundred out of nine hundred towns had voted the money system in the State and only in two towns where the money system had been voted had they gone back to the old way of working roads. He said a uniform system had been established whereby the State officials meet with the Towns Boards for consultation and to determine just what work shall be done and just how it building. Mr. Ryan said that as the law now exists the Highway Commissioner only has one vote in the Town Board meetings. Formerly he had as many votes as all of the Board combined. His pay now is $3.00 per day and he is required to have all repair work done by the first of July. Permanent work may be done later in the season, however. Road machinery may be hired by the Commissioner where towns have none, and that even with a view and a contract to purchase the same.

Mr. Ryan said that after the fifty million dollars appropriated by the State has been spent we will have seventy-four thousands miles of dirt road. He referred to a new bill which has been introduced in the Legislature which will repeal many of the old requirements if it becomes a law.

By questions asked by Supervisor Beardsley and others, it was shown that the money system towns may levy a snow tax for keeping the roads clear in the winter, or the old pathmaster plan may be used and the inhabitants "warned" out for the purpose. But the State money may not be so used.

The morning session closed with a paper read by Prof. G. W. Harris on growing and fertilizing tobacco. He related the results of experiments on several farms near Baldwinsville last year in which it was shown that the extensive use of commercial fertilizer paid in an increase in the crops, both in quality and quantity. He urged careful attention to starting seed beds and of the preparation of the soil for the plants.

Saturday Afternoon.

There was a better attendance in the afternoon, but owing to the bad weather but few farmers could be present.

J. G. Curtis of South Greece took up the most important question of soil fertility. The speaker argued strongly for the improvement of the soil by the addition of organic matter, and while he did not discountenance the use of commercial fertilizers he laid more stress upon the plowing under such soil builders as clover, rye and corn. In growing crops the question is, how much available plant food does the soil contain. To grow successful crops we must have plenty of humus in the soil. This gives us the important plant food nitrogen. Earth alone does not contain nitrogen. Such crops as clover and peas afford large amounts of nitrogen when made available by decaying in the soil. These crops take some 25 per cent of the growth from the atmosphere, while most other crops draw altogether from the soil for growth.

The speaker advised the use of potash and phosphorus acid as plant foods but did not advise the use of raw phosphate rock. The way to get the nitrogen out of the humus in the soil is by the action of bacteria in the soil. And to have these work well the soil must be well drained and the humus well mixed with the soil so air and heat would increase the amount of nitrogen thrown out for plant food. You can sweeten your sour soil by drainage and the addition of humus.

Why Farmers Should Be Interested in Bacteria.

This subject was handled by Prof. W. A. Stocking, Jr., of the Cornell University. The speaker said farmers, and especially dairymen should be interested in this subject, for bacteria are closely related to milk production. Relating numerous experiments Prof. Stocking showed that cleanliness in stables had much to do with the quality of milk put upon the market. He showed how, by the use of covered pails and the wiping of the cow's udder and flanks with moist cloths, reduced greatly the number and kinds of bacteria which infest milk. They are nearly everywhere present and especially so in barns and about animals. The whole talk centered in the necessity of those who have the handling of cows, of being cleanly in their habits and the care of the milk producing animals.

Prof. Stocking said that boiling milk would not kill all the germs that infest it. The acid producing germs would be destroyed but not those that produce putrefication, and so sterilizing milk for sanitary purposes was not a success. The best way to keep the germs from propagating is by first quickly cooling the milk and keeping it cool. He advised the careful cleansing of all milk utensils.

The Institute closed with a short talk by Conductor Cook in which he urged putting into practice at least some of the suggestions made by those who addressed the meetings, and a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Cook and his colleagues. It was also voted to retain Thomas Coles as local correspondent.

Entertainment was given by the Tilden Orchestra and Miss Dora Churchill who recited several pieces most delightfully.

Pentelow for Senator.

The Corona, California, Courier of Feb. 8, contains the following notice of a well known former Oswego County man:

It is important to mention the fact that Corona has two aspirants for public offices, Councilman E. B. Collier, who wishes to become Assemblyman, and W. J. Pentelow, President of the Board of Trade and President of the Corona National Bank, who is being strenuously considered by the Riverside contingent to fill the office of Senator.

Mr. Pentelow is being endorsed for Senator primarily because the people of Riverside who have frequently heard him in addresses before the Chamber of Commerce, at the Glenwood Hotel banquets and before meetings of the taxpayers at the Court house on the advisability of floating a bonded indebtedness for the improvement of country roads, and have been impressed by his superior qualifications as an orator and his argumentative genius and acknowledge that his accomplishments have helped to defeat the good roads bonding proposition. According to the statement made by these Riverside men, Mr. Pentelow, without apparent preparation made a most capable address and so telling, so convincing and so logical was it, that it put his opponents to route and settled the question there and finally. "We want a man who can go on the floor of our Capitol, state his position frankly and firmly, and with a sufficient gift of oratory to carry his message in a convincing manner." This is, in substance, what those leading business and professional men of Riverside have said repeatedly and it is only in a spirit of justice to the community that the Courier takes sufficient cognizance of the conditions which exist to make it public and give our people an opportunity, if they so desire, to send a local man to the Senate.

Mr. Pentelow's friends in this frigid climate will extend heartiest congratulations to the thirty-ninth senatorial of California, if the republicans can prevail upon Mr. Pentelow to accept the nomination. He is one of the squarest cut men and would make an ideal representative. His Republicanism has never been questioned and while he never accepted elective office in Oswego county, he held several appointive ones and his political advice was eagerly sought after and never questioned. Mr. Pentelow as a legislator and as a citizen, would measure well up with any other representative in the State of perpetual sunshine.

High School Notes.

The Freshmen defeated the Sophomores in a hotly contested game of basketball in the City Hall Saturday evening. The High School team was also defeated by the Cazenovia team.

The Senior class enjoyed a straw-ride last evening to the home of Clare Whitbeck, near Lysander.

The basketball ball team will play at Walton on Friday evening.

A strawride was given by the P. K. G. on Friday evening and Saturday morning. The party left Fulton at 6:30 o'clock on Friday evening, arriving at the home of Mrs. Osborne near South Hannibal about 9 o'clock. Games were enjoyed by all and at midnight delightful refreshments were served by the hostess. When it came time to leave for home the driver refused to take the horses out until daylight as the roads were in such poor condition. The party reached Fulton at about 11 o'clock on Saturday morning in the pouring rain, drenched to the skin and perfectly willing to remain at home for the balance of the day.

Board of Public Works.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Public Works a resolution was adopted to the effect that the Fulton Contracting company be notified to open North First street for traffic from Ontario to Shaw streets within fifteen days from the 11th of February

Miss Bertha Waugh was appointed permanent bookkeeper in the office of the Board. Commissioner Thomson was appointed a committee to look over the franchise of the Fulton Fuel and Light company and ascertain how much gas the company was to furnish the city; also what the expense of piping the city hall for gas would amount to. Mr. Thomson was also appointed a committee to confer with the Board of Fire and Police as to the length of time fire engines might be used in case of a long continued fire. On motion of Commissioner Howe, seconded by Commissioner Thomson, Superintendent Flynn was instructed to shut off water at the curb when he found tenants wasting water. Commissioner Bradley was authorized to secure prices and to purchase tubes for the pumping station. It was also decided to shut off water from all premises whose tenants are in arrears more than one quarter for water rental. Commissioner Howe was instructed to look into the matter of securing a lower insurance premium on the pumps, boilers and properties at the pumping station. Commissioner Thomson was appointed a committee to furnish maps and all necessary data relative to the west side sewerage system to the State Department of Health. Mr. Bradley was named a committee to consult with the officers of the State Department of Health at Albany in regard to the west side sewer. The last Board of Public Works, the present Board and the city at large consider the action of the State Board hasty and unjust, and the present Board is wrestling with the problem and the State authorities. It is hoped that speedy relief for the west side sufferers from the sewer hold up, may be secured.

Annual Meeting.

Notice is hereby given that the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Volney Paper company of Fulton, N. Y., will be held at the office of the Company on Monday, March 9, 1908, at eleven o'clock a. m., for the election of directors and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

Dated, Fulton, N. Y., February 18, 1908.

VOLNEY PAPER COMPANY,
G. G. Chauncey, Secretary.

MARRIED.

On Thursday evening in Oswego, Mr George F. Foley of this city was united in marriage with Miss Mary Urban of Oswego by the Rev. Father Heisler. Mr. and Mrs. Foley will reside in Fulton.

DIED.

In the Oswego jail on Saturday night "Jack" Hourigan, a veteran of the Civil war, died. He was a member of Company B, N. Y. V., and served throughout the war, winning an excellent record.

Last week at his home in South Crouse avenue, Syracuse, occurred the death of Arminius B. Jones, aged 54. The deceased was a real estate agent and pension attorney. He was born in Oswego county and was an attendant at Falley seminary.

Dorothy, the four months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Chubb, died on Monday at the family home in Highland street. The funeral was held at 2 o'clock on Tuesday, the Rev. G. S. Coons officiating. Interment in Mt. Adnah.

The death of Ephraim Pratt, aged 76, occurred on Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Perrin, in Syracuse. The remains were brought to this city and the funeral was held on Thursday from the home of another daughter, Mrs. Wallace Chubb.

Sanford L. Palmer, a lifelong resident of Hannibal and a veteran of the Civil war, died at his home on Saturday from heart disease. The deceased was well known throughout the county and was at one time a member of the National Guard, being second lieutenant in Company B, 48th N. G. S. N. Y. A widow survives him.

The Milwaukee Free Press of Feb. 16, contains the following notice of the death of a well known Fulton resident of twenty-five years ago: Smith—Feb. 14, 1908, at 9 p.m., William H. Smith, aged 82 years, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. F. G. Suits, 807 Oakland avenue. Funeral Monday, Feb. 17, at 2 p.m., from the residence. Interment at Forest Home cemetery. Burial private.

The death of Melora A., aged 26, wife of Special Surrogate Ezra A. Barnes, occurred at the family home in Oswego last week, after several years of ill health. The deceased was a daughter of the late Orla Simth of Volney. Beside the husband, two children, the mother and two sisters, the Misses Clara and Inez Smith of Newark, N. J., survive. The deceased was a member of Grace Presbyterian church, Oswego, and she had a large circle of acquaintances, all of whom deplore her demise. The deepest sympathy for the young husband in his affliction is extended.

Barge Canal Matters.

A meeting of the Canal Board, State Superintendent of Public Works, State Engineer and others was held in Albany on Monday at which it is believed an agreement was made to turn back the contract for the construction work on this section to the Fulton Contracting Company, a satisfactory arrangement having been reached relative to a lock which caused a temporary suspension of the work. It is also rumored that 400 men will be engaged and that the work will be pushed with energy throughout this section. The present contractors have had an immense amount of hindrance to contend with in banks caving, coffer dams being inadequate, etc., but they are willing to push the work with all possible speed.

THE D. A. R. EVENT—FEB. 22.

The George Kiernan Recital at the Universalist Church.

Mr. Kiernan had the pleasure of conversing with Mr. Jefferson regarding this, his favorite character creation. The aim is to give an interpretation of the play that shall suggest to the members of communities, who have never had an opportunity of listening to America's beloved actor some idea of his method of dealing with Rip VanWinkle.

Characters Impersonated.

Rip VanWinkle, the careless dreamer of the Catskills.
Derrick VonBeekman, who covets Rip's possessions.
Cockles, Derrick's nephew, a chip off the same block.
Nick Vedder, Landlord of the Inn, George III.
Hendrick Vedder, Nick's son.
Gretchen, Rip's wife.
Meenie, Rip's daughter.
Seth Smith, Nick's successor.
Katchen, Seth's wife.

ACT I.—The village of Falling Waters. Derrick weaves the web "Hendrick, can you read 'rithmatics like dat?" The village dance.

ACT II.—The storm. Rip recounts his rabbit hunt. Driven from home. "No, Rip! Husband! come back!"

ACT III.—In the Catskill Mountains. Rip meets the strange dwarf. The twenty years' sleep. Rip awakes.

ACT IV.—Rip's return to the village. "Are we soon forgot when we are gone? No one remembers Rip Van Winkle?" Recognition. "Rip, Rip!" "All's well that ends well."

Without doubt Mr. Kiernan will be greeted with a large and appreciative audience, as great interest is being manifested among our town's people, as the date for the event draws near. Remember that the recital is given for the benefit of the monument fund.

SOUTH GRANBY.

Our snow and cold weather of the week before was thawed out on Thursday and Friday, making the roads almost impassable

The death of Philo Lampman, which occurred Wednesday, the 18th, was not unexpected as he had been feeble for some time. The funeral was held Saturday at the Little Utica church. Interment at Jacksonville. He leaves a wife, one son, Willis Lampman, and one daughter, Mrs. Lydia Rumsey. He was an old resident of this place and had many friends, and will be missed.

Mrs. Mary Rumsey, the mother of Mr. Alonzo Hannum and Miss Ina Hannum, died Friday, after a lingering illness, quite unexpectedly at the last. The funeral was held at the home of her son on Monday, the 17th. Interment at Hannibal Center.

Mrs. Addie Betts, Syracuse, visited her parents and little daughter, Clarice, over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Austin, who visited their children in Syracuse, arrived home Friday night.

Mrs. Maud Packett and Mrs. Addie Barker visited at Frank Paynes Sunday.

Mrs. Abbie Jackson slipped and fractured a rib Saturday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Harlow Sperbeck.

Mrs. Mabel Fisher was in Syracuse Tuesday.

Miss Flora Fisher spent last week at Guy Rumsey's and expects to go to Lysander this week.

The lawsuit that was tried a while ago before Justice Sperbeck, between Mrs. DeVilliers and John Cain, the decision was no cause of Cain, resulted in the decision no cause for action.

The deep snows of week before last caused considerable breaking roads and shovelling but perhaps the worst of our winter is done now.

MINETTO AND VICINITY.

Mrs. Carrie Bunker spent several days last week with her mother, Mrs. Court, at Lansing.

Mrs. Frank Haven will entertain the L. A. S. Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 25.

The Home Missionary society met at the home of Mrs. B. D. Snyder, Tuesday, Feb. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Beadle attended the funeral of Mrs. Ezra Barnes in Oswego Monday.

The Beake Dairy company completed the work of filling their ice house Friday.

The Literary society will meet Monday evening, Feb. 17, at the home of F. H. Thorpe.

Miss Lizzie Burt, who has been quite ill is able to be out.

Mr. Archie Congdon is on the sick list.

Mrs. Melvin Wells entertained her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Meade of Richland, recently.

Mrs. Martha Hirt is visiting her sister, Mrs. Harriet Sheffield, at South Scriba.

Mrs. E. H. Chase and Mrs. Anna McLaughlin attended the funeral of their uncle, Mr. James Grantier, at Lansing Tuesday.

Mr. John Wells is very ill. Dr. Jones attends.

Mrs. Fred Hammond of Adams was a recent guest of her daughter, Mrs. Lotta Meade.

Everything taken into the stomach should be digested fully within a certain time. When you feel that your stomach is not in good order, that the food you have eaten is not being digested, take a good, natural digestant that will do the work the digestive juices are not doing. The best remedy known today for all stomach troubles is Kodol, which is guaranteed to give prompt relief. It is a natural digestant, it digests what you eat, it is pleasant to take and it is sold by all druggists.

A Daring Escape.

The annals of Sing Sing are full of daring escapes. A typical case was that of Pallister and Rohlf, two convicted murderers. By frequent appeals they had headed off the day of their execution, and at length decided on escape at any cost—even that of life itself. Late one night Pallister called for a drink of milk, and as the official on duty opened the cell door to give it him he was seized, dragged in and overpowered. The desperado then locked the officer in the cell and, after securing his keys, released his comrade Rohlf, when they in turn overcame and disarmed the second night watchman. This done, they offered release to three more prisoners with whom they had made friends. These declined the doubtful benefit, however, whereupon the two murderers climbed the skylight, reached the boundary wall and dropped to liberty by the broad Hudson, which they crossed in a small boat.—New York Tribune.

Farmers' Week at Ithaca.

The New York State College of Agriculture is arranging for a great farmers' meeting at Ithaca, during the week February 17th to 22nd, to be called Farmers' Week. It is aimed, through this week, to meet the growing desire among the farmers of the State to get together at some definite time to receive the best available instruction, and to discuss among themselves the different farm problems that are of vital interest to them; as also to provide opportunity for the old students to get together for a great reunion.

This week is partly the outgrowth of a very interesting meeting held in February last year by the New York State Agricultural Experimenters' League, which brought to the College both the farmer and the former student. The week will open with a Poultry Show and Institute, which will bring to the College one of the largest and most representative gatherings of poultrymen ever held in this State. Later in the week a series of practical demonstrations and instruction will be given in different lines of farming, which will be of the greatest value to the farmer. Lecturers and addresses will be given by such men as President Schurman and Director Bailey, on topics of general importance and special interest to the farmer. Doctor Moore will talk to the farmers on the question of tuberculosis. The Home Economics Department will have an exhibit and give lectures, in this way interesting the farmers' wives. On Friday the Experimenters' League will hold its Fourth Annual Meeting, which will be an expression of the college man's and the modern farmer's point of view on many of the important agricultural problems of the day. On Friday night there will be a general assembly, which will be followed by a social hour, when the bonds of friendship, which will have been formed during the week, may be firmly welded.

In order that everything possible may be done for the convenience of the visitors, a bureau of information has been established, with headquarters in the public office of the College, which will look after their housing and boarding, furnish any information which they may need, provide guides to direct them to the various parts of the buildings and grounds of the College, and, in short, do anything which will tend to make their stay in Ithaca pleasant and comfortable.

At times when you don't feel just right, when you have a bad stomach, take something right away that will assist digestion, not something that stimulates for a time, but something that will positively do the very work that the stomach performs under ordinary or normal conditions, something that will make the food digest. To do this you must take a natural digestant like Kodol For Dyspepsia. Kodol is a scientific preparation of vegetable acids with natural digestants and contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. Each dose will digest more than $,000 grains of food. It is sure to afford prompt relief; it digests what you eat and is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

How to Stop a Nose Bleed.

When the bellboy responded to the signal he found the elderly traveling man standing in the center of the room holding a handkerchief to his nose from which the blood was oozing.

"Give me a slap alongside of the head, good and hard," said the elderly man, turning his face toward the boy and speaking with difficulty.

"But, sir, I"—

"Don't stop to talk," sputtered the traveling man. "Slap me, I tell you," again holding his head forward. The boy hesitated for a moment, then timidly slapped the man's face. "Harder!" commanded the smitten one. The boy hesitated no longer, but with his open palm dealt the man a vigorous blow.

"That's better," grunted the gory one as he removed the handkerchief and after a test found the bleeding had stopped. "I'm subject to these attacks of nose bleed," he explained to the astonished youth, handing him a tip. "I have tried all sorts of remedies, but nothing acts more promptly than a blow alongside the head. The shock seems to paralyze the ruptured blood vessels, and they quit work at once. Try it some time if you have the occasion. I got the idea from an old physician in Mexico."—New York Press.

Could See For Himself.

Clarence Foster ("Pop"), the old ball player, was always busy sewing in his spare moments in the clubhouse. Foster was a handsome fellow and took pride in keeping himself looking neat and natty as far as his attire went, and he was as particular as an old maid regarding his clothes, so was kept busy doing the tailor act with the needle and thread. One August "Pop" was taken ill and was ailing for some few days. The fact of his illness got into the public press and so became common talk among the players. A few days after the announcement was made that Foster was ill the St. Louis aggregation blew into the Washington grounds. The first day Foster was discovered sitting in front of the clubhouse, busy at his everlasting sewing.

"Hello, Pop!" shouted Catcher Joe Sugden. "I heard you were sick, but how are you now?"

"Well, Joe," carelessly responded Foster as he paused a moment in his tailor stunt; "I have been sick, but just at present, as you can see for yourself, I happen to be on the mend."—Washington Star.

No Come Back.

Some of the West Indian islanders have learned that when a foreigner misbehaves on their shores it is better to suffer in silence than to mete out punishment at the risk of a descending gunboat from the miscreant's native land. A judge in Haiti, however, recently took occasion to pay off old scores and to redeem his self respect in the case of an offender brought before him.

To his first question as to the nationality of the accused the interpreter had answered that the prisoner was from Switzerland.

"Switzerland!" said the judge. "And Switzerland has no seacoast, has it?"

"No seacoast, your honor," replied the interpreter.

"And no navy," continued the judge.

"And no navy, your honor," was the reply.

"Very well, then," said the judge, "give him one year at hard labor."—Brooklyn Life.

The Other Reason.

A teamster retires at the age of ninety with an accumulation of $50,000. He says he wants and is entitled to a rest. Some inquirers want to know how he could have saved so much on $12 a week, the highest wages he ever received. The answer is easy. He got $2 a day. He lived on 22 cents a day. He saved the difference. I lived in New York on 5 cents a day for nearly six months and was in magnificent health. Some people eat to live; others live to eat. As the old chap on the ferryboat said to the small boy:

"Sonny, why does a pig eat?"

"'Cause he's hungry."

"No. There's another reason."

"What's dat?"

"He wants to make a hog of himself."—New York Press.

Sam Weller.

It was Sam Weller who made Dickens famous. "Pickwick Papers" were a complete failure financially until this unique character was introduced. The press was all but unanimous in praising Samival as an entirely original character whom none but a great genius could have created. Dickens received over $16,000 for "Pickwick Papers," and at the age of twenty-six he was incomparably the most popular author of his day.—London Standard.

A Lost Bank Note.

A friend of mine, writes a Scottish correspondent, recently saw a piece of paper lying on the street. He picked it up. It was a one pound note. Some men might have pocketed it, with a smile of satisfaction. My friend, however, honestly handed it over to the police. A short time afterward he discovered that he himself had lost a pound. He thought over the matter and remembered that before finding the note he had been standing on the edge of the pavement for some time. It slowly dawned upon him that the pound he had found was his own and that he had drawn it from his pocket unconsciously. He went back promptly to the police station and explained the circumstance. The officer in charge only shook his head and smiled incredulously. "Very clever," he said, "but—eh—it will scarcely do." If my friend cared to call back at the end of six months, he was informed, he would get the pound if in the interval it had not been claimed. During this time of waiting he is inclined to meditate as to whether honesty is always the best policy.—London P. T. O.

In Case of Accident.

Don't bluster. Be tactful. If there are dangerous germs present, ask them to withdraw. If they demur, ask them where they were brought up with gentle irony.

Be careful to render first aid to the injured. A great deal of unnecessary suffering has been caused by persons hastily rendering third or even fourth aid where first aid was indicated.

In case of drowning select a best method of resuscitation. There are 4,639 best methods in all. Have them about you in the form of loose newspaper clippings and run them over briefly before acting.

Keep cool. Stop every little while and take your temperature.

If the coroner arrives while you are at work, immediately desist. It is discourteous to save life in his presence.

Take accurate notes of the street and number. Reviving patients almost always ask where they are.

If possible, induce death to supervene rather than to take place merely or even to ensue. It gives the family a sense of dignity.—Puck.

The Frank Critic.

"When Sir John Millais was engaged in painting his 'Chill October' among the rushes on the banks of the Tay, near Perth," said an English artist, "a railway porter from the station at Kinfauns used to carry the canvas back and forth for him.

"The porter was a quaint chap. His services were called for many days in requisition. He became quite friendly with Sir John and seemed to take a hearty interest in the progress of the painting.

"Well, 'Chill October' was eventually finished and sold a little while afterward for a thousand pounds. This fact somehow reached the porter's ears. He met Sir John's brother-in-law at Kinfauns one day and said excitedly:

"'Mon, is't true that Sir John's sold t'picture and got a thoosand poond for't?'

"'Yes, certainly,' was the reply.

"'A thoosand poond!' repeated the porter. 'Why, mon, I wadna gi'en half a croon for't.'"

Rotundity of Earth.

We are assured by competent authority that Thales of Miletus taught that the earth was of a globular form so early as 640 B. C. Pythagoras demonstrated from the varying altitudes of the stars that the earth must be round. Aristarchus of Samos maintained that the earth turned on its own axis and revolved about the sun, which doctrine was held by his contemporaries as so absurd and revolting that the philosopher nearly lost his life B. C. 280. The wisdom of the ancients was, of course, lost sight of in the darkness of the "middle ages," and it took Galileo and Copernicus to restore the old knowledge to the world.—New York American.

Murder in Germany.

Germany distinguishes between two kinds of murder—one, premeditated and intentional, is punishable by death; the second, intentional homicide without deliberation, is punishable by penal servitude for from five to fifteen years. Dueling in Germany is a misdemeano of a special kind. Who kills his opponent in a duel is not charged with murder or manslaughter, but with dueling, the punishment for which is detention in a fortress for fifteen years.—London Chronicle.

Ruffled His Feathers.

Artist (showing friend his masterpiece)—Now, my boy, that is a picture, if you like—real and natural. What do you think of it? Friend—Capital! Capital! So lifelike! Such light and shade! I don't think I ever saw a better picture of a battlefield. Artist—Great Paul Rubens! That's not a battlefield—that's a basket of fruit!—London Standard.

Reduction.

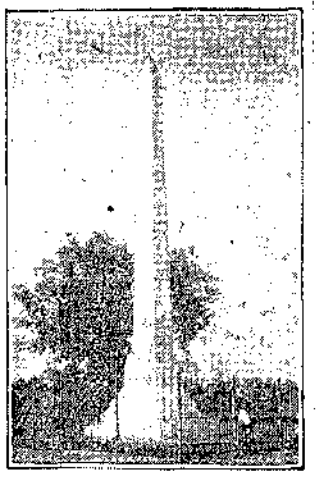
The old nag was jogging up the hill with the elopers.

"Yes," said the old nag, "it is rather tough pulling them up to the parsonage, but it will be easier coming back."

"How so?" queried the friendly goose at the roadside.

"Why, can't you see that after tearing the parsonage two will be made one?"—Chicago News.

The Editor Regrets.



Office Boy—The editor says he's much obliged to you for allowing him to see your drawings, but much regrets he is unable to use them. Fair Artist (eagerly)—Did he say that? Office Boy (truthfully)—Well, not exactly. He just said: "Take 'em away. Pimple. They make me sick."—London Tatler.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF IMMORTAL GEORGE

Historic Wakefield Plantation, the Early Home of Washington in Virginia.

Monument Marks the Site of the House, Which Was Burned Long Ago.

THOUSANDS of persons make pilgrimages every year to Mount Vernon, and every schoolboy knows that it was the home of George Washington. But for some reason comparatively little attention has been paid to Washington's birthplace, Wakefield plantation, in Westmoreland county, on the Potomac river. At Mount Vernon one can see the actual house which was so long the home of Washington and his revered wife, and within it and about the grounds of the estate are many things intimately associated with the customs and daily pursuits of its former owner. On the contrary, nothing remains of the house in which Washington was born, as it was burned to the ground over a century ago. At the same time there is a sentimental interest attaching to a spot rendered historic by the occurrence there of so important an event as Washington's birth, and it is appropriate that the associations of the place should be preserved.

Wakefield plantation was known in Washington's time simply as the Popes creek farm, or the home on Pope's creek. Sometimes it was called the home on Bridge's creek. The farm has been the home of six generations of Washingtons, but early in the last century passed out of control of this famous family. Its present owner, John E. Wilson, has lived on the plantation for over sixty years, his father having bought it in 1846. Curiously enough, Mr. Wilson married a member of the Washington family, Miss Betty Washington, granddaughter of Wilson Augustine Washington, and thus gave the historic spot a mistress related to the man whose birth there made it famous.

The Wakefield plantation was first the home of John Washington. It descended to his son, Captain Lawrence Washington, and next to the latter's son, Augustine Washington, father of President George Washington. Augustine Washington, who died April 12, 1743, left quite a large estate, and different portions of it were given to his children. To George was bequeathed the farm on the Rappahannock. It was Augustine who inherited the part of the estate including the family home. Augustine left the Wakefield plantation to his son, William Augustine Washington, and the latter left it to his son, George Corbin Washington, who sold it in the year 1815. It passed through the hands of various owners previous to its purchase in 1846 by John F. Wilson, father of the present owner.

It is a difficult task to picture how the Washington home looked on that eventful 22d of February, 1732, which marked the arrival of little George. Perhaps the best description of it that can be obtained is that given by Washington Irving, who wrote more than half a century after the house in which the great patriot was born had been destroyed. He said: "This house commanded a view over many miles of the Potomac and the opposite shores of Maryland. It had probably been purchased with the property and was one of the primitive farmhouses of Virginia. The roof was steep and sloped down in low projecting eaves. It had four rooms on the ground floor and others in the attic and an immense chimney at each end. Not a vestige of it remains. Two or three decayed fig trees, with shrubs and vines, linger about the place, and here and there a flower or a wild service to mark where a garden has been."

Over the spot where it is supposed the house in which Washington was born stood the national government has now placed a stately monument. George Washington Parke Custis placed a stone marker on the site of the house in 1815, but that disappeared and for a time there was nothing to indicate the historic character of the place. An agitation against such neglect led congress to take the matter up and provide for marking the spot in a suitable manner. The Society of Colonial Dames of America in the state of Virginia placed in the family cemetery at Wakefield a stone in memory of Augustine Washington, father of President Washington, but the exact location of his grave is unknown. A ruined vault in the graveyard is supposed to contain the remains of John and Lawrence Washington and other members of the family which gave to the world 176 years ago the most illustrious of Americans.

Water and Life.

Of all the conditions preparatory to life the presence of water, composed of oxygen and hydrogen, is at once the most essential and the most worldwide, for if water be present the presence of other necessary elements is probably assured. If water exist, that fact goes half for the necessary temperature, the gamut of life being coextensive with the existence of water as such. It is so consequentially, life being impossible without water. Whatever the planet, this is of necessity true. But the absolute degrees of temperature within which life can exist vary according to the mass of the body, another of the ways in which mere size tells. On the earth 212 degrees F limits the range at the top and 32 degrees F at the bottom in the case of fresh water, 27 degrees F in the case of salt. On a smaller planet both limits would be lowered, the top one the most. On Mars the boiling point would probably be about 170 degrees F. Secondly, from the general intelligibleness of their constituents a planet that still possesses water will probably retain the other substances that are essential to life gases for the reason that water vapor is next to hydrogen and helium the lightest of them all, and solids because their weight would still more combine to keep them there. Water, indeed, acts as a solution to the whole problem.—Professor Lowell's "The Evolution of Life" in Century Magazine.

Only an Office Boy.

"If you want a real touch and study in the deceit and cussedness of human nature unwrapped," said an insurance agent, "just watch the office boys in your own or any other place of business. In four cases out of five the thing will come out this way.

"A new boy is engaged. He is meek and mild, apologetic of bearing and courteous of speech. He is apparently seeking an excuse for daring to make a living. He looks reproachfully at the head office boy, who orders him around in a rough, catch-as-catch-can style. Since that was going to be.

"Note this boy a little later. His pride superior has resigned or been dismissed, and he is now head office boy. He is meek and mild, apologetic and reproachful. Say, he's a worse young ruffian than his predecessor, bullyrags the newcomer, ignores the cuspidor, uses language not fit to print and comes dangerously near 'sassing' his employer. He knows it all, and a little more.

"There are exceptions but they prove the rule."—New York Globe.

A Big Grasshopper.

A geographical expedition which set out for Australia on an exploring and mapmaking tour had engaged a negro cook, who took great interest in everything he saw. While the party was en route a kangaroo broke out of the grass and made for the horizon with prodigious leaps, an event that interested the colored gentleman exceedingly.

"You all have pretty wide meadows hereabouts, I reckon," he said to the native who was guiding the party.

"Not any larger than those of other countries," returned the guide most politely.

"Well, there must be mighty powerful high grass considerations, huh?" he insisted.

"Not that I know of," replied the guide. "Why do you ask such odd questions?"

"Why, I'll tell you, boss. I was thinkin' of the mighty uncommon magnitude of them grasshoppers."—Kansas City Independent.

An Artist's Ruse.

A Roman cavalier commissioned a great artist to paint his portrait, no definite price being agreed upon. When the portrait was finished, the painter asked 100 crowns in payment. The highborn sitter, amazed at the demand, returned no more nor dared to send for his counterfeit presentment, whereupon the artist hit upon the happy expedient of first painting bars across the portrait then affixing the doleful legend, "Imprisoned for debt," and finally placing it in a prominent part of his studio, to which Roman nobles frequently resorted. Ere long a rich relative came to the rescue and released his kinsman.

Newton's Telescope.

Newton's telescope is a clumsy looking instrument, nine inches in length, two inches in aperture and capable of magnifying thirty-eight times. It was entirely made by Newton himself, who first exhibited it before the Royal society in 1671, and more than 100 years later his successor in the presidency of the society laid before George III Sir William Herschel's scheme for making a telescope on Newton's plan, to be forty feet in length and four feet in aperture.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Kept Busy.

One of the contemporary poets asks, "Where are the bright girls of the past?" Our own observation is that some of them are administering cambric tea or paregoric to the bright girls of the future.

THE BOY MONARCH OF THE PORTUGUESE

King Manuel II., Who Now Rules His Troubled Country, Was a Lieutenant In the Navy.

Quaint Lisbon, the Capital, One of the World's Most Beautiful Cities—Relics of the Moors.

THE new king of Portugal, Manuel II., is but a boy of eighteen and comes to the throne under circumstances that entitle him to an unusual degree of sympathy. When revolutionists struck down his father, King Carlos, and his elder brother, the Crown Prince Luis, they intended to kill him, too, but only succeeded in wounding him in the arm. His full name is Manuel Maria Philippe Carlos Amadia Luis Miguel Gonzaga Xavier Francisco d'Assisi Eugenio, and before his accession to the throne he held the title of Duc de Beja. He is a handsome young fellow and devoted to his mother, Queen Amelie, by whose counsel he has been guided in the recent crisis. He was born in Lisbon on Nov. 15, 1889, educated under private instructors, entered the navy at fifteen as midshipman and rose to be lieutenant. He has fair hair and complexion—as has always been in much favor with the Portuguese people.

The first diplomat to offer condolence to the bereaved royal family of Portugal was the American minister, Charles Page Brown. Mr. Brown succeeded Francis B. Loomis in his present post about five years ago and previous to that time had made a good record as our minister to Brazil. It was while he was in South America that he acquired a collection of cockatoos which learned to surprise the natives by crying in chorus, "Hurrah for the United States!" Minister Bryan was born in Chicago in 1856 and graduated from the University of Virginia and Columbia Law school. Previous to his diplomatic service he was a member of the legislatures of Colorado and Illinois.

The city of Lisbon, the capital of Portugal, sits grandly on seven hills, like Rome. It is one of the most beautiful cities of Europe. The sides of the steep hills are terraced with white blocks of stone, capped with tasteful balustrades and at various elevations gardens may be seen luxuriant with flowers. The city is full of small parks and beautified squares, or plazas, oftentimes abounding in sinuosity. The finest street in the city is the Avenida da Liberdade. In the center is a broad driveway flanked by granolithic walks twenty-five feet in width. Then on each side come twenty-five feet of grass and flowers and twenty-five feet of walk again. Roadways with car tracks and sidewalks again reaching to the houses complete the space between the rows of splendid residences. There are eight rows of trees, and out of jars in the hands of two huge river gods spring two rivulets which wend their way along the avenue, crossed here and there by bridges, and disappear at length into tunnels in cross streets.

It was as his carriage was approaching one of the handsome squares of the city, the Praco do Commercio, that King Carlos was assassinated and with him the Crown Prince Luis. This square is surrounded on three sides by the naval arsenal, to which the monarch and his son were taken as they were dying; by the exchange, the custom house and other public buildings, while on the remaining side is the river Tagus. It is on one of the hills that the Ajuda palace, the principal residence of the royal family, is situated. It is an imposing structure of white marble. King Carlos spent much time in the country palace at Cintra. The cathedral of Lisbon was once a Moorish mosque, and there are numerous reminders of the days of the Moors, among them the Church of the Martyrs, erected on the spot where Alfonso I mounted the walls of the city and rescued it from its Mohammedan conquerors. The occupation by the Moors lasted from 716 to 1147. Even today there is a large population of Moorish descent. In fact, Lisbon is divided into two parts, occidental and oriental.

Very soon after the death of King Carlos and Prince Luis their bodies were enshrined. It has for some time been the custom to embalm the bodies of members of the royal family, and sometimes in this way a favored traveler is permitted to gaze upon the face of a dead monarch. One writer describes seeing the features of Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg, the king consort, who was grandfather of the late sovereign. The visitor looked upon him through a pane of glass, and the long deceased monarch seemed merely asleep. Although the embalming custom is not of very ancient date, it has for centuries been the habit to place the coffins containing royal remains in the pantheon of the old monastery of St. Vincent on one of the hills of the city and the place of interment of Carlos and Luis. Most of the monarchs of Portugal for nearly 300 years lie here in boxes ranged along the walls, and a tourist once said the sight reminded him of old fashioned trunks set in rows and all in readiness for a hasty journey should one become necessary.

ANOTHER AMERICAN DUCHESS

Marriage of Daughter of T. P. Shonts to Duc de Chaulnes.

Only second in interest to the Szechenyi-Vanderdilt nuptials is the international match between the Duc de Chaulnes et Picquigny and Miss Theodora Shonts. The couple chose BRIDE OF THE DUC DE CHAULNES.

Feb. 15 as the date of their wedding, which comes pretty near being St. Valentine's day. Theodore P. Shonts, who came into the limelight when he was chairman of the Panama canal commission, did not take to the idea of his daughter marrying a foreigner, but he yielded after the French nobleman had waged an urgent suit for the fair Theodora's hand. The bride is known as "Tousy" in the family circle. She is eighteen, and he is thirty, and the courting covered a period of about two years, during which many premature rumors of an engagement were circulated, much to the annoyance of ex-Chairman Shonts, who is reported to have said to inquirers on one occasion: "Oh, bother the dukes! I haven't any time for dukes."

CLARENCE HALL

Government Expert on Explosives and Life Saving Methods in Mines.

The large number of disasters in coal mines in this country in the past few weeks has called especial attention to the recommendations of President Roosevelt's annual message to congress respecting the establishment of a bureau of mines and to the report of the geological survey on accidents in coal mines prepared by Clarence Hall, assisted by Walter O. Snelling. Mr. Hall is an expert on methods of preventing accidents and of saving life when disasters occur. At the time of the explosion and fire at the Darr mine in Pennsylvania he went into the tunnels where victims lay equipped with an apparatus excluding fire damp.

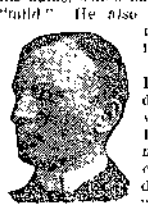
Plans have been prepared for the establishment of a station for testing explosives and safety lamps and life saving apparatus under the auspices of the government. It is expected that Mr. Hall will be at its head.

Stories Told In Congress.



ANDREW J. PETERS.

THERE is an interesting coincidence concerning two new members of the Sixtieth congress from Massachusetts and representing Boston districts. These new members are Andrew J. Peters and Joseph Francis O'Connell. Mr. O'Connell represents the Tenth Massachusetts district and Mr. Peters the Eleventh. Both are Democrats, both were born in Boston in the same year, 1872, both are bachelors, both graduated from the Harvard Law school, and both practice law. Congressman Peters received both the degree of bachelor of arts and that of bachelor of laws from Harvard. He served three years in the Massachusetts legislature, two years of that time in the senate. He has also served in the militia of the state of Massachusetts.

So much attention did little Lucile Hughes, the pretty six-year-old daughter of Representative Hughes of Paterson, N. J., attract when she visited the house of representatives recently that it was difficult for Leader Williams to summon the full Democratic strength whenever tellers were demanded. That evening she was asked by a friend what she had learned at school during the day.

"I didn't go to school today," she replied. "I went up to the house with papa, and you don't learn anything up there."

Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota is the most serious minded statesman in the world and has a bad memory for names. When he was a member of the all star aggregation headed by Theodore Roosevelt that toured the west in the campaign of 1900 another member of the cast was Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., of Massachusetts. Governor Guild is extremely sensitive about the pronunciation of his name, which has the "I" long, as in "build." He also insists on his full name, with the "Jr." included.

SENATOR P. J. MCCUMBER.

As long as Senator Hansbrough introduced him Guild was happy, for Hansbrough pronounced his name correctly and always described him as "Curtis Guild, Jr." Finally Senator McCumber took the introduction end of the job and could not get Guild's name right to save him. He introduced him as General Gill and as Colonel Gills and as Major Gild and finally capped the climax by calling him General Miles. Guild went into President Roosevelt's car and exploded.

"If I have a profound contempt for anybody, it is for an idiot who cannot get a name right. If this lunatic goes on mispronouncing my name I'll"—

"Why, who has been mispronouncing your name, Curtis?" asked Roosevelt.

"Why, this man from North Dakota," replied Guild heatedly—"this man named—named—what is the fellow's name? Oh, Cucumber!"

A Lazy Liver

May be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. It would be a stupid as well as savage thing to beat a weary or starved man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the lagging, torpid liver it is a great mistake to lash it with strong drastic drugs. A torpid liver is but an indication of an ill-nourished, enfeebled body whose organs are weary with over work. Start with the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in working order and see how quickly your liver will become active. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of "liver trouble" by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood-making glands, cleanses the system from poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs.

If you have bitter or bad taste in the morning, poor or variable appetite, coated tongue, foul breath, constipated or irregular bowels, feel weak, easily tired, despondent, frequent headaches, pain or distression "small of back," gnawing or distressed feeling in stomach, perhaps nausea, "sinking" or goneness "risings" in throat after eating, and kindred symptoms of weak stomach and torpid liver, no medicine will relieve you more promptly or cure you more permanently than Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Perhaps only a part of the above symptoms will be present at one time and yet point to torpid liver or biliousness and weak stomach. Avoid all hot bread and biscuits, griddle cakes and other indigestible food and take the "Golden Medical Discovery" regularly and stick to its use until you are vigorous and strong.

The "Discovery" is non-secret, non-alcoholic, is a glyceric extract of native medicinal roots with a full list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. Its ingredients are endorsed and extolled by the most eminent medical writers of the age and are recommended to cure the diseases for which it is advised.

Don't accept a substitute of unknown composition for this non-secret MEDICINE OF KNOWN COMPOSITION.

She Told Him a Lie.

He had been dining well, but not too wisely, and the next morning his conscience as well as his head smote him pretty considerably. Yet he managed to struggle down to breakfast and to make an attempt to toy with the dainty and tempting dishes which his dear little wife had thoughtfully provided.

"Cecil," said his better half gently as she watched his ineffectual endeavors to do justice to the matutinal repast, "I am afraid that I told you a lie yesterday, and I want you to forgive me, dear."

"A lie?" he asked wonderingly.

"Yes. As you left the house you will remember I said to you, 'You'll be home early, darling?' Well, it wasn't true."

And he went out a sadder and wiser man.

Mountains Had Not Moved.

The story is told that when Judge William Rogers was chairman of the school committee in a New England town one examination day he went around questioning pupils of the middle grade. He asked a boy named Rock where the Rocky mountains were. The boy answered correctly, but failed to be promoted that term.

The following year the judge asked the same question. Rock replied, "The same place they were last year."

The U. S. Government in its "Pure Food Law" does not "endorse" or "guarantee" any preparation, as some manufacturers in their advertisements would make it appear. In the case of medicines the law provides that certain drugs shall be mentioned on the label, if they are ingredients of the preparations. Ely's Cream Balm, the well known family remedy for cold in the head, hay fever and nasal catarrh, doesn't contain a single injurious drug, so the makers have simply to print the fact that it complies fully with all the requirements of the law.

Wholesome Fear.

Miss H., the principal of a grammar school, was investigating a case brought her by a pupil.

"Are you quite sure that was the way it happened, Mrs. P.?"

"Miss H., that was just the way. I'm telling you the truth. I wouldn't dare tell you a lie. I'm not well enough today."—Woman's Home Companion.

A Reason.

"Pa," asked Mr. Henpeck's little boy, "why did Patrick Henry say, 'Give me liberty or give me death?'"

"He may have been out five minutes after the curfew rang the night before."—Chicago Record-Herald.

POLITICAL MATTERS.

It would appear by the light of the past week's events, that each county in the Congressional district has produced a candidate for the Congressional nomination and that each county is to stand by its candidate. This is a fair, courteous position to maintain and will tend toward a lessening of the bitterness which must come in the evnt of a fight. The delegates in the convention will then solve the perplexing problem as between three such worthy Republicans —three such truly representative citizens as Congressman Knapp of Lewis county; County Judge Stowell of Oswego and Hon. I. N. Hunt of Jefferson. Mr. Hunt whose announcement of his aspiration toward the congressional nomination was the latest one of the trio striving to attain the desired end, to publicly ask the electors for their attention. His open letter of announcement was a sane, logical statement of his position and it cleared the political atmosphere in Jefferson county to a not inconsiderable degree.

Senator Cobb of Watertown was a guest of the Oswego Chamber of Commerce on Friday evening. Mr. Cobb is a candidate for renomination to the senatorship and asyet no opposition has developed to his return. There are a number of Oswego county men, however, who are casting envious glances toward the senatorial seat and it may be that announcements will be made later. Senator Cobb has been a conspicuous State figure and his record will make a strong bid for public favor, whenever the electors commence to arouse from their condition of political lethargy throughout the district.

One thing more the Times would remark. Oswego county ranks with any other county in the State for importance and she is growing in strength all the time. There are four important offices to be divided between the two counties, Oswego and Jefferson—and woe betide the clique or combination that strives to throw all the favors to one county. Be fair, Jefferson county, and you will never have cause to regret the reapportionment which linked the political destinies of the two counties.

Board of Health.

The Board of Health is doing considerable business these days, some of which meets with the approval of all residents and some of which is strenuously opposed by those waited upon. As the moves are practically all along the line of betterment of conditions, it is safe to say none of the moves will be rescinded. At the last meeting Garbage Collector Klitts was instructed to collect all garbage at night and in sealed cans. The clerk of the Board was authorized to ascertain how many children attending the local schools were unvaccinated and to report to the Board. It was also decided that a herd of cows owned by a firm or individual supplying milk to the city vendors, must average fifty points or be refused admission to the trade. Cleanliness, condition of barns, cattle, cans, etc., to be accounted as points.

County Court.

The March Trial Term of County Court will be convened in Pulaski on March 2, Judge Stowell presiding. The term promises to be a long one as many cases are awaiting trial and all the indictments found by the Grand Jury now in recess, and by that body when it reconvenes if any are found will be remanded to the County Court for trial. This latter is dependent on whether or not the Grand Jury will reassemble within the next two weeks.

Baptist Young People's ...

The Baptist young people of this county will hold their second annual rally here next Monday afternoon and evening, Feb. 24. Ten-minute papers will be presented on the following subjects: The Social Committee, The Temperance Committee, The Young Christian and His Bible, The Young Christian and His Work, The Young Christian and Missions. These papers will be followed by an open parliament on young people's problems and the local class in Sacred Literature will hold one of its meetings before the audience. Rev. I. J. Wilmarth of Hannibal will conduct the consecration service and Rev. Charles O. Wright, of Syracuse, will give an address in the evening.

It's Time.

Clarence E. Pitts on Saturday wrote Attorney H. D Coville that he would allow the matter of a recount of the vote cast last Fall to drop, as he did not wish to cause the Supervisors any more annoyance or the taxpayers any more expense. A similar resolution adopted by Mr. Pitts several weeks ago would have been more to the point. The more Mr. Pitts "investigates" Oswego county electors, the more he discovers that he does not possess all of the honor and honesty in the county.

The country grocer was issuing instructions to his new assistant. "It's only by looking closely after trifles," said the proprietor, "that a profit can be made in these days of close competition." "Yes-sir," came from the boy. "For example," continued the grocer, "when you pick the flies out of the sugar don't throw them away. Put 'em among the currants."

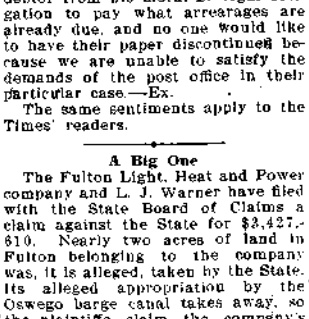
Attention Readers!

We call attention of our readers to the fact that the postal department has issued a new ruling that after April 1, next, no newspapers will be admitted to the mails at regular rates when the subscription is more than one year in arrears. This will probably impress most people as high handed interference with the private relations of citizens, and it is directed against an individually weak class: "but might makes right" and we see no other course, than to submit as gracefully as possible and call upon our friends to help us meet the conditions. Will each one to whom this ruling applies kindly communicate with us at once and if possible enclose a remittance that will remove their paper from the danger of exclusion from the mails. Our friends will see that we have no choice in this matter. All papers, the arrears on which are not arranged for and are one year or more behind must be discontinued on above date. Kindly make it a point to attend to this matter at once. The stoppage of a paper does not in any sense release the debtor from his moral or legal obligation to pay what arrearages are already due, and no one would like to have their paper discontinued because we are unable to satisfy the demands of the post office in their particular case.—Ex.

The same sentiments apply to the Times' readers.



A Big One

The Fulton Light, Heat and Power company and L. J. Warner have filed with the State Board of Claims a claim against the State for $2,427.-610. Nearly two acres of land in Fulton belonging to the company was, it is alleged, taken by the State. Its alleged appropriation by the Oswego barge canal takes away, so the plaintiffs claim, the company's water and power plant.

This appropriation will make the land valueless and the company claims that its water rights along the Oswego river will be ruined and that it will be forced to break the contract it now has for power and light with commercial firms and the city of Fulton The company asks interest on its claim from August 6th, 1906.

The appraisal of the estate of Dr. Charles G. Bacon, Fulton, shows property valued at $36,690.29. The gross amount of the estate was $38,-287.43, of which $3,000 was real property and the expenses of administration were $1,597.14. The assets consist of about $13,000 in cash, stock in the Western Union valued at $2,275, stock in the First National bank, Fulton, valued at $1,500 and the remainder in notes and mortgages. By the terms of the will the Fulton hospital gets a bequest of $1,000 and the Sunday school of the First M. E. church $2,500. Surrogate Miller has filed an order appointing County Attorney Coville to examine guardian accounts which should have been filed by February 1st.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Mrs. Charles T. Currier of the west side has been quite ill.

Mr. Thomas Hunter has returned from a southern trip.

Mr. Fred Snyder has returned from an extended trip in the interest of the Victoria Paper company.

Mr. E. M. Worden of Salem, Va., has been the guest of his daughter, Mrs. H. Putnam Allen.

Mr. William G. A. Kelley has leased one of Chief Ross's houses in State street to which he is removing this week.

Hon. and Mrs. Thomas D. Lewis and Miss Sara Lewis will spend several weeks with Dr. Murney Lewis, in New York city.

Mr. Willard C. Tucker returned on Saturday to his home in New York city, after a sojourn of several weeks with his sister, Miss Grace J. Tucker.

The president of Cazenovia Seminary, who accompanied the basketball team from that institution on Saturday, remained over Sunday as a guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Redhead.

On Friday, February 28, the W. C. T. U. will meet at the home of Mrs. Berry, 204 Hannibal street. The topic to be discussed will be "press work" and the leader will be Mrs. Mahlerwein. The current events discussion will be under the leadership of Mrs. Wesley McCully.

A judgment of deficiency in the sum of $1,973.62 was filed on Thursday by the plaintiff in the case of Elizabeth T. Stableford as committee, etc., vs. Timothy Sullivan. The latter's property in the vicinity of Fulton was sold by the sheriff and came within this amount of satisfying a judgment secured against him some time ago.

Joseph Williamson of the West side sustained three fractured ribs as the result of a fall through a trap door in the new section of the American Woolen company's mill, while he was assisting in moving some machinery on Wednesday. The drop was in the vicinity of fifteen feet. Dr. Cusack looked after the man's injuries.

There are few theatrical offerings that abound in genuine mirth provoking episodes and situations, intermingled with just the right consistency of pathos. Such a play is the American comedy success, "The Heir to the Hoorah," which comes to the Foster Theatre in a few weeks. An unusually strong cast, embracing many of the original members, and the original production will be seen here.

Lake Ontario has reached the high water mark for several years. The Oswego river is contributing an unusual quota for this season of the year, to the swelling of the lakes' volume.

Mr. Luther W. Mott of Oswego was a member of the notification committee which waited upon General Stewart L. Woodford of Brooklyn on Monday to notify him of his election as president of the National Hughes League.

A thaw of tremendous proportions reached this vicinity last week and before a north wind stayed it, six foot snow drifts became mere blots on the landscape. The roads ending into the city were impassable on Saturday, the R. F. D. carriers being unable to cover their routes and farmers were unable to come in to the Institute. The rain fell in torrents on Friday and Saturday and a heavy fog added to the disagreeable conditions. Business was at a standstill for two or three days.

The newly elected officers of the Pi Kappa Gamma sorority of the High school are: President, Merrell M. Wells; vice president, Grace E. Lynch; secretary, Ruth E. Switzer; assistant secretary, Vera Cordonnier; treasurer, Bernadette Crahan; critic, Miss Fox; guard, Eva Borst. The sorority has selected the following staff for the next Oracle: Editor-in-chief, Grace E. Lynch; assistant editor, Florence Deuel; athletics, Verna Hunter; class room and corridor, Lena Crockett; poems and exchanges, Ruth Earnshaw; grinds, Kate Stewart; business manager, Ruth Switzer; advertising manager, Mabel Seymour.

On Monday evening, March 2, a Charity ball will be given in Church's hall under the auspices of the Acacia Companions, the proceeds to be given to the hospital. The members of the club, Messrs. G. E. Mason, W. H. Hornibrook, J. D. McIntyre and David Katz, will leave nothing undone to provide a delightful evening for the guests, and the worthy cause for which the benefit is given, should appeal to the dancing and non-dancing public. Kapps' orchestra will furnish the music and gentlemen's tickets will be two dollars; extra lady, fifty cnts additional.

Phoenix Register: General Manager Powell of the Oswego County Independent Telephone company has presented the High school with a pair of telephones for experimental purposes. Mr. Powell announces that the exchange is to be connected with a whistle in one of the paper mills to be blown in case of fire, and any alarm sent in by their subscribers, day or night, will be transmitted at once to the mill and an alarm sounded. As the telephone subscribers are scattered over the entire corporation the village will soon have a reliable fire alarm system installed with no expense to the taxpayers. The benefits to be derived from this one service will go a long way toward compensating the village for the unsightly poles and wires. The new chainless dump wagon firm of Collins, Montague Brothers & Ostrander have leased the old Taber knife factory building and will proceed to put it in shape for the manufacture of their new patent chainless dump wagon. Mr. Collins is at present in Auburn where he is superintending the building of a sample wagon and when this is completed will take charge of installing the plant in this village and expects to have the same in operation about April 1.

There is a flaw in the new marriage license law that needs to be removed. The new law permits a city or town clerk, upon written consent of parents or guardian to issue a marriage license when the bride is between 16 and 18 years of age. But by section 376 of the penal code, a minister or magistrate who solemnizes a marriage when either of the parties is known by him to be under the legal age of consent, is guilty of a misdemeanor. The age of consent in this state is 18 years. So a license may be issued for a marriage which cannot legally be solemnized, a fact which it is important for ministers and magistrates to know.

Jack Tar and the Actor.

A famous Irish actor of the eighteenth century named John Moody early in life, before he went on the stage, had been to Jamaica and worked his passage home as a sailor before the mast. One night some time after he had been engaged at Drury Lane when he was acting Stephano in "The Tempest" a sailor in the front row of the pit got up and, standing upon the seat, hallooed out, "What cheer, Jack Moody—what cheer, messmate?"

This unexpected address rather astonished the audience. Moody, however, stepped forward and, recognizing the man, called out: "Tom Hullett, keep your jawking tacks aboard. Don't disturb the crew and passengers. When the show is over make sail for the stage door, and we'll finish the evening over a jug of punch. But till then, Tom, keep your locker shut." Moody, it is related, was as good as his word.

CHAPTER XI.

"OH, it's you, is it?" said Richard, the first to recover from astonishment. "Do you know, I almost fancied it was some one with designs on the poultry."

Mr. Van der Awe flushed, drew himself up and folded his arms in a strikingly dramatic pose.

"No," he answered without the first vestige of humor: "I was not after the poultry. To be perfectly frank, I was after you."

This was another one! Was everybody lying in wait for him this morning? Could he have speech with all the world but her?

"I admire candor," coolly remarked Richard in return, "and I rejoice in the fact that your desire is gratified. How may I serve you?"

"Lord Croyland," said the dramatic young gentleman, "there is a matter which must be settled between us here and now. Upon it depends my future happiness."

"All right," responded the Texan cheerily. "Shall it be rifles, pistols, lariats, bowie knives or arbitration?"

Once more Mr. Van der Awe flushed. He had a faint idea that the English nobleman was laughing at him, a point on which extreme youth is sometimes oversensitive.

"I think it can be settled by arbitration," he answered coldly. "Will you kindly follow me to some less public place?"

The two young gentlemen walked up the road for a short distance, stopping at the brow of a hill which overlooked the river. It struck Richard that this being continually led away from the house of his ladylove for secret conferences was growing rather monotonous. This was the fourth time in two days, and each excursion seemed to involve him more deeply in some quagmire of trouble. They sat down under a tree and for a time remained silent.

"Smoke?" asked Richard, holding out his cigar case.

"Thank you, no," said the young man sadly. "I have no heart for pleasure just at present. If you don't mind, we'll get down to business."

The Texan lit his cigar and expressed a willingness to open negotiations with the enemy, while the enemy collected his thoughts and dug holes in the ground with a short sharp stick.

"Lord Croyland," he began at last, "in this country openness and squareness are the first principles. I've heard that gentlemen have the same ideas in England. Is this true?"

Richard bowed.

"Very well. I'm going to ask you a plain, blunt question, without any intention of offense, and I want you to give me a straight, plain answer. Which one are you after?"

Richard's cigar nearly dropped from between his teeth, while he gazed at his questioner in extreme astonishment.

"Which one of what?" he asked when he recovered himself.

"The girls," said Mr. Van der Awe. "Perhaps I didn't put it clearly."

The Texan tried hard to conceal his amusement and succeeded imperfectly.

"Ah, I see," he returned. "Which one are you after?"

"Miss Imogene," confessed the young man without reserve, "and if you don't object to my confidence, Lord Croyland, I love her as no man ever loved a girl before. It's—it's—well, bang it, it's painful!" He fell into a thoughtful pause, then looked up again. "Now, I think I've been perfectly candid with you, and I want you to be quite frank with me. If it's Miss Chittendon we can decide what to do later."

"My dear fellow," said Richard, "you can't imagine how I appreciate your openness and squareness. It throws new light upon your glorious American people. Allow me to give you a cigar and be equally unreserved. While I admit without hesitation that Miss Imogene Chittendon is a most charming and utterly desirable young lady, I beg to assure you, sir, that never for a single fraction of a second have I entertained the least idea of—of—in your own phrase, of going after her. Is that satisfactory?"

"Entirely so," said Mr. Van der Awe, holding out his hand with the nearest approach to happiness he had yet shown. "I'm glad to know you in your true, real light. You are not a bit like other Englishmen I have met. Fact is, you don't even talk like one."

"Thanks," bowed Richard, prudently screwing in his monocle. The eyeglass always made him feel like an idiot; but, on the other hand, it gave a dash of ideal color to his appearance without which he would have been lost. "Is there anything else in which I can serve you, old chap?"

"Yes, Lord Croyland, there is. You have very kindly stated to me that you have no intention of making a bid for Imogene. That's very square of you, and I appreciate it. But would you mind telling her so?"

Richard laughed a long, free, bubbly laugh that came echoing back in mercy mockery at this most ingenious proposition.

"Well, he said, "that's rather a difficult thing to do, isn't it? Strikes me as rather—er—indelicate."

"Not at all," protested Mr. Van der Awe. "Imogene is a sensible girl"—oh, the blindness of love!—"and would understand you perfectly. You see," he explained, "she's young. Her mind, I confess frankly, is immature. She's apt to be—well, dazzled, I might say, by foreign titles and brass buttons and things of that description. It's a woman's natural instinct, you know, and I have no logical right to blame her. You see, I have reasoned it all out and am speaking from a standpoint of superior age and experience. Now, you can't find fault with that line of thought, can you?"

"Not a flaw," answered Richard gravely. "It's simply perfect. Go on."

The lover proceeded earnestly.

"As Imogene's future husband it is my duty to surround the child with every possible safeguard, and for that reason I should like her present fancy for you disillusionized. She refused to let me go with her to pick wild flowers this morning and chose you, merely, I suppose, because you are an earl. That's why I followed you. Now, I'm not asking you to do anything that I would not do for you cheerfully, and so I ask you again if you would mind dropping a rather broad hint to Imogene that a union with you is out of the question. You might explain that you are unworthy of her, or something like that. I don't care how you fix it just so it's fixed. What do you say?"

Richard thought for a little space, especially of his harmless but decidedly imprudent remarks to Miss Imogene of half an hour ago. Then he flung away his cigar and turned to his companion.

"I should like her present fancy for you disillusionized."

"Look here," he said, "I'm going to help you out in this matter, but I'll have to do it in my own way. I have a brilliant idea as a starter. Just listen and don't interrupt me. They're going to have a play next Friday night called 'The Man and the Hoe'—no, I beg pardon—the 'Bird.' I'm the man, and Miss Imogene is the bird. You see, the rough idea is this: I'm engaged to Miss Renwyck, but am in love with Miss Imogene to the point of frenzy—in the play, of course. So far so good. The man is in the room with the bird and declares his passion in language which is simply beautiful making other demonstrations that are realistic both to the actors and the audience. Of course I'd rather set my heart on doing this role; but, by Jove I'm going to chuck the thing and let you do it!"

"Me!" cried Mr. Van der Awe, clutching at his benefactor's hand. "Oh, I say"—

"Wait," said Richard. "I haven't finished yet. A young man of your obvious histrionic talent ought fairly to glitter in a part like that, and, besides, it will give you a chance to do the devoted to your ladylove. Just as you are in the middle of it Miss Harriet sails in and denounces you. Oh, it's a bully little play, especially the denunciation! But you don't mind that on account of your great and glorious love for the bird. Miss Harriet's remarks just roll off you like water from a duck's back. Touching little scene! Hanged if I can see how I can give it up, but"— He paused, sighed, then turned impulsively: "Shucks! I don't want to appear mean. The part is yours!"

For half a minute perhaps Mr. Van der Awe gazed in silence at his generous friend, beaming with gratitude.

"Lord Croyland," he murmured brokenly at last, "you're a good fellow! I'll try to do the part justice. I—I don't know how to thank you."

"I'm sure you will. Don't mention it," said Richard, with the wan smile of a complete martyr. "Let's play a game of billiards."

CHAPTER XII.

RICHARD, much to his chagrin and disgust, did not see Miss Harriet until the four ladies and the two gentlemen sat down to luncheon. To one thing he had made up his mind definitely—he would follow Mr. Corrigan's advice and brazen it out, putting his faith in luck, but helping luck along with assurance. From the opposite side of the table the fair Imogene cast languishing glances in his direction, while on his left the ancient Miss Schermerly grew positively sprightly and covered him with a Gatling gun of perplexing questions. She wanted authentic information regarding barons, earls and noble dukes, to all of which Richard gave ready but quaint answers—answers that might have caused the English aristocracy to rise in one vast, furious mass and lynch him without formalities of trial or benefit of clergy.

"How different it is from what we read in novels," said Mrs. Renwyck. "I'm afraid our American authors are ill informed. Really, they ought to travel more."

"They travel enough, but I fancy they do not get into the best society abroad," suggested Miss Schermerly. "I shall prepare a paper upon that very subject for the Woman's Literary league. Would you have any objection, Lord Croyland, if I quoted you as an authority?"

"Not in the least," said Richard gallantly. "In fact, my dear, Miss Schermerly, I should be honored—vastly so."

He smiled on himself at the thought of the real Lord Croyland should that gentleman ever chance to read the paper in question, but that was Croyland's affair, not his.

"I will bring my notebook into the library this afternoon," the ancient one stated, and, with a smile to Richard, "Could you help me then, do you think?"

"I should be most pleased," said Richard, with an answering smile, "but I fear I'm engaged to Miss Renwyck this afternoon for quite a long horseback ride. At another time I shall be charmed, I assure you."

Miss Harriet started. She was unaware of any such engagement, but somehow the idea did not displease her. She smiled and offered to release Lord Croyland, but that gentleman would not hear of it.

"By the way," said Miss Harriet in order to change the subject, "Imogene tells me that you have agreed to take part in our little play. It is awfully good of you to help us out."

"Not at all," answered Richard, with pronounced sadness. "It is a pleasure to serve you in any way."

Mr. Van der Awe in thunderstruck amazement stared blankly across the table, while his half raised fork fell clattering upon his plate.

"Oh, I say"— he began, but Richard arrested further speech by a swift glance. There was silence for a moment; then Miss Renwyck spoke:

"You don't seem to be overenthusiastic at the prospect, Lord Croyland. Don't you think the part would suit you?"

The Texan considered her words thoughtfully, fumbled for his monocle, got it into position after another gymnastic exercise with his left eye and sighed elaborately.

"The part," he stated, with a slow drawl, "is delightful as I understand it—but—shall I be perfectly candid, Miss Renwyck?"

The ladies in a breath assured him that that was just what they wished, so he continued, struggling with embarrassment:

"I've never gone in for that sort of thing—er—but once and confess with regret that I caused a fiasco. I'm very stupid at such things—really, you know, abominable. It is rather the duty of a guest to comply with the wishes of his hostess, and I feel it incumbent upon me to make a trial of the role, even if the outcome holds me up to open ridicule. We Englishmen appear a bit eccentric to Americans, I am fully aware, but nevertheless it hurts at times when"—

He paused, and looked at his plate in deep confusion. Miss Harriet blushed furiously. She had wounded her guest unwittingly and was sincerely sorry. Lord Croyland, she thought, was acting very nobly in thus sacrificing himself for the sake of her foolish whims, and she ought to have consulted him first of all. She made up her mind at once and turned to him impulsively.

"Lord Croyland," she said, "I beg you to believe me when I say that I never thought for an instant of holding you up to ridicule. Won't you forgive me? It was splendid of you to agree, and—there—we won't have the play at all!"

"But, my dear Miss Renwyck," Richard protested, "I should feel frightfully cut up if you abandoned it on my account. Do go on with it. Perhaps I shan't be so jolly bad after all. I"—

All four ladies immediately took up the cudgels against him until his polite protests grew weaker and weaker, finally subsiding in a suggestion that relieved the situation from every point of view.

"Why not have Mr. Van der Awe do the part?" he asked, with a beaming smile directed at that young gentleman. "You'd do it splendidly, old chap, and I shall be uncommonly obliged to you."

Amid a chorus of approval the young lover accepted blushingly, while Richard not only freed himself of a hateful task, but became a hero and a genius in the eyes of the entire party.

As they passed out of the dining room Cornelius plucked Richard's sleeve and whispered:

"See here; I thought you said you couldn't act?"

"Can't," returned the Texan, with a sly wink. "That was what you Americans call bluff, but if you let on I'll wring your neck."

The Earl of Croyland pro tem. proceeded to his rooms with the object of arraying himself in a certain riding suit in the wardrobe of the Earl of Croyland, in actu, which would have made a cow puncher snort with disdain, but which Richard in his present state of mind rather longed for. Certainly he had no fault to find either with his prototype's taste or tailor. On entering his dressing room he was greeted by a sight which fairly took his breath away, and he was not easily surprised, either. In a corner opposite the door stood a handsome morris chair. In the chair sprawled Mr. Woolsey Bills holding a tumbler in one hand and Richard's brandy flask in the other. One-third of the original contents was still in the glass; the other two-thirds was obviously in Bills, for that worthy smiled pleasantly at his master and made no attempt to rise or to apologize for his extraordinary conduct.

Richard's first impulse was to take the offender by the scruff of the neck and kick him soundly through his host's baronial halls, repeating the attention until his valet reached a point somewhere beyond the Renwycks' front gate, but on second thought he changed his mind. First and foremost he wanted information. The kicking could be postponed. There would be time enough for that later.

"Well, Bills," he began, with a dash of sarcasm in his voice, "for a recently employed servant you seem to be doing remarkably well."

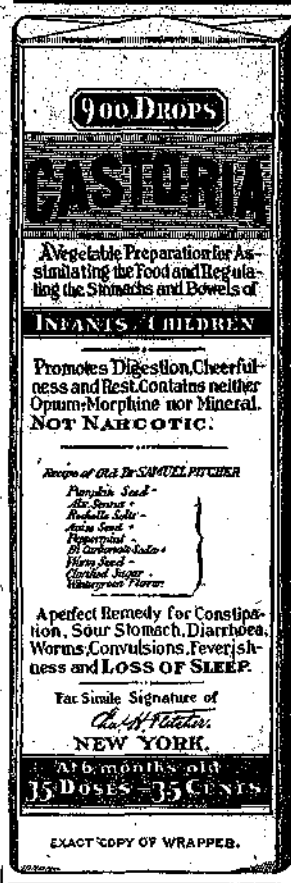
"Yes, sir," returned the valet, with the utmost complacence; "I'm doin' nicely, thank you." He helped himself to another pabulum of liquid cheer and held the glass between his eye and the light. "This 'ere brandy, sir, is equal good as wot we 'as on the other side. Your judgment's better than the earl's, sir. You 'ealth, sir."

Richard stuffed his clinched hands deep into his pockets, striving with all his might to keep them from the impudent rascal's collar. What did it mean? However, there was nothing to be gained by violence, while much could be learned through the exercise of a little tact. Therefore he curbed his rage and spoke calmly. If Bills had known the Texan better he would have realized that when he was most quiet he was most dangerous.

"Might I inquire as to the reason of your present condition?" asked his master.

"Yes," answered Bills airily, but nevertheless in quite open defiance; "me an' you 'ss got to part company, Mr. Williams."

"Ah!"



"Yes, sir."

The murder was out. The man's manner of address implied many things which Richard was as quick to grasp as to appreciate their consequences. Bills might drop a bombshell in the Renwyck household by a mere mention of the name of "Mr. Williams." A confession on Richard's part would be bad enough, but to be forced to admit the accusation of a servant would be infinitely worse. Bills, too, seemed aware of the situation and was determined to make the most of it, as was shown by his next remark.

"Mr. Williams," he began, with the confidence of holding the whip hand, "I'm not disposed to make trouble, sir, though it do go against me to be deceivin' people. I've got no complaint ag'inst my present dooties, Mr. Williams, sir, an' special so as they is light." Richard made no answer, and Bills continued, "I might—I say I might—be indoored to stay on, sir, for a small advance of two hundud pun, with a promise of another one to come."

"I dare say you might," assented Richard, with ironic calm quite lost upon the man. "Anything else?"

University Tests.

One might say that the first test at Oxford is athletic ability, the next sociability and the final scholastic ability. When you have passed the first two, you are the admiration of your friends; when you have shown yourself a scholar besides, you are the admiration of your college.—Rhodes Scholar in Sunset Magazine.

How Things Grow!

Things like to be planted, just so they can grow. Boys are a good deal the same way. They can hardly wait till they grow big enough to wear long trousers, and then when they get to be men they grow sorry they are growing old so fast. But there it doesn't really matter about growing—not if we grow in other ways, if we grow in kindness and justice and strength.

Money grows in the Bank just as naturally as a tree grows in the ground. But if you don't plant the sapling, you naturally can't expect to have a tree, and if you don't begin to put your money aside, you can't ever expect to have any surplus; because surplus is the unused part of your daily earnings, and the man who earns a little and saves a little will have more at the end of a given period than the man who earns a great deal and saves nothing, which doesn't require any argument to prove.

And if the farmer plants the soil and with the aid of the golden sunshine reaps his harvest of dollars, why should he not plant those dollars when they will grow also. The Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. invites your interest-bearing account.

NIGHT RIDERS OF THE TOBACCO WAR

Why Kentucky and Tennessee Warehouses Are Burned and Their Plantations Ruined.

THE so called "tobacco war" in Kentucky and Tennessee is the latest industrial ruction to attract national attention. It was back in the days immediately succeeding the Revolution that there was what was called in those times a "whisky rebellion." The enforcement of the laws respecting the fragrant weed and the products of the distilleries have more than once in the history of the nation threatened disturbance of the peace. The events of the past three years in the so called "dark tobacco district" of Kentucky and Tennessee recall the days of the famous Kuklux Klan. The new band of masked marauders is known as the "night riders." Its operations have left burned warehouses and ruined tobacco plantations in their train. Damage to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars has been done by the members of this mysterious oathbound conspiracy, and the subject of suppression of the raids has taxed the executives of the two commonwealths to the utmost. Both Governor Augustus E. Willson of Kentucky and Governor Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee have declared in the most positive manner their determination to maintain the law and suppress the raiders and their organization.

It is in the dark tobacco district that the government tobacco monopolies of Spain, France and Italy and the Imperial Tobacco company of Great Britain obtain a large portion of their supplies of the weed. Formerly the grower sold his crop to the buyer who offered the best price. Then it was only in years when crops were larger than the extent of the demand that prices were low. The scale was fixed, generally speaking, by the operation of the law of supply and demand. The foreign companies kept buyers in the district, and the competition between them kept up prices, but after a time the spirit of combination resulted in the elimination of this competition. The foreign buyers got together. To what extent the American Tobacco company, commonly known as the tobacco trust, was involved in the combination has been a matter of dispute. This company recently issued a statement saying that it was not affected by the night riders' operations. It asserted that in the districts where its purchases have been chiefly made there has been no disorder.

Whatever the facts in this regard, when the growers found that prices had dropped to a point which made the production of tobacco minus profits they on their part tried combination.

Competition Destroyed by Combination of Buyers—Independent Growers Attacked.

They formed the Dark Tobacco District Planters' association, their object being to pool their tobacco in the warehouses and hold it for their own prices. Not all the growers joined the association, however. The independent farmers and the tobacco companies have been made the victims of midnight raids which have resulted in such widespread damage. The Dark Tobacco District Planters' association has disclaimed responsibility for the raids. It has even charged that persons outside it had ruined their own plants and tobacco crops in order to discredit the Planters' association and turn public sentiment against it. The raiders wear a white badge in the shape of a triangle on the right breast. They are usually mounted, and both rider and horse are disguised. Their visitations prove that when once a raid is decided upon the riders are ready to carry their work to a bloody end.

A GOULD ON THE STAGE.

Mistress of Georgian Court and Her Acting at a "Dramatic Tea."

The appearance of Mrs. George Gould in a play before an audience of society people at the Plaza hotel in New York recently recalled the days when as Edith Kingdon she was a favorite of the professional stage. She then belonged to the once famous Daly stock company, and it was her charming appearance behind the footlights that won the fancy and then the heart of her husband, who is regarded as the present head of the Gould house. She has appeared on the stage but once before since her entrance into the Gould family, and that was at a house party at the Gould country home at Lakewood, N. J., Georgian Court. The society affair in which she recently participated was called a "dramatic tea," and Mrs. Gould filled the leading role in the farce by Edward Van Zile entitled "Mrs. Van Vechten's Divorce Dance." The tea was given by Frederick Townsend Martin. The principal male role in the play was taken by Kyrle Bellew. The performance was one of the leading events of the society season in New York. The stage was set with properties furnished largely from Mrs. Gould's home, and she wore in the play a French gown of point lace built on cream satin and chiffon and trimmed with strands of pearls. She wore as ornaments a tiara of pearls, four ropes of pearls and a collaret of pearls bordered with diamonds.

MRS. GEORGE J. GOULD.

SIR OLIVER LODGE.

His Ideas on Immortality and His Scientific Achievements.

The fact that a man of the high scientific attainments of Sir Oliver Lodge should announce his belief in the possibility of intercourse between this world and the next has attracted much attention. Sir Oliver and Sir William Crookes stand at the very front among English scientists, and both have recently declared their belief in the genuineness of some spiritualistic manifestations. Sir Oliver's ideas on immortality and his so called "catechism" have also come in for much discussion. The catechism is a statement of belief as to the existence of God and the duties of men in reference to this life and that to come from the standpoint of an evolutionist.

Sir Oliver thinks belief in the survival of the consciousness and the will—in other words, the immortality of the soul—perfectly reasonable from the point of view of science and even goes so far as to hold that science is perhaps on the point of being able to demonstrate the existence of another world than the material one in which we now exist. He is the head of Birmingham university, an institution which is spending millions of dollars for the development of scientific and technical schools on a scale unprecedented in Great Britain. He is sometimes called the father of wireless telegraphy, as he was experimenting in that direction before Marconi was heard of and as far back as 1887 was flirting with the elusive electro magnetic waves. He and Hertz, working independently, found them about the same time. For his researches in this field he received the Rumford medal of the Royal society. Sir Oliver is [illegible]

Staggered Webster.

In the somewhat famous case of Mrs. Bodgen's will, which was tried in the Massachusetts supreme court many years ago, Daniel Webster appeared as counselor for the appellant. Mrs. Greenough, wife of the Rev. William Greenough of West Newton, was a very self possessed witness. Notwithstanding Mr. Webster's repeated efforts to disconcert her she pursued the even tenor of her way until Webster, becoming quite fearful of the result, arose, apparently in great agitation, and, drawing out his large snuffbox, thrust his thumb and finger to the very bottom and, carrying a deep pinch to both nostrils, drew it up with gusto, and then, extracting from his pocket a very large handkerchief, he blew his nose with a report that rang distinct and loud through the crowded hall.

He then asked, "Mrs. Greenough, was Mrs. Bodgen a neat woman?"

"I cannot give you full information as to that, sir. She had one very dirty trick," replied the witness.

"What was that, madam?"

"She took snuff."

Wasteful.

Grasper (a very careful man)—No, I should never allow my daughter to marry a journalist. He always wastes one side of the paper. And still less should she wed a poet. He doesn't even go to the end of the line.

Suited the Case.

Tom—Here! You've started your note to Borroughs "Dr. Sir." Don't you know that sort of abbreviation is very slovenly? Dick—No, sir. "Dr." is all right in this case. He owes me money.—Kansas City Independent.

Result of Early Training.

Cobwigger—In what way does Newrich show that he isn't a gentleman? Merritt—By paying cash for everything he buys.—Tailor.

Just praise is only a debt, but flattery is a present.—French Proverb.

Bert Barber, of Elton, Wisconsin, say: "I have only taken four doses of your Kidney and Bladder Pills and they have done for me more than any other medicine has ever done. I am still taking the pills, as I want a perfect cure." Mr. Barker refers to De Witt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. They are sold by all druggists.

Trials of Writers.

George Eliot in one of her letters referring to her novel "Daniel Deronda," writes as follows: "My book seems to me so unlikely ever to be finished in a way that will make it worth while giving to the world that it is a kind of glass in which I behold my infirmities." Again of the same work, "As usual, I am suffering much from doubt as to the worth of what I am doing and fear lest I may not be able to complete it so as to make it a contribution to literature and not a mere addition to the heap of books."

Montesquieu wrote thus to a friend: "I thought I should have killed myself these three months to finish a morceau (for his great work) which I wished to insert on the origin and revolutions of the civil laws of France. You will read it in three hours, but I do assure you that it cost me so much labor that it has whitened my hair."

The eminent modern French writer Gustave Flaubert suffered tortures in his efforts to attain perfection. When composing, he would sometimes spring to his feet, shriek aloud and call himself "blockhead," "idiot." No sooner was one doubt removed than another arose. At other times he would sit at his writing table as one magnetized, lost in contemplation. His friend Turgeneff declared that it was exceedingly touching to see his struggles with language. He would work a whole day and sometimes all night on a single page.

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy-

Roding, Ga. August 27, 1908.
Messrs. E. C. DeWitt & Co.,
Chicago, Ills.

Gentlemen:—
In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1906 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor emaciated Dyspepsia wreck will grasp at anything, and that Almanac happened to be my life saver. I bought a fifty cent bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the benefit I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.
May you live long and prosper.
Yours very truly,
C. N. CORNELL.

Why He Concealed His Calling.

"I hope," said the young man, "that partial concealment of the truth is no lie. If it is, I am telling a whopper right now, and I'm a divinity student too. That is what I am lying about. I don't tell that I am studying theology. If I did I wouldn't find it so easy to hold this job. I'm one of the down-on-his-luck students who has to work his way through college. One of the first things I learned when I began to look for a position was that the average employer of labor has no use for the divinity student. Somehow every man engaged in business holds the opinion that a young fellow who is studying for the ministry lacks backbone, and he is afraid to trust him with important duties.

"After I had ingenuously explained my circumstances to about twoscore of employers and had been turned down by all of them I got wise. I am working now. The boss doesn't know I am pegging away nights on church history. If he did the chances are he'd discharge me, not because he has any grudge against parsons or church history, but because he, like everybody else, would think I hadn't pluck enough to earn my salary."—New York Times.

A Dish of Tea.

In reference to a note about a "dish of tea," it may be mentioned that "dish" throughout the eighteenth century was a colloquialism for cup. In fashionable houses at first, and for long, tea was drunk from a cup without a handle brought from China. The vessel was termed a dish. When the Chinese cup was first copied by English potters, the convenience of a handle was added. The saucer also was brought from China. It received the name because of its resemblance to the English saucer, a platter in which sauce was served. The familiar gibe, "saucer eyes," was originally inspired by the sauce saucer long before Lord Arlington gave the first tea party in England in Arlington House, where Buckingham palace stands, at the Restoration period.—London Chronicle.

Mr. Fred A. Glynn of Oswego has been appointed deputy guager for this district, with headquarters in Oswego, to succeed the late John A. Barry. The position carries with it a salary of $1,000 a year. It is announced that Mr. Glynn will retire from the Republican County Committee as soon as he takes office.

Messrs. E. R. Redhead, J. H. Howe, F. W. Snyder, Edward C. Rogers, Wilfred L. Forsyth, James K. Carroll, Calvin R. Dines, Vincent C. Hall, Linn A. Richardson, Theodore H. Webb and John Painter enjoyed an outin on Wednesday evening to the home of Mr. Andrew McKay, near this city where a most delightful chicken dinner was served, at 7 o'clock. The guests made the trip on snow shoes and in sleighs. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the host by the guests prior to their departure for their homes.

Whistler's Odd Ways.

Lord Redesdale once gave a description of Whistler's methods to a meeting in London in support of a memorial to the great artist. He was painting, he said, a portrait of a lady. Whistler took up his position at one end of the room with his sitter and the canvas at the other end. For a long time he stood looking at his model, holding in his hand a huge brush full of color, such a brush as a man would use to whitewash a house. Then he rushed forward and smashed the brush full of color into the canvas. Then he ran back, and forty or fifty times he repeated this. At the end of that time there stood out on the canvas a space which exactly indicated the figure, the form and the expression of the sitter. There was a pathetic story attaching to the picture. The bailiffs were in the house when the picture was finished. That was quite a common occurrence, and Whistler only laughed, but he went round his studio with a knife and deliberately destroyed all his canvases, including this picture, which was to have been his (Lord Redesdale's).—Dundee Advertiser.

The Gentle Rebuff.

"Immeasurable are the rebuffs that the helpers of the poor, the seekers after charity for their suffering brothers undergo," said a New York charity organization official. "A friend of mine, a Methodist minister in a small western town, told me the other day of his last rebuff, a not unkind one. Entering the office of the local weekly, the minister said to the editor:

"'I am soliciting aid for a gentleman of refinement and intelligence who is in dire need of a little ready money, but who is far too proud a man to make his sufferings known.'

"'Why,' exclaimed the editor, pushing up his eyeshade, 'I'm the only chap in the village who answers that description. What's this gentleman's name?'

"'I regret,' said the minister, 'that I am not at liberty to disclose it.'

"'Why, it must be me,' said the editor. 'It is me. It's me, sure. Heaven prosper you, parson, in your good work.'"

An Unburied Picture.

Rossetti secured permission in 1869 to reopen the coffin of his wife in order to secure the manuscripts of some poems which he had buried with her seven years before.

Some such incident might have occurred in connection with J. M. W. Turner if his desire to be buried wrapped up in his own painting of "Carthage" had been carried out. There was some difficulty in selling the painting, and the artist kept the canvas by him. He always said he would be wrapped in it when he was buried and even went so far as to ask Chantrey if as his executor he would fulfill his wishes on that point.

"No doubt," answered the sculptor. "I shall bury you rolled up in your picture if it is one of the conditions of your will, but I would take you up next day and unroll you!"

The Master's Title.

Professor Key when head master of a large London school was one of the most genial gentlemen that ever filled that position. He was fond of encouraging fun in his boys and was not unwilling to recount occasionally during class time when anything prompted it the manners and customs of countries he had visited. On one occasion he was telling his class about Spain and said:

"Do you know, boys, that when a man attains to eminence there he is not called 'sir,' but is given the title of 'don?'"

One of the boys here called out:

"Then, I suppose, sir, they would call you Don Key?"

The gravity of the class was completely upset for the remainder of the afternoon.—Strand Magazine.

Price of His Treason.

Benedict Arnold died in London June 14, 1801. His life after his treason was a most unhappy one. He was avoided by men of honor and on many occasions deliberately insulted. He received a considerable sum of money from the British government and made several unsuccessful attempts to engage in business in British America and the West Indies and finally returned to London, where he died in obscurity. His second son, born in 1780, entered the British army in 1798, served with credit in many parts of the world and three years before his death in 1854 was made a lieutenant general.—Household Companion.

Running No Risk.

"What," asks the maiden aunt, "going to marry that Mr. Newwun? Why, you hardly know the man, Imogene. In the few days you have been acquainted with him you cannot possibly have learned anything of his family or antecedents or habits or personal circumstances."

"That is true, Aunt Keturah. But you have always told me that no woman who knows anything about a man will marry him."—Success Magazine.

A Definition.

"Paw," asked a thoughtful lad, wrinkling his brow, "what's a pessimist?"

"A pessimist, John J.," replied his father, "is a man who, after a cyclone has blown his house away with him in it, goes back and grumbles at his lot."—Puck.

NORTH VOLNEY.

Mr. Ira Campbell died of pneumonia Sunday, Feb. 16, at his home. He had been ill but a short time but owing to his advanced age—over 80 years—there was little chance of recovery. Mr. Campbell had been a resident of this place all his life and a prominent member of the church for many years. Mr. Campbell's wife died nearly three years ago, since then he has been cared for by his daughter, Mrs. H. L. Bowen. This winter his daughter and family moved into his house, where he died. Rev. H. L. Campbell and family were called home the latter part of last week by the serious illness of their father, Mr. Ira Campbell. Charles Bowen, a grandson of the deceased, is also very ill with pneumonia at the home of his father, Mr. H. L. Bowen, son-in-law of deceased, who is also ill with the grippe. Mr. Bowen's family have the sympathy of all in their multitude of troubles.

School closed Feb. 7 for a six weeks vacation.

Mr. William Coe of Fulton has been visiting friends and relatives in town.

Next social is to be given Feb. 21, weather permitting.

Miss Clara Green spent Sunday with her parents.

Miss Elizabeth Hunn entertained the G. L. B. C. club and other friends in honer of her birthday Saturday afternoon and evening.

The W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. James Vant last Thursday afternoon.

Miss Addie Gardner spent last week in Syracuse with Miss Blanche Reed.

The farmers and meat dealers were busy filling their ice houses last week.

The Volney postoffice has been discontinued and the residents will receive their mail by rural route 4.

Mr. S. S. Pegden has purchased Mrs. Pitcher's house and will move the first of March.

Miss Lucy Earl of Fulton spent a few days with Mrs. A Kellar last week.

Subscribers Please Take Notice.

The new postal law makes it imparative that all newspaper subscriptions be paid promptly upon their expiration. We are left without choice in the matter. The law became effective on Jan. 1, 1908, and publishers were given 90 days in which to make collections. At the expiration of that time subscribers must be dropped from the list.

Will you assist us in making provision for this emergency by promptly remitting your subscription now due?

Destructive Music.

A member of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Opera House tells a story that he had from one of the musicians attached to the orchestra there. It appears that a friend of the wife of the musician had during a call on the latter inquired as to the husband's taste in musical matters. Among other things she wanted to know what operas the musician liked best to play.

"I don't know much about dot," said the better half, who was at the time busily engaged in darning an old shirt, "but I do know somet'ings. Voteffer he likes I like not dos Wagner operas. Dey sounds veil enough, but dose clothes—ach! He neffer yet comes home from dot Wagner opera dot he haf not torn a place in his poor old shirts. I brefer the Italian operas."

A Dangerous Feat.

For a feat of dexterity and nerve it would be difficult to surpass that of the Boojesman of South Africa, who walks quietly up to a puff adder and deliberately sets his bare foot on its neck. In its struggles to escape and attempts to bite its assailant the poison gland secretes a large amount of the venom. This is just what the Boojesman wants. Killing the snake, he eats the body and uses the poison for his arrows.

Most Popular of Pictures.

The best known picture in the world, it has been said, is Vandyke's portrait of James II. of England as an infant, popularly known as Baby Stuart. Two million copies of it are said to be in American homes, and it is equally popular in England and continental Europe. This is not because it is a portrait of a child who became king, but because it is a masterly piece of infant portraiture. The plump, round cheeks and tiny nose, surmounted by a tight fiting cap, appeal to every lover of children. The figure with which the world is familiar is the central one in a group of the eldest three children of Charles I. painted in 1635, when the baby, afterward known as the Duke of York, was only two years old and barely able to stand alone.—Youth's Companion.

BARGE CANAL WORK.

Resident Engineer Ripley will Give Illustrated Lecture, Explaining Details of Construction to Members of Citizens Club and Guests.

The members of the Citizen's Club and a number of their friends in this city and Oswego and the Masters of the nearby Granges are to have a rare treat next Wednesday evening, March 4, when Mr. T. M. Ripley, resident engineer on Barge Canal work, will give an address on the work on which he is engaged in the City Hall, showing by stereoptican views the portions of the completed work. Mr. Ripley has for many years been deeply interested in canal improvements, and he will give a clear, comprehensive, business like talk upon the early history of the movement which culminated in the present barge canal enterprise.

There is no subject of more vital importance to this district than the one which will be presented by Mr. Ripley next Wednesday, and there is no one better qualified to discuss it understandingly than Mr. Ripley. Few of our citizens have the slightest conception of the magnitude of the work preparatory to the final settlement upon a method and the solving of the problem of means for the carrying on of the work. Mr. Ripley is perfectly conversant with all of these and will present them in an enlightened manner. That he will be greeted by a large audience is expected.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB.

An Interesting Program Rendered, Interspersed with Patriotic Poems and Songs.

The Current Events Club held a most interesting session on Monday evening, Feb. 17, at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Sawtelle. Mr. John Hunter became chairman, owing to the unavoidable absence of Professor Fairgrieve. The Rev. F. A. Miller and Professor Paul Hagar had charge of the program, and an enjoyable evening was the result.

Events of importance which had transpired in domestic and foreign circles during the preceding two weeks were very ably reviewed by Mr. Miller, who was aided substantially by the Rev. J. G. York. Mr. York called special attention to the efforts that were being made by Gov. Hughes to induce the Legislature to conform to the wishes of the people, as expressed by petitions and through committees, against race-track gambling. He also presented the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

To the members of the Legislature of the State of New York:

Resolved, That we, the members of the Current Events Club of the City of Fulton, N. Y., do hereby petition your honorable body to pass a bill as Gov. Hughes has recommended to suppress race-track gambling, and so make effective the manifest purpose of State control; and, be it further

Resolved, That we do also petition for a direct appropriation for agricultural fairs in place of their present share in the gate receipts of the race track.

JAMES R. FAIRGRIEVE, President.
W. E. HUGHES, Secretary.

Mr. Miller then called attention to the measure before the Legislature for direct nominations at the primaries and the modern business methods being adopted by the government officials at Washington.

Prof. Hagar, on being introduced, reminded the assemblage that the natal anniversaries of two of the greatest American citizens—Washington and Lincoln—were approaching, and as a consequence a patriotic program at this time seemed appropriate. He introduced Miss Daisy Lounsbery, who recited in a most admirable manner a patriotic poem.

Prof. Hagar then gave a word portraiture of the mental and moral worth to the history of this country of Washington and Lincoln—emphasizing their sterling characteristics and their ability to confront emergencies as they arose.

What proved to be a most enjoyable innovation was a patriotic song rendered in excellent voice by Mrs. E. J. Penfield, by special request, Mrs. Sawtelle playing the accompaniment and the assemblage insisting on an encore.

The next meeting will be held on Monday evening, March 2, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arvin Rice. The leaders will be the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle and Mr. F. D. Van Wagenen.

Whist Contest.

Last Friday evening a Whist contest was waged in the Fortnightly club rooms, Oswego, in which Fulton was represented by Professor Fairgrieves, George Webb, F. D. Van Wagenen, Charles Allen, George Chauncey and R. D. Parsons, and Oswego by H. J. Peebles, L. S. Benton, Professor George Bullis, George Wilcox, Walter Pulver and C. A. Tanner. Fulton won five games, Oswego three, and one was a tie. A return game will be played.

Skaneateles Won

The C. M. B. A. team from Skaneateles came to Fulton on Monday to play forty-five with the C. M. B. A's of this city. The visitors not only came and saw, but they conquered—not by a large score, it is true, but by a majority of four. The local team entertained the guests at dinner and supper at Hotel Judge and the meet was exceedingly enjoyable.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Monthly tests are being held this week.

The strawride given by the Senior class to the home of Clair Whitbeck was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The sleigh tipped over, and as none was hurt, this event added to the amusement.

The basketball team will play at Cazenovia and St. John's on Friday and Saturday evenings.

The sophomores will give a leap year affair Thursday evening in Tucker's hall. Dancing and cards will be enjoyed. The Misses Hale, Mehegan and Martin are in charge.

Charity Ball.

Plans are sufficiently perfected to warrant the statement that the Charity ball to be given by the Acacia Companions in Church's hall on Monday evening, March 2, will be the most successful event of the social season just closing. The Companions, Messrs. G. E. Mason, W. H. Hornibrook, J. D. McIntyre and David Katz are working hard to complete the detail work and to leave nothing undone that can add to the enjoyment of the guests. The hall will be elaborately decorated by M. Katz & Co., and Kapps orchestra, Syracuse, will furnish music.

The following splendid dancing program has been arranged:

Grand March ... Triumphal Banner
Two Step ..... The Free Lance
Waltz ..... Waving Palms
Two Step ..... Dixie Darlings
Two Step ..... Pickles and Peppers
Lanciers ..... Cupido
Waltz ..... The Merry Widow
Two Step ..... Monkey Land

Lanciers ..... Sharon Springs
Two Step ..... Blossoms
Two Step ..... Victorious Eagle
Waltz ..... Waltz Dream
Two Step ..... Virginia
Two Step ..... Berlin Echoes
Waltz ..... Senora
Two Step ..... Lucia
Two Step ..... The Last Kiss

The proceeds of the ball will be given the hospital which is worthy and needs all the assistants our residents can bestow. Even though you do not dance, you can assist the cause by purchasing a ticket. Any effort you may make will be appreciated by the Acacia Companions and the Hospital association.

Excellent Program.

Longfellow Memorial exercises will be given in Phillips street school house on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 27, by the Teachers' Training class. The following excellent program will be presented:

DIED.

David A. Lewis, aged 78, died on Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. F. Bellows, in Emory street, after a lifelong residence in this city. The funeral services were held on Tuesday from the late home, the Rev. F. A. Miller officiating. Interment was made in Mt. Adnah.

Mrs. Satie Weston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newton, died last week at her home in Torrington, Conn. She is survived by her parents, five sisters and three brothers.

At her home in Mexico on Thursday occurred the death of Ada, wife of Mr. Carl P. Taylor. The deceased was a prime favorite in the church and social life of the village and her death is regretted. The husband, a three weeks old son, and the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eben H. Rathbone, survive.

Dr. E. H. Boyd, aged 80, who for fifty years had practiced medicine in Hannibal, died on Wednesday after six weeks of illness following many years of ill health. The deceased was a most excellent physician and a charitable man, attending all calls when possible regardless of whether the sufferer was able to pay him or not. The deceased was captain of Co. D, 110th N. Y. V., during the Civil War. He was a staunch Democrat and had held several positions of trust, including the postmastership of Hannibal, under Grover Cleveland. He was also a member of the Board of Supervisors for two terms and during Grover Cleveland's second term was a member of the Pension Examining Board, located in Oswego. For twenty years or more he was Master of Hannibal Lodge F. & A. M. He was also a member of Lake Ontario Commandery No. 82, K. T., Oswego, and the Oswego Lodge of Elks. The widow and one daughter, Mrs. A. F. Barnum, survive.

Surrogate's Court.

A final decree was filed Monday in the estate of the late Dr. Charles G. Bacon. In the final distribution residuary legatees received the following amounts: Charles A. Bacon, $6,223.64; Nellie A. Groat, $1,646.89; Ross E. Bacon, $6,223.64; Lucilla Bacon, $4,203.41; Fred F. Bacon, $6,223 64. The remainder of a balance of $25,211.10 went as follows: Arvin Rice and Francis Bacon, executors' commission, $563.18; attorney's fees, $900; J. B. Emerick, special guardian Fred F. Bacon, $23.30.

Justice Andrews Took Papers.

Before Justice Andrews in Syracuse Saturday was argued the motion of the Prohibition County Committee to compel the Town Boards of Sandy Creek and Boylston to appoint Prohibition instead of Democratic inspectors on the ground that the Democratic votes polled in those towns was less than the Prohibition vote. Justice Andrews took the papers.

March 29—"The Inescapable Question."

A Splendid Feature.

Mr. John W. Stevenson of the American Woolen company prevailed upon his company to the extent that last week he was able to announce that a large frame building in Broadway, 100x40 feet, which the company had formerly used for the storage of machinery, had been cleared and could be used by the various basketball organizations of the city for athletic purposes. The posts have been removed, and there is a clear court 60x40 feet in the center which makes an ideal play space. The room is lighted with electricity and is heated by the company's plant. A tier of seats will be erected. At present basketball will be the only game played in the building but it is not improbable that soon all other indoor sports will be permitted in the spacious room. Manager Stevenson is entitled to great credit for his efforts to attain this end. That the West Side appreciates it is a foregone conclusion.

Pool Tournament

The pool tournament in which the Citizens club, the Masonic club, the Elks, Knights of Pythias and Knights of Columbus are contestants, is continuing with unabated interest. The standing of the clubs to date is as follows:

Citizens club	13	852	65.54

Test To Be Made

At a special meeting of the Board of Public Works held last week, it was voted to instruct Superintendent James Flynn, to make a 24-hour pumping test of the capacity of the Keller Springs from which our water supply is taken. The test is to continue for three consecutive days and will undoubtedly commence on Monday of next week. There is a growing feeling of apprehension on the part of those familiar with conditions that our water supply is inadequate to stand a long continued fire, as it is necessary to use up very nearly the total amount every day in the ordinary course of water using. Superintendent Flynn is using every effort to prevent the waste of water, and yet the surplus is not satisfactory.

Subscribers Please Take Notice.

The new postal law makes it imperative that all newspaper subscriptions be paid promptly upon their expiration. We are left without choice in the matter. The law became effective on Jan. 1, 1908, and publishers were given 90 days in which to make collections. At the expiration of that time subscribers must be dropped from the list.

Will you assist us in making provision for this emergency by promptly remitting your subscription now due?

FIFTH WARD REPUBLICAN CLUB

Members Becoming Enthusiastic Over Prospective Fall Campaign—Important Resolutions Adopted.

An important meeting of the Fifth Ward Republican Club was held on Monday evening in the Grand Central block. There was a fair attendance of members, and after the usual transaction of routine business, Attorney A. T. Jennings presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Fifth Ward Republican Club of the city of Fulton, N. Y., stands thoroughly in accord with President Roosevelt's administration, and also approves of every official act of Governor Hughes, and believes him to be well fitted to carry on the great measures and principles of the Republican party as the next President of the United States.

Mr. D. M. Perine called attention to the efforts being made by Governor Hughes to suppress pool-selling and race-track gambling, in conformity with his message to the Legislature. He therefore presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Fifth Ward Republican club of the City of Fulton, N. Y., does hereby approve and endorse the recommendations of Gov. Hughes as contained in his annual message, in regard to the prohibition of pool-selling and gambling at race tracks in this state, and strongly urge the Legislature to take such action as will secure the abolishment of this evil.

The foregoing resolution was adopted without a dissenting voice, also an amendment that the resolution be signed by the president and secretary of the club and forwarded to Assemblyman F. G. Whitney at Albany.

President Merriam called attention to the approaching primaries, and in view of that fact matters of unusual interest would be submitted to the members at the next regular meeting on Friday evening, March 6, when it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

It is noted that young and aggressive Republicans are being added to the club each meeting, and all are becoming enthused over the prospective Fall campaign.

Never a One Day President.

The periodic assertion is made that on Sunday, March 4, 1849, Senator David Rice Atchison of Missouri, who was then president pro tem. of the senate, was president of the United States "virtually." He never was, "virtually" or otherwise.

In 1793 congress enacted that in event of no president or vice president being ready to succeed the first office should devolve on the president of the senate and next on to the speaker of the house. The succession was changed in 1886. Now, Zachary Taylor and Millard Fillmore were in Washington on March 4, 1849. It being Sunday, they permitted an interregnum to follow until the next day. Mr. Atchison took no oath as president, and without taking such he could not exercise the office. Mr. Taylor could have taken the oath at any second subsequent to noon on March 4. No pompous inauguration is demanded. The chief justice need not administer the oath. Arthur took it in New York before Judge Brady at 2 a. m. and Mr. Roosevelt in Buffalo before United States Judge Hazel.

The "virtually" of Mr. Atchison is visionary unless by some bolt from the blue the elected officials had been removed.—Pittsburg Post.

The First American Duel.

In the year 1630 occurred the first duel known to have taken place on American soil. The principals, Edward Doty and Edward Leister, were servants of a Mr. Hopkins, one of the New England colonists. The men had quarreled over some trifling matter and resorted to the field for its settlement. The affair was stopped by the authorities, but not before one had been wounded in the thigh and the other in the hand. There was no law covering such matters, but the governor of the province decided that the men should be punished nevertheless. At his orders they were sent to have their heads and feet tied together and lie in the condition twenty-four hours without food or drink. They suffered so much, however, that they were released at the end of an hour.

At times when you don't feel just right, when you have a bad stomach, take something right away that will assist digestion, not something that stimulates for a time, but something that will positively do the very work that the stomach performs under ordinary or normal conditions, something that will make the food digest. To do this you must take a natural digestant like Kodol For Dyspepsia. Kodol is a scientific preparation of vegetable acids with natural digestants and contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. Each dose will digest more than 3,000 grains of good food. It is sure to afford prompt relief; it digests what you eat and is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

For Emergencies.

A banking reserve is for use, not merely for show. It is for use in times of emergency. Yet some bankers look upon their reserves very much as the superintendent of a hospital regarded its emergency bed. A patient all banged up in an accident was brought to the hospital one night and was told that there was no room for him. "Why not put him in the emergency bed?" it was suggested. "If we put him in the emergency bed," it was replied, "then we would have no emergency bed."—Wall Street Journal.

Ancestry.

Don't step hard on a struggling mortal because his grandfather once robbed a stagecoach. None of us can go too far back in the family record without a shiver of apprehension.—Manchester Union.

Everything taken into the stomach should be digested fully within a certain time. When you feel that your stomach is not in good order, that the food you have eaten is not being digested, take a good, natural digestant that will do the work the digestive juices are not doing. The best remedy known today for all stomach troubles is Kodol, which is guaranteed to give prompt relief. It is a natural digestant, it digests what you eat, it is pleasant to take and it is sold by all druggists.

Our Language.

An intelligent foreigner is said to have expressed himself after the following fashion on the absurdities of the English language: "When I discovered that I was quick, I was fast; if I stood firm, I was fast; if I spent too freely, I was fast, and that not to eat was to fast, I was discouraged. But when I came across the sentence, 'The first one won one $1 prize,' I was tempted to give up English and learn some other language."

Use DeWitt's Little Early Risers, pleasant little pills. They are easy to take. Sold by all druggists.

Scientists' Corner.

Lord Kelvin was buried in Westminster abbey in the spot which by analogy we might call scientists' corner, but it is such a very ugly phrase. If pilgrimages are made there the pilgrims will be of another type from those whose shrine is poets' corner. And yet, when one thinks of the poets, how many of them have opened up such wide spaces of imagination as Newton and Herschel, Darwin and Kelvin? If Shakespeare had known such men he would have admitted their right to take their place with the lover, the madman and the poet who are of "imagination all compact." But this conception has not penetrated the popular mind, which is hardly equal to pure imagination unadulterated with emotion and a good many primitive instincts.—London Saturday Review.

Bert Barber, of Elton, Wisconsin, says: "I have only taken four doses of your Kidney and Bladder Pills and they have done for me more than any other medicine has ever done. I am still taking the pills, as I want a perfect cure." Mr. Barker refers to DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. They are sold by all druggists.

First American Play.

The first play written by an American produced in this country, according to the Philadelphia Public Ledger, was the tragedy, "The Prince of Parthia," by Thomas Godfrey, which was brought out at the Southwark theater in the Quaker City in April, 1767, by Lewis Hallam's company, the first organization of players to visit Philadelphia. Godfrew was an ambitious young poet, who died at an early age. His play was above mediocrity and an important part of the volume of his works published in 1765.

HAY FEVER

When Actors Play to Actors.

"When he (Henry Irving) engaged me to play Ophelia in 1878 he asked me to go down to Birmingham to see the play, and that night I saw what I shall always consider the perfection of acting. It had been wonderful in 1874; in 1878 it was far more wonderful," wrote Ellen Terry in McClure's. "It has been said that when he had the 'advantage' of my Ophelia his Hamlet 'improved.' I don't think so. He was always quite independent of the people with whom he played. The Birmingham night he knew I was there. He played—I say it without vanity—for me. We players are not above that weakness, if it be a weakness. If ever anything inspires us to do our best it is the presence in the audience of some fellow artist who must, in the nature of things, know more completely than any one what we intend, what we do, what we feel. The response from such a member of the audience flies across the footlights to us like a flame. I felt it once when I played Olivia before Eleanora Duse. I felt that she felt it once when she played Marguerite Gautier for me."

The Topsyturvydom of Religion.

At the opening of King Edward VII.'s first parliament he had to repeat after the lord chancellor an oath which condemned in almost brutal words all things papistical. Yet held aloft by a Protestant peer for all Protestants to reverence was a veritable emblem of papal supremacy—a quaint little bonnet of crimson velvet turned up with ermine. This is the cap of maintenance, and so sacred is it that no hands but royalty may finger it. Thus the premier marquis, whose hereditary right it is to carry it, balanced it somewhat after the fashion of a conjurer upon a white staff. This cap was granted to Henry VIII. by Pope Leo X. In the middle ages it was held as symbolic of the overlord, only being granted to vassals and feudatories whom the lord wished to honor, so that it implies as nothing else could the supremacy of the pope over the kings of England.—London Standard.

What Makes the Heart Beat?

Professor Jacques Loeb, the celebrated biologist, in his book, "Dynamics of Living Matter," has shown that a strip cut from the ventricle of the heart put in a solution of chloride of sodium will continue to beat for a number of days, until putrefaction sets in. He says this can be done with an ordinary muscle after it has been extirpated from the body. This would tend to prove that the heart is a chemical machine and that it is all due to chemical action. The muscular contraction is probably due to the substitution of sodium for calcium salts in the cells of the muscles.

The difficulty of this theory is that it does not explain the control of the muscles. It is plain that the problem of control is not solved by the chemical theory.

A Fair Chance.

Dressed in the latest and most approved motor cycling costume, with goggles all complete, the motor cyclist gayly toot-tooted his way by Regent's park toward the zoo. Suddenly he slackened, dismounted and said to a small, grubby urchin:

"I say, my boy, am I right for the zoo?"

The boy gasped at so strange a sight and thought it must be some new animal for the gardens.

"You may be all right if they have a spare cage," he said when he could find his tongue, "but you'd ha' stood a far better chance if you'd 'd a tail!"—London Answers.

Lewis Carroll's Humor.

An English magazine gives some amusing pieces of Lewis Carroll's humor from the forgotten pages of Oxford pamphlets. During the election at Oxford in 1865 he gave vent to the following Euclidean definition: "Plain superficiality is the character of a speech in which, any two points being taken, the speaker is found to lie wholly with regard to those two points." A note is also given on the right appreciation of examiners: "A takes in ten books and gets a third class; B takes in the examiners and gets a second. Find the value of the examiners in terms of books, also their value in terms when no examination is held."

Solicitous.

An old lady unaccustomed to traveling innocently seated herself in a first class carriage, although she only had a third class ticket. The guard, thinking she had made a mistake, popped his head into the carriage and inquired, "Are you first class, ma'am?"

WORRIED BY MONEY, SOOTHED BY MUSIC

How Secretary Cortelyou Runs the Treasury Department and Drives Dull Care Away From His Door

Discords of Official Life Forgotten as the Talented Secretary Woos Harmony From Piano and Organ

It has been a strenuous period for George Bruce Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury. Since the beginning of trepidations in the financial world last autumn up to the present time there has not been a day on which he could bid dull care flee away and feel himself at liberty to do a little loafing. He has had the financial stringency on his mind; he has had to give advice on currency reform legislation; he has been harried by the senate over his policy as secretary in the issue of the Panama canal bonds and certificates of indebtedness to relieve the money situation; he has been criticised in the senate for assuming the airs of a president in the manner in which his report on the conduct of his department during the panic was drawn up; he has had to give a great deal of time and thought to the preparation of that report, and to cap the climax he had to do it while suffering from an attack of grip and while reports were flying about that he had had a misunderstanding with the president over his candidacy for the Republican nomination and was about to resign in consequence of it. It was about this time that neighbors of the Cortelyous began to remark that somebody was keeping the piano and organ going a great deal in their home. It appeared that the secretary to distract his mind from the discords of his official life was paying more than usual attention to making harmony in his home. He is very fond of the organ and also plays the piano well. He used to play on the keys of a typewriter. Other people do that for him now, but the keys of the organ and piano possess for him still a great fascination.

Secretary Cortelyou has the reputation of being the silent and serious member of the cabinet and one of its hardest workers. Taft is the joker—not the little joker, either—of the Roosevelt board of advisers, and he is a hard worker, too, despite the fact that fat men are supposed to be lazy. Mr. Cortelyou is generally at his desk long after the subordinates and clerks of the department have left theirs. It is hard work combined with signal executive ability that put Mr. Cortelyou where he is. His genius for hard work has been recognized by three presidents. He was originally discovered by President Cleveland, who took him from the postoffice department to the White House. The first thing the young but aspiring stenographer said was:

"You know, Mr. Cleveland, that I am a Republican."

"That doesn't make a bit of difference," characteristically declared the chief executive. And Mr. Cleveland stood by him when Democrats schemed to get his place.

Secretary Cortelyou is so saving of words that, it is said, "Good night" is a pretty long speech for him to make. During those strenuous days of last October when Mr. Cortelyou and J. P. Morgan were bossing the emperors, kings and dukes of finance in Wall street he did not have time to do his usual amount of thinking. One day he could not be found anywhere. For four or five hours nobody could get in touch with him. The financiers wondered if he had been kidnaped. The newspaper men exhausted their abilities as detectives in running him down. At last he slipped into his hotel quietly, and it turned out that for hours he had been walking around Central park alone in the dark. In explanation he simply said:

"I can think better when walking out doors."

LIKE FATHER LIKE SON.

The Two Sothern, E. A. and E. H., as Lord Dundreary.

A leading feature of the dramatic season in New York is the revival of "Lord Dundreary," at the Lyric theater, by E. H. Sothern, who takes the role made famous by his father, the late E. A. Sothern. To the older class of theater goers it seems a case of "Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight," to see a Sothern in the role of Dundreary again. E. H. Sothern has made his reputation as an actor in the romantic drama, but he has mastered the humorous role of Dundreary, with all its traditional business, and the stutter and drawl characteristic of the foppish English lord. Some who have seen the revival of the play claim that the elder Dundreary possessed more finish and that his work contained a personal quality the son has not been able to acquire, but this, they say, is not strange, considering that it took the elder Sothern years to build up a creation.

"Lord Dundreary," which was originally known as "Our American Cousin," was the play at Ford's theater, Washington, the night that Lincoln was assassinated, and E. A. Sothern and other noted actors of the time were in the cast. When the Sothern of today produced the play at the capital some weeks ago President Roosevelt expected to witness it. He specially desired to do so, both on account of his interest in the play and on account of his wish to show that there is no superstition in his makeup. However, pressure of official duties prevented his attending it.

E. A. SOTHERN AS DUNDREARY.

At the first performance in New York the auditors numbered Professor Henry van Dyke of Princeton and Andrew Carnegie. They visited Mr. Sothern between the acts. In their party was a Scotchman. During the first part of the play the Scot looked on imperturbably and without a smile, but after the scene in which Dundreary tells Georgina how Sam ate his mother-in-law he turned to the others and exclaimed:

"Noo I know why they are laughing so. The mon is a fool!"

And Mr. Carnegie and Professor van Dyke agreed to let it go at that.

Many of the jokes and stories in "Lord Dundreary" are so old that for most of the present generation they are new. Among them is a riddle which is older than "How old is Ann?" It runs:

"If fourteen dogs with three legs each can catch forty-eight rabbits with seventy-six legs in twenty-five minutes, how many legs must twenty-four rabbits have to get away from 3,000 dogs with no legs at all?"

E. H. SOTHERN AS DUNDREARY.

At the beginning of his present engagement Mr. Sothern offered $200 in prizes for the best answers to the riddle. The answer which won first place was this: "All hats are off. It is not a bunny-fide race."

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal security of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa, suppressed or absent monthly periods, arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. * * * In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general debilitation, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

Traps of the Ant Lion.

We read of the tiger traps in India—great pits dug in the ground and covered lightly with pliant bamboo. The tiger steps upon the false top and before it can retreat is precipitated into a trap. Walking along a sandy road, look for tiny circular pits sunk below the surface and then sit down and watch an exciting episode in the life of the little still hunter which has dug the pitfall. It is invisible, and for some time the whole affair seems lifeless. Then an ant comes blundering along and without warning topples over the edge and begins to slide down the incline. But the insect fights hard for lifeand seems about to make its escape, when, lo, the sand grains heave upward at the bottom and with a jerk are hurled like a miniature catapult at the ant, knocking it over and rolling it to the bottom. The ant lion, for such it is, now seizes its prey and after sucking its juices casts the dry body away and mends its pit against the coming of another victim.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Herbert Spencer and the Puddles.

On no one occasion was Herbert Spencer known to ride when going to a dinner, yet so carefully did he guard himself against the chance of soiling his dress shoes that he habitually carried a bundle of old newspapers under his arm. These were for the purpose of being dropped, one by one, into each mud puddle he might encounter on crossing the street. By the time he reached his destination the store of papers was exhausted. Muddy shoes on the return walk did not matter to him in the least.—London Caterer.

A Pleasant Change.

Glory Everywhere.

A Methodist minister was much annoyed by one of his hearers frequently shouting out during the preaching, "Glory!" "Praise the Lord!" and the like. Though often reproved, the happy member persisted in expressing himself.

One day the minister invited him to tea and, to take his mind from thoughts of praise, handed him a scientific book, full of dry facts and figures, to pass the time before tea.

Presently the minister was startled by a sudden outburst of "Glory!" "Hallelujah!" and "Praise the Lord!"

"What is the matter, man?" asked the minister.

"Why, this book says the sea is five miles deep?"

"Well, what of that?"

"Why, the Bible says my sins have been cast into the depths of the sea, and if it is that deep I need not be afraid of their ever coming up again. Glory!"

The minister gave up hopes of reforming him.

TO CUBA BY RAIL

THE opening of Henry M. Flagler's Key West extension of the Florida East Coast railway as far as Knight's Key signalizes the success of a remarkable engineering project. It is also a great personal triumph for Mr. Flagler, who stuck to his pet enterprise in the face of all kinds of discouragement. It was often predicted that he would never live to see the railway from New York to Key West completed, but trains are now running to Knight's Key, from which point passengers are conveyed by steamer to Key West and Havana. It is now recognized that there is no insuperable engineering or financial obstacle in the way of the speedy completion of the extension to the terminus at Key West. At that point, which is only ninety miles from Havana, large ferryboats will take the trains across the intervening stretch of ocean so that they may be run solid from Miami to Havana. In this way the Pullman passenger can remain in his stateroom if he desires all the way from Jersey City to the capital of Cuba.

HENRY M. FLAGLER.

The completion of the line will also render it possible to ship freight from many parts of the United States to Cuba without breaking bulk en route. This is an important gain when one considers the increase in volume of trade with the West Indies and South America likely to come as one result of the completion of the Panama canal. But it is expected that trade along continental lines will feel a new impulse even before the opening of the Panama canal by reason of the extension to Key West of Mr. Flagler's railway. The commercial importance of the port of Key West will be much increased. In fact, the port has already attained a considerable increase in commercial prestige because of the recent opening of the extension to Knight's Key.

To construct a railroad across the rushing waters of the gulf of Mexico as they pour into the Atlantic constitutes an engineering problem the exact parallel of which has never been encountered before. It is complicated by the necessity of building a portion of the line so that the tropical storms encountered in that part of the world may not ruin the work of the engineers before it has even been given a trial in the support of trains. It is about 155 miles from Miami to Key West, and a natural foundation for the railroad is provided over less than half the distance. But in the construction of the Florida keys nature went halfway, so to speak, in assisting the engineer. Over forty of these small islands or reefs are used in the creation of the oversea railway. The tracks of the road run sometimes over bridges, sometimes over viaducts, sometimes over concrete arches, sometimes over dredged embankments and filled in swamps. There is one stretch of the road where the tracks run for five miles over concrete arches, and on this part of the road and several others the traveler can look out on either side without being able to see any land. As he cannot see the tracks beneath the train it seems like a veritable journey over the ocean on some railway constructed by magic hands. For two miles after leaving Long Key the tracks have been laid on a concrete viaduct, where the trains run thirty feet above the level of the open sea. Two similar stretches are yet to be built beyond the present temporary terminus at Knight's Key. The journey from New York or Chicago to Cuba has already been shortened in time about one-third by the opening of the railway as far as Knight's Key. The water journey from there to Havana is only about six hours. When the line is completed to Key West the trip across the ferry can be made in about three hours. Nearly $20,000,000 has been expended by Mr. Flagler and his associates in the realization of their ambition to link the United States and Cuba in closer bonds of commercial intercourse.

The construction work has proceeded very rapidly in spite of the many difficulties encountered. Building operations were begun only about three years ago. But it was millions of years ago that the little coral insects built the broad flat surface to meet the needs of the engineers, some portions of their work appearing just above the water in the form of the keys. Thus with the co-operation of nature in the long, long ago results have been achieved which are certain to remain a subject of marvel for generations to come.

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT.

Widow of Noted Capitalist and Her Reported Engagement to a Count.

The report of an engagement between Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Count Alexander Hadik of Hungary has occasioned special interest on account of the recent marriage of Miss Gladys

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT.

Vanderbilt to Count Szechenyi. According to some accounts of the affair, one Hungarian count wooed the daughter in Europe last summer while the other Hungarian nobleman tried to get into the good graces of the mother. Mrs. Vanderbilt inherited from her late husband, Cornelius Vanderbilt 2d, $2,000,000, the town house on Fifth avenue, New York, and the use of the Vanderbilt Newport residence, known as The Breakers. The Fifth avenue house cost the late Cornelius Vanderbilt $4,000,000 and was at the time considered the most costly and magnificent private residence in America. It has been reported that Mrs. Vanderbilt is making efforts to sell this property. She was Alice Gwynne of Philadelphia.

Count Hadik is one of five brothers and inherited $100,000, but is said to have lost it. He is a member of the Hungarian parliament.

SHOE DAY AND ITS PATRON.

An Original Form of Philanthropy Started by "Big Tim" Sullivan.

"Shoe day" was celebrated recently on New York's Bowery with old time enthusiasm despite the absence in Washington of its originator and patron, Congressman Timothy D. Sullivan, better known as "Dry Dollar" Sullivan or "Big Tim." He makes "shoe day" a pet feature of his special brand of philanthropy. At the Christmas dinner to Bowerynites over which he presides he gives out tickets calling for shoes and socks at the distribution and this year on account of the large number of men out of employment there were about 5,000 in line. blind and lame were placed at the head. Each applicant called out the size of the shoes he wanted.

"Guess I'll have to have No. 10 this time," said one old fellow in clothing that had seen better days.

"I thought you wore a 3 B," put in a man who was handing out footgear.

"I used to, judge, but since I stopped parading on Fifth avenue I ain't been so proud," replied the recipient.

It is said "Big Tim's" income is close to $200,000 and that he gives away every year at least $20,000.

The new works of fiction in the Usher Reading club are the best procurable. There is not a dull book on the shelves and no one could miss reading them. "The Dying Death" is a most fascinating story from preface to finis; one sits on the edge of one's chair until it is finished as there are three happenings in every chapter. Throughout the story there is a triplicate love story which adds to its attractiveness. You may take a copy of this book to your home and read it at your leisure providing you are willing to pay 2 cents per book per day while you are enjoying it.

THE IDEA suggested by M. O. Leighton, of the Geological Survey, that disastrous floods can be prevented by constructing conservation reservoirs along the banks of those rivers which run through mountainous country is likely to command considerable attention. Mr. Leighton says that the Ohio river is especially adapted to the construction of such reservoirs. His plan is to construct the reservoirs in natural overflow basins, to keep them empty under normal conditions but, when the river rises to the danger point to turn the overflow into the reservoirs. There it could be conserved until a period of low water when it could be turned back into the channel thus facilitating navigation and maintaining effective water power. Mr. Leighton points out that the last flood cost the Ohio valley about $100,000,000, and it is probable the present one will cost as much, and that by the expenditure of the like sum once, for the construction of reservoirs, all future damage could be averted.

IT HAS often been asked why Secretary Taft refused to agree to a compromise with Mr. Foraker. The secretary offered to use all his influence to prevent his friends from working against Mr. Foraker's re-election to the Senate, but declined to ask his friends to help Mr. Foraker to gain re-election. This proposition Mr. Foraker declined. The Secretary then said that he stood for the precise opposite of that which Mr. Foraker stood. He stood for President Roosevelt's policies. Mr. Foraker stood opposed to them. He could not make an alliance with an outspoken opponent of those policies without deserving to be called a mere time server. Mr. Foraker then declared it would be "war to the knife" between them, and it has been—but Mr. Foraker has got the knife.

AMBASSADOR Takahira, formerly Japanese minister to the United States, who has just returned as Ambassador, scouts the idea that there may come war between the United States and Japan, precisely as has every other conservative Japanese statesman. The Ambassador declares that it reflects on the press of the United States that bellicose stories should have found there way into print. With unblushing effrontery, some newspapers which a short time ago were declaring that war was inevitable are saying that it is all a mistake, that there is no danger of war with Japan over the immigration question, but what they meant to say was that the war would be over the "open door" in Manchuria. But war they must have at any price.

THERE is reason to believe that the Senate will ratify the new arbitration treaties which the President is preparing to send in, the French treaty having been submitted already. This is as it should be. The United States has always stood first in setting to the world the example of submitting to arbitration rather than go to war, and no man has done more to promote the world's peace than Theodore Roosevelt.

THE old fight of commercialism versus scenic beauty is on again in Congress, and Niagara Falls hangs in the balance. If you value the beauty of the Falls write your Congressman not to permit the Alexander bill to pass. The trusts want the water power and care nothing for the beauty of the Falls.

THE ACTION of the Republicans of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, where Senator Foraker made his last stand, in renominating Rep. Burton and instructing the district delegates for Secretary Taft constitutes another nail in the political coffin the Senator from Ohio.

The Baptist young people's rally which was held with the Baptist church Monday afternoon and evening drew a large delegation from the churches of this association. An interesting and helpful program was carried out. Papers were read relating to different phases of young people's work, which brought good practical benefit. The principal address of the rally was delivered by the Rev. Charles O. Wright, of Syracuse, on the subject "Two Sticks." This was a great inspiration to the young people and will quicken their loyalty to their Christian work and life. The following officers of the union were elected: C. C. R. Legg of Oswego, president; Mrs. J. G. York of Fulton, vice-president; and Miss Eva M. Rickard of Pulaski, secretary-treasurer. The next rally of the union will be held in Hannibal.

Right to the Point.

"The following letter," said a traveling man, "was received by a friend of mine who was drumming up trade in New England for a New York necktie house:

"'We have received your letter with expense account. What we want is orders. We have big families to make expenses for us. We find in your expense account 50 cents for billiards. Please don't buy any more billiards; also we see $2.25 for horse and buggy. Where is the horse, and what did you do with the buggy? The rest of your expense account is nothing but bed. Why is it you don't ride more in the nighttime?

"'John says you should stop in Boston, where his cousin George Moore lives. John says you should sell Moore a good bill. Give good prices—he is John's cousin. Sell him mostly for cash; also John says you can leave Boston at 11:45 in the night and get to Concord at 4:35 in the morning. Do this and you won't need any bed. And, remember, what we want is orders.'"

Painful Etiquette.

The royal court of France used to be a great place for etiquette. Louis XIV. once caught a severe cold owing to the fact that on his arising from his bed one cold morning the lord of the chamber, whose duty it was to hand him his shirt, happened to be absent. Not one of the numerous courtiers present had the courage to transgress etiquette by handing the garment to the shivering monarch.—London Scrap Book.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

An Avalanche of Reform Measures in Both Houses.

THE RACE BETTING FIGHT.

Both Sides Are Now Anxious Over the Situation—Another Public Hearing to Be Had—The Much Needed War Against Tuberculosis.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, Feb. 26.—The present session of the legislature will probably go down in lawmaking history as the 1908 convention of "pure white souls." About every other senator or assemblyman that one meets has some pet antisomething measure up his sleeve or in some committee that he is vainly endeavoring to hypnotize.

More than twenty antigambling bills have been introduced which hit at one form or another of the ancient game of chance. Most of these bills relate to stock and card gambling. Other evils aimed at in reform measures are dance halls and, of course, race track betting.

Here Is a Valiant Reformer.

It is somewhat humorous to know that one of the bills aimed to prevent poker and other gambling games has been introduced by probably the best poker player in the entire legislature, bar none. He says he omitted to include the games of jackstraws and marbles within the provisions of the bill, but this was only an oversight. He will surely amend the bill to cover these dreadful games.

ASSEMBLYMAN JAMES A. FRANCIS OF NEW YORK.

[Mr. Francis is one of the much talked of members of the present legislature. He is chairman of the assembly committee on banking, which is aiding in reforming the banking and trust company operations in the state, and is also a member of the ways and means committee. Mr. Francis is spoken of as the next nominee for state senator in his district. He has served three years in the legislature.]

Of course whatever of this reform legislation is sound will be reported out of committee and will pass, but some of it is very unsound and was introduced simply for the purpose of getting the introducer's name in the newspapers. Take Assemblyman Cuvillier of New York as an example. All he desires is notoriety, and he gets it.

The Anti Race Betting Situation.

The race track situation has become critical for both sides. Those who stand with Governor Hughes in favor of the bills that do away with race track betting in the state are undoubtedly as nervous as the racing men themselves.

Belmont, Keene and Davenport.

The appearance before the committees of August Belmont, millionaire sportsman and chairman of the Jockey club; James R. Keene, millionaire sportsman and financier, and Homer Davenport, the famous cartoonist, added unusual interest to the proceedings. Mr. Belmont and Mr. Keene, of course, appeared in defense of racing and against the Agnew-Hart measures advocated by Governor Hughes. Mr. Keene exclaimed at one point, "Governor Hughes is very narrow minded." Later he added: "We cannot improve the breed of men. Let us improve the breed of horses."

Owing to the large number of speakers on both sides it was decided by Senator Hill, chairman of the joint committee, to adjourn the hearing, at the end of four hours and twenty minutes, for two weeks. Consequently at the next hearing it is expected that ex-Governor Frank S. Black will make a strong speech, bringing out the constitutional points that bear on the question. He will appear in opposition to the Agnew-Hart bills.

The Five Cent Fare Bill.

A most stirring session resulted from the efforts of the minority to advance the Wagner five cent car fare bill, providing for a five cent fare to Coney Island. Assemblyman Wagner and Minority Leader Palmer gathered together a large array of legal and oratorical talent and kept the majority on the alert, for the vote resulted in almost a strict party lineup. The vote came up on a motion to recommit the bill to the committee on railroads, and the bill was finally recommitted. While this committee reported the bill out a short time ago, it is generally believed that the measure will not see the light of legislative day again during the present session.

Suffragettes on Warpath.

The woman's suffrage advocates are carrying on a campaign that is as active and determined as though the fate of the entire nation depended on their receiving the precious ballot. On one recent morning each senator and each assemblyman received in his mail no less than six different communications from the "suffragettes," demanding in more or less indignant words why the question of sex should enter into the question of eligibility of voters. But the fair and not necessarily weaker sex is divided against itself, for a noticeably strong association of women, some of whom are of national prominence, has been formed to fight against the granting of the franchise right to women. This organization is carrying on an active war against the bill in question.

The Fight Against Tuberculosis.

The New York state campaign against tuberculosis is waxing warmer and warmer. Active steps are being taken to prevent the spread of the disease among both human beings and cattle.

Dr. L. H. Porter, commissioner of the state health department, in his recent annual report sent to the legislature shows that tuberculosis cases among human beings in the state have reached the tremendous total of 50,000 and that no less than 15,000 persons die of the disease annually. It is pointed out that the loss is not confined solely to the loss of life, but that the long period of invalidism that almost every patient undergoes imposes a severe economic loss on the state.

The state department will make an especial effort for the protection of the public water supply in the thickly populated sections of the state and for the prevention of pollution of streams. It is believed that in this way much of the spread of the disease will be prevented.

Consideration of methods to achieve this result occupied much of the commissioner's time during the period covered by the report. Early last year Commissioner Porter had appointed a special tuberculosis advisory board, composed of ten prominent scientists and physicians. As a result of consultation with this board Dr. Porter announces that the following steps to check the disease have been decided upon:

First.—The completion of the state's tuberculosis exhibit, the one constructed last year having been shown in many places. The department should have at least three complete exhibitions to be used simultaneously in different parts of the state.

Second.—Participation in the international tuberculosis congress to be held in Washington next September in a manner worthy of the Empire State.

Registration of Cases.

Third.—Necessity of the registration of all cases of tuberculosis. You cannot give aid to any consumptive or protect his neighbors until you know what help he requires—until the case is properly reported and the conditions described. The state should give the department the necessary authority in this matter.

Vital statistics included in the report show a death rate of 17.5 per 1,000 inhabitants as against 17.1 for 1906 and an average of 17.2 for the last five years.

Some of the bills which have aroused lively discussion and which are of general interest are in part as follows:

By Assemblyman O'Brien of Erie, to amend the penal code relative to the carrying of dangerous weapons.

A person who attempts to use against another or who carries or possesses any instrument or weapon of the kind commonly known as slungshot, billy, sand club or metal knuckles or who, with intent to use the same against another, carries or possesses a dagger, dirk or dangerous knife is guilty of a felony. Any person under the age of sixteen years who shall have, carry or have in his possession in any public place any of the articles named or described in the last section which it is forbidden therein to offer, sell, loan, lease or give to him shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person over the age of sixteen years who shall have or carry concealed upon his person in any city, village or town of this state any pistol, revolver or other firearm without a written license therefor, theretofore issued to him by a police magistrate of such city or village or by a justice of the peace of such town or in such manner as may be prescribed by ordinance of such city, village or town, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. No person not a citizen of the United States shall have or carry firearms or dangerous weapons in any public place at any time. This section shall not apply to the regular and ordinary transportation of firearms as merchandise, nor to sheriffs, policemen or to other duly appointed peace officers, nor to duly authorized military or civil organizations when parading, nor to the members thereof when going to and from the places of meeting of their respective organizations.

Assembly bill, introductory No. 57, by Mr. Hart of Oneida, to provide a commission to make an investigation of third class cities:

Section 1. Within five days after the passage of this act the president pro tempore of the senate shall appoint one senator, the speaker of the assembly shall appoint one member of the assembly, and the governor shall appoint three persons as commissioners to study the subject of city government of the third class cities of the state. They shall visit any or all of the cities as seems advisable in their judgment, and they may visit cities outside of the state. They shall prepare and submit a report to the legislature on or before Feb. 1, 1909. It shall be proper for them in such report to make recommendations regarding any or all phases of the government of third class cities and to draft any legislation that in their opinion will promote the welfare of third class cities and submit such bills with their report.

Sec. 2. The members of such commission shall receive no compensation for their services, except that each shall be entitled to his actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of his duties under the provisions of this act, to be paid by the treasurer on the audit and warrant of the comptroller.

Sec. 3. Such commission is hereby authorized and empowered to employ experts, stenographers, clerks and such other employees as may be necessary for the purpose of their study and report.

Sec. 4. The sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any moneys of the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid by the state treasurer on the audit and warrant of the comptroller, to carry out the purposes of this act.

Sec. 5. This act shall take effect immediately.

The Store That Gives You Your Money's Worth

FIRST STREET Lewis Block FULTON, N. Y.

Life in Christiania.

Many of the residences of Christiania stand villa-like in the midst of pretty gardens, which in summer are full of bloom and give the streets a peculiar charm and sense of openness. Within, the people live simple, wholesome lives, kindly and hospitable, with that truest hospitality which invites the guest to share in good cheer without ostentation or display. Dinner is at 3 or 4 o'clock, served by trim, fresh looking maids, and supper at 8, where, except on formal occasions, the guest is free to forage around the table for himself. Host and hostess drink the health of each guest with the word "skaal," replied to by the eyes over the glass after drinking. Adjourning to the drawing room, the guests thank both master and mistress of the house, and on the next meeting never fail to say, "Thanks for the last time." One is everywhere struck by the frank and unaffected simplicity of the life and the straightforward kindliness of the people.—H. H. D. Peirce in Atlantic.

Dread of Marble Portraits.

"One peculiarity of human nature that I am reminded of daily," said a sculptor, "is the disinclination of the average man to look upon himself reproduced in marble. The sight strikes him with positive dread. It makes him feel as if he were looking on his own lifeless body. For that reason it is difficult to persuade many persons worth modeling to sit for a sculptor. Frequently I am asked why most of my work is modeled after dead and gone subjects. The answer is that living people refuse to give me a commission. The art of the sculptor differs there from that of the painter. Everybody likes to be painted. The sight of one's face, one's figure, one's clothes, in a picture evokes nothing but pleasurable emotions if well done, but to see oneself carved out of marble produces such an overpowering sense of death that many sensitive persons put off immortalization at the hands of a sculptor until they are really dead."—New York Press.

His Brothers.

At the usual monthly petty sessions court held in a certain provincial town some weeks ago the following incident occurred:

One of the local police constables had summoned a neighboring farmer on a charge of "having a number of asses wandering at will on the public road." The defendant failed to appear, but his brother was present in the person of the clerk of petty sessions, who on hearing the sentence of the presiding magistrate, "Fined 2s. 2d. and costs," rose to the occasion by replying: "They're my brother's, your worship. I'll pay the fine."

He was shocked when his becoming exhibition of fraternal love for the asses was rewarded with an outburst of laughter.—London Graphic.

Struck Out.

Dr. C., who always employs two servants, man and wife, was talking to a patient one day about a couple he had just discharged because the man drank.

He remarked: "It is so strange, but it is always the way with a man and wife. If one is good, the other is no good."

The patient asked him, "How is it with you and Mrs. C.?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Dress Cutting School

Cor. First and Cayuga Streets

Burglars on Monday night broke into the Gilbert & Nichols mill, the Henderson, Thomson & Co. coal office and the Palmer feed store. So far as it has been possible to discover the miscreants secured $2.75 in pennies at the Palmer store and nothing at the other places. The only damage they did was in breaking windows and locks. It is thought that the thieves were familiar with the premises in each instance.

Miss Olive Baker, on Saturday afternoon entertained the Young Ladies' Whist club in a delightful manner. The fact that it was Washington's birthday was featured in the score cards which were red paste-board hatchets, and in the table decorations of flags, and red, white and blue favors. The cake, too, bore tribute to the memory of the deceased father of his country in that it was ornamented with cherries. The memorial idea was prettily carried out throughout the entertainment.

Ladies night will be observed at the Masonic club rooms on Friday evening. Dr. B. A. Loveless, Dr. S. A. Russell, Rev. A. H. Grant and Messrs. A. S. Brown, Harold Green, M. Hall and John Cox compose the committee on entertainment. A delightful literary and musical program has been arranged which will be participated in by Miss Daisy Lounsberry, Mr. Frank Morin, Miss Tappan, Baldwinsville; Messrs. Harold Keeler and Rawson Scott. Following the program a choice menu will be served, composed of chicken sandwiches, stuffed olives, doughnuts, coffee, sherbet, lady fingers and cake. A large attendance is expected.

Trading as a Fine Art.

A grocery store in Nelson, Lancashire, was managed by a collier's wife. One night the good woman was compelled to leave the shop for a short time in charge of her husband, giving him full instructions how to act and especially cautioning him that in the event of a customer presenting a jar or pot and asking for treacle, jam or pickles he "must be sure and weigh th' pot."

Full of confidence, the collier installed himself behind the counter. In a short time a lad ran into the shop and piped out:

"I want two pound o' pickles fur mi faythur, and here's th' pot."

The good man carefully weighed the pot and exclaimed:

"Nay, lad, th' pot weighs enough bowt pickles, but I'll gi' thi one or two anyway."—Liverpool Mercury.

"Yes, sir. I fancy Mr. Renwyck would do as well as that—maybe more."

"Probably," agreed Richard. "He's richer than I and inclined to be more generous. Try it by all means, Bills. I should hate to stand in the way of your making an honest penny or two."

The Texan began to undress, while the surprised valet stared at him in wonder. He had rather expected a scene, but his master's easy acceptance of the blackmailing scheme took him unawares. He was completely nonplused by this seemingly indifferent reception of his statement. His bombshell, which he had charged so elaborately, seemed to be hanging fire. He was not so sure that Mr. Renwyck would pay for his information after all, and a bird in the hand is worth many on the wing, especially to an inebriate, whose facilities for bird catching are limited.

"I'd—I'd rather stay with you, sir," he faltered presently, with a suggestion of compromise, not to say surrender, in his tones.

"Suit yourself," smiled Richard genially, more indifferent than ever. "The matter is of too little importance to trouble over—really. Get me out that pair of dove colored riding breeches, so long as you are here, will you?"

The valet brought the desired article and, looking his master squarely in the face, summoned the last vestige of his artificially supplied courage and made a final bold attempt at blackmailing him:

"Will you give me two hunded pun, sir, or won't you, now?"

"Couldn't think of it," laughed the Texan lightly. "I made a bargain with you, and you break it at your own risk. Now, bring me Lord Croyland's second best pair of riding boots. The new ones are a trifle small and pinch my toes damnably. That's right. Thank you." He looked up with a happy smile. "It's your deal, Woolsey. What do you contemplate doing next?"

The valet had been thinking hard. He had one more shaft in his quiver and believed it would reach its mark.

"I've decided, sir," he stated as he swaggered across the room, "not to say nothink to Mr. Renwyck at all. The information might be worth a good deal more' to Mr. Renwyck's daughter."

Richard wanted to strangle him on the spot; yet, strange to say, he acted very differently.

"Ah!" he exclaimed, with a look of open admiration. "I had thought of that, but forgot to mention it. Pardon my negligence. Really, Cardinal, you have a brilliant mind, so ecclesiastical in its workings too. It dazzles me." He paused and sighed. "And a man like you would sell himself for £200! What a pity! Have you really decided to break with me?"

"Your judgment's better than the cart's."

"I 'ave," said the valet resolutely.

A coward at heart, he had fortified his spirits with a liberal stimulant, and now, at the sting of ridicule, which galled him in a tender spot, he became rather a dangerous rascal. Whom the gods destroy they first make drunk, and the besotted Bills went sullenly to his doom.

"Look 'ere!" he cried. "You told me once you wouldn't stand no nonsense. No more will I. You got my offer—two hundud pun. Take it or leave it! You daren't 'ave me peach to Miss Renwyck, an' you know it! I know more than you think I know, an' Mr. Williams cawn't cover it up with none of 'is mawkish smiles. No, siree! I 'ave you w'ere I want you, an' you've got to pay. You got to make it three—an' cash down at that! Now, one last time—will you or won't you?"

"No, Woolsey," said Richard, calmly drawing on his boot, "I won't."

Bills scowled at him angrily, and turned toward the door. He was drunk enough to put his threat into execution, and well Richard knew that such an exposure would be a deathknell to his hopes of winning Harriet.

"Wait!"

At the sharp command the valet turned suddenly; then his master changed his tone and continued in an even voice: "Miss Renwyck is dressing for a ride with me, and at present you can't see her. She will probably be down in twenty minutes, after which you may do as you like and be hanged to you! In the meantime I would be obliged if you would get me that small bottle of machine oil on the closet shelf; then find me a piece of soft white rag."

The valet wanted to refuse, but his servant's training, together with a certain compelling something in Richard's eye, enforced obedience. He brought one of Lord Croyland's handkerchiefs from the bureau drawer and laid it with the bottle of machine oil on a table in the center of the room. Richard thanked him, seated himself again and began tearing the handkerchief into narrow strips, while Bills stood watching him, his human curiosity beginning to get the better even of his anger.

"Sit down, Cardinal," said Richard pleasantly. "You have twenty minutes to wait, so why hurry? I have found that morris chair to be very comfortable indeed. You were enjoying it when I came in. Don't let me spoil your afternoon. Try it again."

The valet, still wondering and uncertain, took the indicated seat, narrowly watching his master while the Texan crossed the room, returning to the table with a small screwdriver and a formidable revolver. He seated himself and began taking the weapon to pieces, oiling each part carefully and then running a greasy rag through the barrel. Bills became more and more interested in this singular and to him unfamiliar proceeding, but Richard offered no explanation of his unusual occupation. After five minutes of utter silence the valet could stand the strain no longer.

"Er—beg pardon, sir," he asked, and the tremor in his voice indicated his uneasiness, "but wot are you a-doin' of, sir?"

"Cleaning my gun," returned Richard laconically. "What did you think I was doing—shaving?"

"O-oh!" said Bills and lapsed into silence.

Richard began to whistle. It was a merry, happy little tune, but somehow it got on the valet's nerves. His mind commenced to work and draw inferences. The gun had a very unsympathetic look, which was lessened in no degree by the six enormous cartridges that the worker placed before him on the table. He wished that the Texan had not placed himself so as to command the only exit from the room. Presently the nervous Bills spoke again. The effect of the brandy was wearing off rapidly on account of his growing fear.

"You—you don't expect to 'ave no immejit use for that 'ere thing, do you, Mr. Williams?"

"Don't know," said Richard unconcernedly. "I might, and then, again, I might not. It depends. Pretty little toy, isn't it?" Bills licked his lips and said nothing. The Texan continued: "You see, I always try to keep it in working order, because you can never tell when you've got to whip it out and get down to real enjoyable work. Why, you really wouldn't believe it, Bills, but I haven't shot a man since I left Texas—two whole weeks," he added despondently, shook his head and then began dripping oil in the pistol's lock.

"I suppose," said the valet, by way of filling in the gap of another pause, "I suppose that down w'ere you live, sir, they—they don't mind—er—murderin' of people, Mr. Williams, sir?"

"Shucks!" laughed Richard. "What's a man or two? A bang—a yell—and it's all over. Of course they die hard sometimes, but that's their affair."

The irresponsible person took up his whistling once more, while the muzzle of his carelessly held gun seemed to point persistently at the pit of the valet's stomach, in which, by the way, there was growing a queerly responsive feeling.

"Beg pardon, sir, but—but it isn't loaded, is it?"

"Not yet," smiled Richard. "I'll attend to that later. Besides, I wouldn't hurt you, my boy; no, not for £300—cash down."

The sum was not a large one, yet the particular amount seemed to grate upon the servant's sensitiveness. He cast a longing glance toward the door, but the Texan was already filling the chambers of his revolver, so Bills perforce sat still and watched him, experiencing a separate and distinct spasm as each cartridge nestled into its crib. Richard laughed softly, as at some pleasurable memory.

"By the way, Friend Woolsey, I don't know why I think of it just now, but a mighty funny thing happened down in Texas a couple of years ago. I had a contract with a fellow—chap about your size and age as I remember him, with a charming disregard for keeping promises similar to yours. He broke his contract."

In the awkward pause which followed the surviving partner in the deal drew a fine bead on the tassel of the window curtain and smiled.

"Where is he now, sir?"

Richard shrugged his shoulders.

"Did—did you kill him, sir?" feebly began the unfortunate Bills again, feeling a sudden and unaccountable draft blowing on his spine.

"Well, no," said Richard dreamily. "I didn't. That's the funny part of it. I tied him to a tree and shot away portions of him that didn't count."

"Count, sir?"

"Yes, parts that are not vital, you understand—such as ears and fingers and kneecaps and things—like that. Why, you wouldn't believe it, Bills, but you can chip away at a man for half a day if you're only careful. You see, I had plenty of leisure time on my hands—almost as much as I have now—so there wasn't any hurry and rush about it. That was a rifle. I had a hatful of cartridges and an extra gun to use when the other got too hot for quick firing. A double acting revolver is better for household use."

Once more Richard paused to laugh, twirling his gun around airily in his quick fingers in retrospective joy. "Oh, I say!" he cried. "You just ought to have heard that fellow when I began to pick off his knuckle bones. Knuckle bones, you know, seem to be very sensitive to sudden shock, and in this particular instance I had no earthly cause to complain. Perhaps you are wondering how I could shoot so accurately. Well, I'll tell you." Richard leaned forward and confided in a pleased whisper, "I had just oiled my gun."

Bills now began to sober up with astonishing rapidity. His putty-like complexion had grown grayer still, while his eyes were watery, wandering about in the fruitless hope of detecting some avenue of escape. Even his hair seemed to stir restlessly on his head, and a feeling of weakness and nausea came over him.

"Wot—wot became of the gentleman, sir?" he asked, with a choky click in his voice.

"Gentleman?" repeated Richard absently. "What gentleman?"

"W'y, the—target gentleman, sir, the one as was losin' parts of 'isself that don't count, Mr. Williams, sir. I mean"—

"Oh, yes, yes!" laughed the Texan. "I was thinking of something else. You mean my contract man? I don't remember exactly. He was alive when I left him, I believe, but I rather think the crows got him in the end." There was another pause, in which Richard listened intently. "Ah!" he exclaimed. "I believe I hear Miss Renwyck coming downstairs. Hadn't you better see her before we go for our ride?"

Bills breathed hard, thought for awhile, then looked up timidly.

"M' lord"—

"Don't call me my lord," said Richard so sharply that the servant nearly fell out of his chair. "I have no right to that title now—since we've parted company. No; I'm just plain Mr. Williams, cow puncher, man eater, anything you like except an English nobleman."

"But—but—m' lord," persisted Bills, rising unsteadily and becoming the respectful servant once more. "I don't want to leave you, sir. Candid, Mr. Williams, sir, I'll serve you faithful; 'deed I will. It was only the drink wot made me forgit meself, Lord Williams, sir—I mean—good Gawd! M' lord, you won't think of shootin' at my knuckle bones when I was only foolin', sir—when"—

"Oh, is that it?" Richard interrupted. "It was a joke, then?"

"Yes, sir."

"My! What a delicate humor you Englishmen have! Am I to understand that you will continue to be my servant on the original terms of agreement?"

"It would make me 'appy, m' lord, oh, so 'appy!"

"Very well," said Richard. "I'll give you another trial. But understand me, Bills, there must be no more nonsense!"

"No, sir."

"No more brandy?"

"No, sir."

"And you will obey me implicitly in everything?"

"I will, so 'elp me!"

"All right," smiled the Texan. "I'll give you an order as a starter. Just get those new riding boots of Lord Croyland's, will you, and put them on—break them in for me? I may be out for several hours. You will walk up and down in them until I return."

"But—but," protested Bills, "them boots is too small for you, sir—I mean, your lordship—an' my foot is bigger'n yours, sir."

"I know that perfectly," answered Richard pleasantly. Singular how Bills had never before recognized how pleasant his master could be! "We'll kill two birds with one stone. Not only will you break those boots for me, but per contra at the same time you may be reminded of what it means to break a contract with me. Am I clear?"

Richard watched the operation in grim enjoyment. The fit was a tight one, but Bills accomplished the feat at last, though the perspiration came out on his forehead in copious profusion.

"Thank you," said the Texan simply and departed without giving any further directions.

He enjoyed his ride with Miss Harriet hugely. For three long, blissful hours he cantered with her on beautiful country roads, where the air was sweet and invigorating, where the scent of wild flowers came to them and the fragrance of the wild woods sweeter still in the deepening dusk. A hundred times he was on the verge of confessing all, of throwing himself upon the mercy of her gentleness, but warning something held him in check, and in spite of his impulses—like the sailor in the opera—he remained an Englishman. Once she turned to him with sparkling eyes.

"Do you know," she said, "there are times when you remind me so of a man I chanced to meet that—that"—

"The cowboy?" Richard asked.

She made no answer, but flushed and gave free rein to her eager horse, while the Texan spurred after her, laying a firm hand upon her bridle arm.

"And if I were he would it make a difference 'ben—a difference, I mean, in winning your respect and trust, and"—

"How absurd you are!" she laughed in swift interruption. "Have I not given you both already? My cowboy is but a memory, and you—why, gracious, how late it's getting! We shall never be in time for dinner! Come!"

If Richard and Miss Harriet enjoyed their afternoon, the same could not be said of Bills. For three long hours the servant did penance for his sins, knowing not which ached the most—his head, his heart or his tender feet. To walk was agony. To sit was to suffer with a gnawing, burning heat that ever increased as his feet began to swell. At the end of the first half hour he determined to run away, to hide himself somewhere in the wilderness of New York, where his master might seek for him in vain. Immediately, however, a stumbling block presented itself. To get into the boots had been difficult. To get out of them proved to be an utter impossibility, and to run anywhere with such an

Mr. Corrigan had small patience with tramps and was about to order him off the place when something changed his mind. The fellow had a cast in his eye. He recognized him instantly. It struck the old gentleman at once as being singular that this man should claim to be starving when not two hours before he had been eating heartily from a brown paper parcel in the train. Tramps did not usually travel by train—not inside of them, at any rate—which was an additional cause for suspicion. Uncle Michael determined to investigate the matter further, so he led the tramp to the back of the house, where a plate of bread and meat was set before him. He ate sparingly for a hungry man, but took in the premises with a seemingly careless eye, while the account he gave of himself was far from satisfactory. He claimed to have come from Albany on foot, as was shown by the travel stained condition of his shoes, which was [illegible]early a lie, for Mr. Corrigan had [illegible] him traveling in an entirely oppo[illegible] direction and was more convinced [illegible] ever that a cast in the eye was [illegible] brand of a scoundrel. He declined [illegible] give the fellow money and watched [illegible] suspiciously until he left the [illegible]e, feeling instinctively that some[illegible] [illegible]g would bring him back again.

Richard, who was sitting on the lawn with Miss Harriet, had also seen the tramp as he limped through the open carriage gate into the road. Bills had ridden over to Tarrytown in quest of pipe tobacco for his master and was stopped by the vagrant at the entrance of the drive. Richard saw him bend in his saddle, confer with the man for a moment or two, then turn into the stable yard. Presently he reappeared and crossed to his master with the tobacco which he had secured

Local and Personal

Mrs. D. A. Waterman continues to gain in health.

Mr. A. G. Gilbert is able to walk out for a little while each day.

Mr. S. F. Merry, who was very ill early in the winter, has recovered sufficiently to leave the house for a walk.

A girl 15 years old desires a home with a good family, with the privilege of attending school. She is willing to do housework. Are you interested? If so, address Chief Ross, Fulton, N. Y.

The light, feathery snowfall on Sunday night converted Fulton into a veritable fairyland. On Monday morning even the most unprepossessing stump or ash pile presented a beautiful appearance. The view on First street from the east side to the west side of the river was entrancingly lovely as the bright sun touched the banks of the river and the shrubs that fringed the bank.

Mr. Floyd T. Huntington, who is located at Topeka, Kan., writes The Times that there is nothing equal to sunny Kansas. The letter was written on February 14, and Mr. Huntington had worn rubbers but four times this year. They had no snow as yet and the streets were dry and dusty. Mr. and Mrs. Huntington seem very content in their new home.

"Fashion is marching on in her usual way this spring, and to those who know and see ahead she is leading up to an entirely new type of woman," says Grace Margaret Gould, the fashion editor, in the March, the Fashion Number of the Woman's Home Companion. "The change is to be a gradual one, however, but before long the fashionable woman will have banished the extravagantly large hat, the huge pompadour, the frills and the furbelows of her bodice, and the full skirt. The new tendency is all toward the straight up-and-down type of figure—sloping, slender hips, pulled back tight skirts trailing on the ground, plain, fitted waists, and sleeves of the old-fashioned tight-fitting sort which cling to the arm from shoulder to wrist. This is what we are coming to, so the authorities who make the fashions tell us, but as yet we have taken only a step or two on the way. This spring many small hats will be worn; the new corset effect gives unusual slenderness of line; cut-in-one dresses will be fashionable; mousquetaire sleeves which show the outline of the arm will be favored, and skirts will have lost their full effect."

Charley Prettybear, Tommy Cloud, Baptist Takesenough and Red Eagle had a little fun in Forest City, S. D., the other day and were locked up. Now, their's was a consistent color scheme, anyway—red men ful of red liquor painting the town red. It's different with us. A white man goes out and drinks red liquor until his long green is all gone and everything takes on a lavender hue, then goes to bed and wakes up with a dark brown taste,—and the blues,—only to find his doings featured in the yellow papers.—Ex.

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy-

Roding, Ga. August 27, 1906.
Messrs. E. C. DeWitt & Co.,
Chicago, Ills.

Gentlemen:—
In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1902 I picked up one of your Almanacs at a poor emaciated Dyspeptic wreck will gross at anything, and, that Almanac happened to be my life saver. I bought a fifty cent bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the benefit I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.
May you live long and prosper.
Yours very truly,
C. N. CORNELL.

THEIR MOTTO "NO SPIKETAIL COATS"

Senators Bailey and Davis, Who Are Outspoken Champions of Reform in Evening Dress in Washington :: ::

Representative Capron, One of the New Wits of the House of Representatives. Capitol Gossip :: :: ::

THE DAVIS STYLE.

SENATOR DAVIS has scruples against donning the evening clothes which are customary on certain state occasions, with low cut vest and spiketailed coat, but nevertheless he is fond of expansive shirt fronts and on the floor of the senate is conspicuous for the amount of white covering his broad bosom. The Arkansas member is the proud father of eight children, and it has been remarked that his big, loose fitting gray coat is ample enough to wrap at least half of his baby buntings in.

Senator Davis, though a Democrat, has expressed considerable admiration of President Roosevelt. Both of them believe in large families, and Senator Jeff has proved that his belief is not confined to theory. So when he met the president he was flattered when the latter asked about the health and general well being of the family.

This moved the senator to urge that the president was wronging his country in refusing to run again. He even went so far as to say that he believed a lot of southern Democrats would vote for Mr. Roosevelt.

"Senator," said the president confidentially, "I'd do it if I thought I could carry North Carolina."

"Why," asked the Arkansas statesman, bewildered—"why North Carolina?"

The president seemed puzzled for a moment, then pulled the senator to the south window of the executive office.

"Why," he said, with a laugh, "I thought you were Senator Overman!"

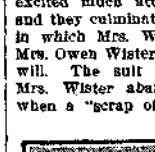
While Representative James A. Hamill of New Jersey was absent for a few minutes from his seat a telegram arrived for him. The page searched the cloakrooms and the lobby, but failed to find him. Upon his return several members told of the message, and Hamill started out to look for it. The page had given it back to the messenger boy, and the latter had not returned to the telegraph office. Hamill got worked up to a terrible state of excitement. He was explaining the importance of that message to a fellow member when a page rushed in and handed him an envelope. He opened it hurriedly and read:

"For heaven's sake, wire me $10. I'm all in."

Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas is keeping up his reputation as a wit. Several senators were discussing the subject of the Panama canal in the senate cloakroom, and the question came up as to who understood the isthmian problem best. Colonel Goethals came in for much favorable comment, but several senators thought former Chief Engineer Stevens probably understood the situation better than any other man who has yet tackled the problem.

THE BAILEY STYLE.

"Why, when it came to knowing that canal problem," said Senator Bailey, "the late Senator Morgan had them all beaten. He made such a study of it that he knew the personal characteristics of every mosquito on the isthmus."



The recent refusal of Senator Jeff Davis to wear conventional evening dress to a dinner recalls the fact that Senator Bailey once objected to such attire, though he some time ago waived these objections. His abstention from a reception at the White House on the ground that he was principled against wearing evening clothes made him much talked about at this time.

This was not Mr. Bailey's initial pronouncement, however, on the subject of wearing apparel. It is related that when he first went to Gainesville, a briefless young lawyer, his low cut vest, extremely long frock coat, extremely broad hat and immaculate whiteness of tie appealed to the risibilities of the natives, and on one occasion some men attempted to have fun to Bailey's face on the subject of his clothes.

The future senator said not a word, but, turning on his heel, went home and got a revolver. Returning, he served notice that he proposed to wear what he pleased and inquired if it was distinctly understood that in the future no comments were to be made. A very satisfactory understanding was arrived at on the spot.

One of the hardest workers in congress is Representative Adin C. Capron of Rhode Island. He is also a good story teller, and his brand of anecdotes is so well liked that when he begins to relate one in the cloakroom the news travels, and the members on the floor of the chamber rush to hear it. It was this which caused Speaker Cannon to say to him recently: "For goodness' sake, cut out those yarns of yours while this codification bill is up. If you persist in telling stories I can't keep a quorum here."

Some time ago Mr. Capron made one of a party of congressmen who traveled as a commission to Prince Edward Island. The party was feasted and honored by the natives, and the entertainment culminated in a banquet at which the Americans were guests of honor. Mr. Capron was called upon to speak. He made several facetious remarks and got the gathering in excellent humor. Then he turned on the sentiment. He could well understand how pleased his colleagues were over their reception, but for him the visit there had a far deeper significance. He could not refrain from mentioning that it was from this island had come one who had been a jewel in his home and a joy of his life. He was especially stirred to be in the very place where she had spent her girlhood.

ADIN C. CAPRON.

After the congressman had spread the sentiment on thick he dropped the subject, but he had the islanders going, and nothing was too good for him after that.

"Say, old man," said one of the congressional party, "that is taking an unfair advantage of the rest of us. You never told us before that your wife was from this island."

"Well, she isn't," said Mr. Capron coolly. "I was referring to our servant girl."

Canadians were not let in on the secret.

RICHEST OF SEASON'S BRIDES.

Mrs. Anne M. Weightman Walker and Her Coming Marriage.

The fact that Mrs. Anne M. Weightman Walker, who is to be married in Easter week to Frederic Courtland Penfield, is reputed the richest woman in America except Mrs. Hetty Green will make the coming nuptials at St. Patrick's cathedral, New York, of more than usual interest. It is expected that Archbishop Farley will perform the ceremony, for the wealthy widow has made many gifts to the Roman Catholic church and has received several memorials from the pope in recognition of her munificence. She inherited about $60,000,000 under the will of the multimillionaire chemist, the late William Weightman of Philadelphia, and for several years prior to his death and after that event was the virtual manager of his large business. The quarrels of the relatives over this will excited much attention at the time, and they culminated in a notable trial, in which Mrs. Walker's sister-in-law, Mrs. Owen Wister, sought to break the will. The suit ended sensationally, Mrs. Wister abandoning the contest when a "scrap of yellow paper" was produced in court containing statements about her written by the dead multimillionaire and which she did not wish given to the world.

MRS. ANNE M. WEIGHTMAN WALKER.

Mrs. Walker has recently said that she purposed soon giving her relatives appropriate shares in the estate bequeathed to her alone. Mr. Penfield is a widower about her age and wealthy.

He Believed the Boy.

A judge was explaining to a young student friend the intricacies of evidence. He illustrated well the case of conflicting evidence—how when the statements of two witnesses are opposed the more probable statement is to be accepted.

"Usually in conflicting evidence," he said, "one statement is far more probable than the other, so that we can decide easily which to believe. It is like the boy and the house hunter. A house hunter, getting off a train at a suburban station, said to a boy:

"'My boy, I am looking for Mr. Smithson's new block of semidetached cottages. How far are they from here.'

"'About a twenty minutes' walk,' the boy replied.

"'Twenty minutes!' exclaimed the house hunter. 'Nonsense! The advertisement says five.'

"'Well,' said the boy, 'you can believe me or you can believe the advertisement, but I ain't tryin' to make no sale.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Up Two Stumps.

Little Johnny was in the habit of wanting more victuals put upon his plate than he could eat. His papa decided to break him of the habit. One day as Johnny insisted upon being served until his plate was well filled his papa said, "Johnny, if I give you this you will have to eat every bit of it or I will punish you." Johnny promised that he would, and bravely did the little fellow try to do so, but in vain. It was too much for him. He would try again and again and then look sorrowfully at his papa. Finally, laying down his fork, he said:

"Papa, if you was me which would you rather do, get a licking or bust?"

Live Furs.

"Mamma, look!" exclaimed Mary. "Those furs are just like mine."

"Why, Mary, you have no furs," replied the astonished mother.

"Yes, I have," said Mary, "and they are filled with kittens."—School Education.

The trouble with most cough remedies is that they constipate. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts gently but promptly on the bowels and at the same time it stops the cough by soothing the throat and lung irritation. Children like it. Sold by all druggists.

Local and Personal.

Miss Edith LaLonde has returned from Amsterdam.

Rev. John Richards' return to the pastorate of the First Methodist church for another year has been unanimously requested by the official board of the church.

There was a rumor to the effect that a portion of the departments in the American Woolen mill had closed on Saturday for an indefinite period. Mr. Irving J. O'Brien informed a Times representative on Tuesday that the rumor was without foundation in fact as nothing of the kind had happened.

Milk Dealer Charles Mangeot's splendid herd of Guernsey cows from which he derives his supply of lacteal fluid for the consumption of his patrons, was given the tuberculin test this week and were found absolutely without disease. Mr. Mangeot was opposed to the test being made until he investigated the subject and proved to his own satisfaction that the test did not injure either the animal or the milk. Mr. Mangeot has the finest herd in this section and he is very watchful of them.

Owing to the storms and the lateness of the mails resulting therefrom it was impossible for the carriers from the local postoffice to make three deliveries of mail a day. The The cross walks and pavements were unshovelled too, retarding their progress, and they were instructed to report at the office an hour later than customary in good weather that they should not lose any time in the office while waiting for the mails in the morning. The government expressly stipulating that they must not exceed eight hours a day under any condition. The trains are arriving on time again and commencing with this Wednesday morning, the three trip schedule has been resumed.

Rev. J. W. A. Stewart, D.D., dean of Rochester Theological seminary, will give an address on "Sociological Problems" at the Baptist church next Monday evening, under the auspices of the Ministers Conference of the city. This will be an open meeting for men and all men are cordially invited. There will be no admission charged or collection taken. Dr. Stewart was on the Baraca lecture course last year and will be remembered for his excellent address on "The Home." This address will be instructive and entertaining and the men of the city should take advantage of this opportunity. The meeting will begin at 7:45.

An order of the Brotherhood of St. Paul has been organized in the State street Methodist church with a charter membership of 73. The Brotherhood was organized on Wednesday evening of last week, E. R. Interesting Facts About Panama.

Mr. H. N. Gilbert is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Frank Shepard, a relative, who is employed in the Department of Construction and Engineering, Gatun, Panama. The letter contains many interesting facts relative to the work on the big ditch and the conditions surrounding it. It says in part: I received your letter on Saturday, also a copy of the Fulton Times which I read with much interest.

The work is going on with usual rapidity. One shovel made 2200 yards the other day. We now have a dam expert here who is making surveys, borings and test pits to learn the nature of the materials and an experimental dam will be under way in the course of several months. The strata for the most part seems to be of a solid nature and there seem to be few difficulties that cannot be overcome. We have been running so close to our appropriation that they are obliged to hedge in on some of the work and make a great many reductions of force. Our department is naturally very expensive, but you do not see much money spent on it for nothing. The Municipal Department are just finishing the big water tank. This holds 400,000 gallons and will meet the necessities for some time to come. The official photographer is going to take some pictures from this point. It is a fine vantage to get a complete view of Gatun. These pictures will come out in some of the magazines, the National Monthly probably.

The weather is very fine here now. The wind almost blows a hurricane, and there is not a great deal of rain. They are planning a visit to Pearl Island on the 21st to return on the 23rd. The island is 90 miles from Panama. I hope to be one of the party.

I am enclosing a postal which shows a partial view of the Chiriqui prison, which is the Panamanian State prison.

All around the sea front is a beautiful green sward. The masonry towers are the sentry boxes. There is one at each of the corners of the building and command a view of any point in the prison yard and the prison itself. Very few ever leave this place alive, and it would be very appropriate to erect a sign, "Ye who enter here leave all hope behind."

Well, I have been back a whole month now and a short month it has seemed. I worked all last Sunday getting out deductions for the silver laborers. Next Sunday a party of us expect to go down the Chagres to Fort Lorenzo. We hope to get a few good pictures, and if so I shall try to send you one. Sunday before last we got a good picture of the river and I will send one when I get a print.

Nothing especial is happening. For the moment I am looking forward to any mail that may be on the Panama which is docking this morning. They have a special boat train now when a boat docks too late to connect with the morning train.

Social life at the zone was never more attractive than at present. The Ancon Art society held its monthly meeting on Jan. 31 with a large attendance of members and invited guests. The Empire Woman's club held a meeting on Jan. 30, with an unusually large attendance. The club arranged to give a dance on Feb. 14, in honor of the Benedict baseball players of Empire. A dramatic and musicale club for women, known as The Thespian, has recently been organized in Empire and will soon give a vaudeville performance. The Ladies' Social club will give a dance Friday evening, Feb. 14, and a buffet luncheon will be served at 11 o'clock. A special meeting of the Woman's club of Gatun was held on Feb. 1, to listen to an address by Miss Anna Gorham on the work of teachers and parents during the school life of the child. There was an open discussion at the close on the subject of the best education for the Zone. The young ladies of Ancon gave a leap year or "white" dance on Feb. 1, at the hotel Trivoli, and the function was the prettiest of the season.

I must bring this letter to a close or miss the mail and the boat.

A Use For His Obituary.

A well meaning and conscientious editor on being shown by the man most interested that the death of the commandant was falsely reported in his paper, apologized profusely and offered to make it all right.

"We'll print a correction at once," he said.

"Well," said the man who wasn't dead, "perhaps it would be better to let it stand. I'll show it to my friends when they want to borrow money."

Impartial.

"Mr. Scatterton prides himself on being strictly impartial."

"Yes," answered the unamiable man. "I once went shooting with him. He didn't seem to care whether he hit the rabbit, the dog or one of his friends."

Found the Set.

This story is told by a man who dislikes nothing so much as to be asked questions:

"My little girl is very fond of seashells," he said, "and, having been called to Atlantic City on business one day, I took advantage of the opportunity to run down to the beach to see if I could pick up a few. I was strolling along the sand, gathering a few shells and pebbles, which I placed in my handkerchief, when along came one of those old idiots who ask questions with their mouths which their eyes could answer. He smiled upon me and said: 'Fine day, isn't it? Are you gathering shells?'

"'No,' I snapped back, saying the first thing that popped into my mind; 'I'm looking for a set of false teeth I lost while in bathing.'

"He expressed his sympathy, and then his face lit up as his eye caught sight of a pink and white object on the sand. 'Well, I declare! Here they are now!' he exclaimed, and, sure enough, he picked up a set of false teeth lying right at his feet. I was too surprised to do anything but grab them and put them in my pocket. The funny part of it is that I never had a tooth pulled in my life. I wonder whom that false set belongs to."—Philadelphia Record.

Where Idols Are Eaten.

At certain seasons in some parts of India it is the duty of every devout person to eat a special sort of confectionery. Every confectioner in October, for instance, has a pole about six feet high at his door, and to this is nailed a great book about a foot long and thick in proportion. On one side of this is a brisk fire, with a huge earthen pan on it. Before the pan a man may be seen sitting, for nobody stands when he can sit, with a kind of wooden ladle, and with this he briskly stirs a quantity of bubbling, black looking sugar till it becomes quite tough. He then scrapes it together and puts it on a piece of board to cool a little, and then, getting up and dexterously throwing it on the large hook, he begins to pull out the tough substance. He draws it out to the length of four or five feet at a time and throws it back and elongates it again, and so he manipulates it till the mass becomes as white as snow. This composition so treated is manufactured in all sorts of sacred forms—figures of little idols and gods—and is eagerly bought for consumption.—Strand Magazine.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CONGRESSMAN KNAPP.

Lewis County Accords Him the Honor of Naming Delegates.

The Republican Lewis County Convention which was held at Lowville last Friday, unanimously presented the Honorable Charles L. Knapp for renomination as Representative in Congress from his county and authorized Mr. represent his county in the Congressional Convention hereafter to be called.

The delegates named were A. J. Phillips, editor of the Lowville Journal; H. E. Turner, J. A. Pease, J. Edgar Jones, D. C. Markham, Henry Chickering.

The resolutions adopted were renewed expressions of appreciation of the services of Col. John T. Mott as State Committeeman. His administration of the duties of that office, the resolution states, has been fair to each of the counties of the district, and he has rendered effective service to the Republican party, both in the district and the State, and we request the delegates this day elected to the State convention to vote for his re-election as State committeman.

In accepting the nomination Congressman Knapp said in part:

"The sentiment in your resolutions of indorsement relative to my candidacy for return to Congress.

"On the 14th day of September, last, I gave to the press an interview, in part as follows:

"I am assured by the representatives of the Republicans of the several towns in the county of Lewis that the sentiment in this county is united for my return to Congress, and that the delegation would be for me. This, I am assured and believe, is the united wish and will be the action of the representatives of my home county. Should this action be endorsed by the other counties in the district, or either of them, I shall accept the nomination, and, if elected, serve the people to the best of my ability.

"That was then and is now my position relative to a return to Congress.

"You today have confirmed that interview in so far as it relates to the action of the county of Lewis. That action I accept, and am a candidate, and should the final action of the Republican Congressional Convention result in my nomination, that nomination will be gratefully accepted.

"Recently a gentleman from the county of Oswego, and also a gentleman from the county of Jefferson have announced their candidacies for Representative in Congress from this district.

"It is a matter of record that never, since and including my first candidacy for Congress, have I solicited my friends to make, or has there been made, active canvass through Republican primaries looking to my nomination. To that policy I still adhere, especially in view of the fact that to precipitate a canvass against local candidates might invite factional strife, party discord and in the end work injury to the district, results which should be avoided and which all should unite in avoiding. I, therefore, deeply appreciating the royal good will of my friends throughout the district, express the hope that, my candidacy may not be made the occasion of a strife in the primaries in the other counties of the district, inviting a true expression of the wishes of the Republican electors of the district through the final action of the Congressional Convention."

A very little money will purchase a second hand piano in first class condition at the W. J. Beebe piano store, Oneida street. tf

DIED.

Andrew Johnson Monta, aged 80 died at his home in this city on Sunday.

The funeral of the late Orin Pangburn, aged 65, was held on Thursday from the home in Palermo. The deceased is survived by his widow, two daughters and two sons. Mr. Pangburn was an uncle of Mrs. John W. Youngs and Mrs. Fred Taylor of this city.

On Saturday afternoon at the family home near this city occurred the death of Emily Amelia, aged 57, wife of Mr. Eugene W. Dunsmore, after a brief illness. The funeral will be held from the home on Thursday. The survivors are the husband, one son, Burr C. Dunsmore; one sister, Mrs. Earl Chappell of Gilbert Mills, and two brothers, Augustus Stanton of Seattle, Wash., and Luther Stanton of Grand Rapids, Mich.

The deepest sympathy is expressed for Congressman Knapp in the death of his mother which occurred at his home in Lowville on Thursday night. The deceased was over 90 years of age and her home and her sons had during his entire lifetime been one and the same. Congressman Knapp was ill at the time of her death and in his weakened condition the blow fell upon him with crushing force.

The heartful comradeship which always existed between the devoted mother and her intellectual son was frequently commented upon by the guests within the home.

Mrs. Charlotte Ridgeway was born in Fulton, N. Y., on June 17, 1819, and died at the home of her daughter (adopted in infancy, but a daughter indeed) Mrs. W. A. Webb, of Lowville, Feb. 8, 1908. The funeral services were held at the Presbyterian Church, of Lowville, on Feb. 10, Rev. William Rowe, of Poynette, preaching the sermon from Rev. 14: 13, and the burial was in the Lowville cemetery.

The childhood name of decedent was Thompson, and her early womanhood spent in lovingly caring for her aged parents. After the demise of her parents she came to Lowville, to live with her sister, Mrs. Prussia Page. In the year 1861 Miss Thompson was united in happy marriage to William Ridgway, and with the exception of a few years the home has been in Lowville, Mr. Ridgway having died there 27 years ago.

Mrs. Ridgway wrought in the days when foundations were laid, when the diverse elements of a great civilization were selected and put in operation, when necessities appealed to the heroic, when conditions required and fostered faith in God and man, when in pursuit of mutual protection and progress the best there is in man was brought in unselfish and unstinted measures of devotion, and the strength of character, the marked individuality and the victories of faith, of this vanishing race is abundant compensation for their hardship.

Mrs. Ridgway lived actively and sympathetically, never losing interest in her fellowkind nor her faith in God. The world is better and richer because she lived, poorer now that she is dead. Gentle, generous, sympathetic and practical, she leaves many behind and will find many in the Homeland whose lives were brightened and helped by her, "will rise up and call her blessed." She was converted when nine years of age, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fulton, N. Y., transferring her membership to the same church at Poynette, thus giving God and the church of her choice seventy-nine years of loyal and useful service, a record in time the writer has never known equaled. Her attachment to her church is seen in that she made generous bequests to the local church of which she was a member, and also to various philanthropic and missionary enterprises of the denomination.

Seldom is this stanza written by Wesley more applicable:

"Servant of God well done!

The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last!"

DISTRICT ATTORNEY BAKER'S STATEMENT

Full Report of the Work of the Late Grand Jury and Why Delays Were Necessary—His Official Record an Open Book.

In view of the action of the foreman of the last Grand Jury Wednesday, Feb. 26, and the public statements of Mr. C. E. Pitts, Chairman of the Prohibition State Committee, I believe the people are entitled to a statement from me.

Shortly after the Grand Jury convened January 6, 1908, there was manifested a desire to probe into the matter of the County Treasurer's office. January 15, 1908, the Grand Jury requested that such investigation be made, inasmuch as the expert accountants from the State Comptroller's office had not completed their examination and the expert accountant employed by the County had not even commenced his examination, I advised against attempting any such examination until we had the report of the Comptroller's examiners.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY WILLIAM B. BAKER

For the purpose of obtaining such report an adjournment of ten days was taken and I wrote the State Comptroller for a preliminary report of what his examiners had found in their investigation, and on January 25, 1908, I received the following letter from the State Comptroller:

"Mr. W. B. Baker, District Attorney, Oswego, N. Y.

Dear Sir: Referring to your letters requesting a preliminary report of the municipal examiners' investigation in Oswego county, would say that the examiners have not yet completed their examination and will be unable to make any report until that examination has been completed by them. You can readily see that they must complete their examination before they are able to form a conclusion or to report on the actual condition there existing.

I shall be very glad to send you a copy of the examiners' report as soon as it is made, and render any further assistance to you which we can.

Very respectfully yours,
MARTIN H. GLYNN,
Comptroller.
D."

This letter can be seen by any who wish to see it. I also wrote District Attorney Roger P. Clark of Broome county, where the County Treasurer's office was examined by the Comptroller, for information upon the subject, and on January 25th I received a letter from him in which he writes, —unless there is some special emergency which absolutely requires a different form of procedure, as for instance, that parties are liable to flee the country, I would advise that the Grand Jury wait until the Comptroller's men have finished their report." This letter can also be seen.

During the adjournment C. E. to the foreman containing general charges against about everyone except himself. Upon the re-assembling of the Grand Jury Mr. Pitts was brought before it and given a part of two days to testify and to become the complainant as to any charges. The foreman was directed to "go to it" such witnesses as he or the jury desired and in order that the jurors might feel no embarrassment I left the Grand Jury soon after Mr. Pitts was called, remaining away until they were through with his examination, when I resumed my work with them. A large number of witnesses were then called and testified in relation to alleged violations mentioned in his letter and every opportunity was given for Mr. Pitts to sustain the charges he referred to in that letter. No proof was forthcoming.

After disposing of those rumors of crime, each one of which was fully examined at the Grand Jury's request we commenced the examination of the County affairs proceeding as best we could without the aid of the report of the Comptroller or of the expert employed by the county. After examining some twenty witnesses the Grand Jurors themselves agreed that we were not making sufficient headway and on Feb. 5 we took a recess until such time as the Comptroller's report might be secured. Upon that very day, Feb. 5, before the jury separated, as I was informed on Wednesday last, it was unanimously agreed by the jurors, including the foreman, that I had done all that it was possible for me to do to aid them in such investigation, and until such time as I showed disposition to shirk my duty they should continue to have confidence in me.

On February 8th., 1908, I am informed, Mr. Pitts sent another letter to the foreman demanding that he get "Special Counsel". This letter I did not see. Thereafter as I am informed the foreman wrote Justice Scripture asking, as he stated in Court, that he appoint "Special Counsel" whereupon the Court directed me to notify the jurors to re-assemble Wednesday, February 26th, 1908, which direction I of course obeyed.

The Comptroller's report, which will include the result of the examination of every department of the county is not yet out. The expert employed by the county has not yet finished his examination of the treasurer's office and it would have been impossible for me to have further continued the examination at this time for that reason, and also for the reason that a trial term of the County Court opens at Pulaski Monday, March 2nd, 1908, with seventeen criminal cases upon its calendar and that on March 16th, the Extraordinary Term designated by Governor Hughes convenes for the trial of the two Reitz murder cases.

The investigation into the affairs of the County will be again taken up with the next Grand Jury, which sits May 4, by which time I trust the Comptroller's report will have become public property, and any charge of crime committed will be fully and fairly investigated.

Nearly all of the Grand Jurors have personally assured me of their confidence in the District Attorney's office and their assurance is worth more to me than any other certificate of official character.

County Court.

The March Trial Term of County Court is now in session at Pulaski, Judge Merrick Stowell presiding. There are seventeen criminal cases and one civil case on the calendar. Owing to the fact that District Attorney Baker will shortly have to try the two Reitz murder cases and that these will be closely followed by the May Trial Term of Supreme Court which also has a Grand Jury, only the jail cases will be tried.

The calendar is as follows:

Cornelius Kane, violation of the liquor tax law, two indictments.

Alphonso Mule, assault, first degree.

Arthur Greenwood, burglary, third degree and grand larceny.

Arthur Greenwood, burglary and petit larceny.

Christopher Magliacco, assault, second degree.

William Sharp and John Sharp, burglary and grand larceny, robbing Carlton and Decker's barber shops.

Eugene B. Walker, criminally receiving stolen property.

Mary Duncan, keeping a disorderly house.

Charles D. Clark, violation of the liquor tax law.

Charles Cooper and James Havens, gambling.

Catherine E. Cook, grand larceny, second degree.

Addie Wilcox, keeping a disorderly house.

Charles Mills, assault, second degree.

Wirt Ross, violation of the liquor tax law.

Will the High School Have to "Quit?"

Fulton High School has had this year (1907-8) probably the most unsuccessful year in the history of its athletics.

For the benefit of those who are not acquainted with what "Fulton High" has done in an athletic way in the past few years it might be well to say that Fulton has been steadily fighting her way into recognition by the larger High Schools. Her teams have defeated the Syracuse High School, the Oswego Normal, the St. John's Military Academy and numerous other of the larger schools of northern New York, enabling her to obtain games with Cazenovia Seminary, Utica Free Academy and even Rochester High School. This game with Rochester never materialized because Fulton is too poor.

Poor Fulton! She never had enough money any way. To-day the student body of the Fulton High School, known as the Athletic Association, is $20 in debt, and not a cent in sight to insure our baseball manager so that he can go ahead and make a schedule for the coming season.

Now, to make a long story short, we cannot give up athletics after such an almost unbroken line of defeats as we have had this year.

No, sir; wait until we have had a fairly successful season and then give it up if we have to—but not now. That's the way the "quitter" talks. "Give it up when you're beaten!" Now, we do not intend to quit.

If you want to help us and be nothing out yourself at the same time, plan to attend the High School farce—a home-talent play for the benefit of the Athletic Association, which will be presented in the Foster Theatre the week after Lent.

We intend to give you your money's worth.

High School Notes.

The Leap Year party given by the girls of the Sophomore class to the Seniors was a success and enjoyed by the 25 couples present.

The Freshmen were entertained at the home of Miss Belle Beardsley, east of this city, Monday evening.

The basketball team journeyed to Cazenovia and Manlius Friday and Saturday. At Cazenovia, Morin being injured in the second half, the home team after hard work on their part took victory from the locals. On Saturday the team defeated the St. John's Military Academy team by a score of 24 to 17.

Walton plays here this week. This is the big game of the year and a large attendance is desired.

What He Meant.

Park row at 1 a. m. and a policeman and a sailor in conversation.

"Keyside, keyside!" said the sailor. "Ow will HI reach the bloomin' keyside?"

"G'wan wid ye. D'ye think I'm a locksmith, that I know about yer old key and its side? There's one key and lock I'll be after givin' ye, and that's to a cell. Move on now."

"Keyside! HI said keyside as plain as HI could, blime!"

Just then a high brow who had been to the postoffice buying stamps so that his rejected contributions would come back to him stepped up.

"The man wants the keyside, whatever that is, and I dunno," said the policeman. "I believe he's looney and I'll run him in."

"He wants the quayside—the docks," said the high brow as he directed the man to the water front, while the policeman said:

"Well, I'll be blowed!"—New York Press.

Moslem Prayer Rugs.

Prayer rugs were evidently invented for the purpose of providing the worshipers with one absolutely clean place on which to offer prayers. It is not lawful for a Moslem to pray on any place not perfectly clean, and unless each one has his own special rug he is not certain that the spot has not been polluted. It does not matter to these followers of Mohammed how unclean a rug that is on the floor may be, because over it they place the prayer rug when their devotions begin.

An Eye Experiment.

The two eyes really see two objects. If the two forefingers be held, one at the distance of one foot, the other two feet in front of the eyes, and the former be looked at, two phantoms of the latter will be observed, one on each side. If the latter figure be regarded, two phantoms of the nearest finger will be observed mounting guard, one on either side.

Lincoln's Rules.

On one occasion President Lincoln on entering the telegraph office of the war department, writes Mr. Bates in "Lincoln In the Telegraph Office," was heard to remark to Secretary Seward, "By jings, governor, we are here at last!" Turning to him in a reproving manner, Mr Seward said, "Mr President, where did you learn that inelegant expression?" Without replying to the secretary, Lincoln addressed the telegraph operators, saying:

"Young gentlemen, excuse me for swearing before you. 'By jings' is swearing, for my good old mother taught me that anything that had a 'by' before it was swearing."

One day Secretary Seward, who was not renowned as a joker, said he had been told that a short time before on a street crossing Lincoln had been seen to turn out in the mud to give a colored woman a chance to pass.

"Yes," said Lincoln, "it has been a rule of my life that if people would not turn out for me I would turn out for them. Then you avoid collisions."

Power of Deceiving.

There is a Brooklyn woman who possesses a servant who is a model in all respects save one—in that she is none too truthful.

Lately the mistress has been using all her eloquence to make Nora see the error of deceitfulness. But at last she had to own herself beaten when Nora, with a beaming smile, turned and in a most cajoling tone said:

"Sure, now, mum, an' wot de ye suppose the power of desavin' was given us fer?"

Indifferent.

"I can't give you an opinion on that question," the statesman replied, "because it's a question I pay no attention to. I am indifferent to it—as indifferent as the backswoodsman's wife. That lady, you know, looked on while her husband had a fierce hand to hand tussle with a bear, and afterward she said it was 'the only fight she ever saw where she didn't care who won.'"

JOHN A. JOHNSON,

Presidential Possibility Whose Modest Explanation of His Rise In Life Is, "I Only Tried to Make Good."

THE CANDIDATE

Tribute of Minnesota Political Opponent, "He Has Nerve and Tact; He Is Not Aggressive, but Firm."

HAULING THE WASHING.

WHAT manner of man is John A. Johnson, governor of Minnesota and one of the presidential possibilities on the Democratic side? In all that has been written about this interesting man of the northwest perhaps nothing serves to give so definite an idea of the place he occupies in Minnesota politics as some impressions conveyed in a recent letter from a Republican of the governor's own state to an eastern friend.

This correspondent starts out with the remark that it is hard to think of a man whom he knows so closely as Governor Johnson in connection with the presidency and continues:

"But when I reflect on the situation I see no reason why he would not be a most available candidate or why, if he were elected, he would not make a very satisfactory president. He is really an exceptionally good man, and everything about him is very creditable. His public career has been very dramatic, and his hold on the respect and affection of the people of the state is quite remarkable. When I first knew him he was running a country newspaper in St. Peter, a village of a couple of thousand people. He was elected to the state senate and made a dignified, intelligent and independent senator."

After detailing how his political opponents tried to defeat him for the governorship by publishing the story to the effect that Johnson allowed his father to die in the poorhouse when the fact was that John was but a small boy when his unfortunate drunken father died there and was working hard to help support his mother, the Minnesota correspondent continues:

"As governor Johnson has done very well. There really isn't very much for a governor to do except be decent and sensible, address public gatherings and represent the state on public occasions. Johnson has done all this with credit. He has appointed good men to office, been sane and reasonable, kept out of trouble and from taking extreme positions. The state is very proud of him and, I think, has a right to be. He has nerve and tact. He is not aggressive, but he is firm."

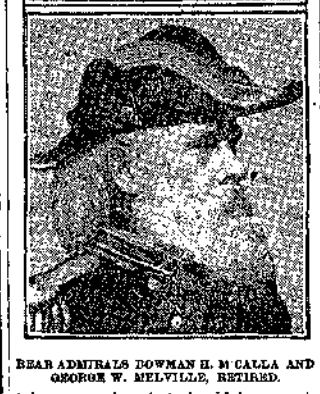
This from a political opponent is deemed a candid view of the man who twice has been elected governor of Minnesota, a strongly Republican state, on the Democratic ticket. Governor Johnson's first election may be explained by the sad error of his opponents in circulating the poorhouse story and that about his mother taking in washing. When the voters of the state discovered that the candidate had worked his way up from the bottom of things, and not only that, but had supported his mother and several other little Johnsons, they elected him governor, the Republican party being split open to begin with. His second election appears to have resulted from his good record as an executive in addition to the story of his early career. Somebody once asked Governor Johnson what he had done in his office to make the people re-elect him.

"I only tried to make good," he replied.

Governor Johnson is forty-six years of age and a native of the town where until three years ago he ran the St. Peter Herald.

IN THE GOVERNOR'S CHAIR.

His parents were natives of Sweden. The governor is a thorough American in all his tastes and inclinations. There has been some tendency toward describing him as being like Abraham Lincoln in his earlier surroundings, but John Johnson, poor as he was, had boyhood advantages of which Lincoln never dreamed, because the latter's early environment was that of a pioneer in an illiterate, bookless, almost manless wilderness. John Johnson had the advantage of the town's public library, which he used faithfully during the years when he clerked in a drug store. Between selling patent medicines and liver pads he filled up the chinks with reading the best authors.



The governor is married, Mrs. Johnson being a charming woman considerably younger than her husband. In the event of White House occupancy both the governor and his wife would be able to maintain the social dignity of their spheres. Governor Johnson, though decidedly a man of the people does not resist dress suits and top hats when social usages call for those habiliments.

TWO VETERANS OF THE NAVY.

Rear Admirals George W. Melville and Bowman H. McCalla.

Admiral McCalla recently made a statement to the effect that with a navy department under a civilian secretary and with eight different bureaus run by civilian secretaries ruinous mistakes are only what should be expect- [illegible] quently expressed for twenty years, but not in criticism of any individual

REAR ADMIRALS BOWMAN H. M'CALLA AND GEORGE W. MELVILLE, RETIRED.

The admiral had two years of very hard campaigning in China and the Philippines, and it was he who commanded the navy relief expedition during the Boxer troubles. It was during the Sampson-Schley controversy that he called on Schley one day and in the course of conversation about the dispute then on remarked, "Isn't there glory enough for all?"

The phrase in slightly altered form was embodied by Schley in his report, and in that way it soon afterward became famous.

Rear Admiral George W. Melville and Rear Admiral Bowman H. McCalla, who have both been drawn into the discussion over the condition of the navy and the organization of the navy department, have had more than the average number of stirring adventures in the course of their long careers. Both are now on the retired list. Admiral Melville is sixty-nine, and Admiral McCalla will in a short time be sixty-four.

Melville, who recently urged the purchase by America of the captured flag of the American frigate Chesapeake, made a brilliant record in the civil war and in 1879 sailed with De Long on the Jeannette in the ill fated arctic expedition. He commanded the boat's crew which escaped from the Lena delta, and later he led the expeditions which recovered the bodies of De Long and his companions. Admiral Melville was quoted by President Roosevelt in his letter regarding the Rixey-Brownson episode and the command of the hospital ship Relief. Question having arisen as to where he stood in the navy controversy, Admiral Melville sent a letter to a New York paper, in which he said that in a public address in 1893 he finished his oration in the following words:

"The navy of the United States in its personnel and its material, man for man, ton for ton and gun for gun, has not its superior on the face of the globe."

In his recent letter he declared, "This was my opinion at that time, and I have never had reason to change my opinion, notwithstanding all the newspaper reports to the contrary."

Forecastle Gourmets.

"Scouse, or lob scouse, a person's face sea pie, junk, tack, slush and duff—there's a meal ye can't beat nowheres," said the sailor.

"Yes," he went on, "ye can talk about yer ris de veau, yer vol au vent, yer mouses and other French dishes, but they ain't none o' them in it with sea fare dished up by a good sea lawyer.

"Scouse is soup, soup made o' salt beef. Add some good sea vegetables to it, sitch as spud sprouts and split peas, and ye get an extra fine soup, what is gener'ly called lob scouse. Pot au feu is slops beside a rich lob scouse.

"Foller up yer scouse with a person's face sea pie. That's a pie made of bullock's head. Good? Why, friend, there ain't nothin' like it on earth.

"Junk is salt beef. Junk ain't no brain food. It don't strengthen the mind like a correspondence course, but, by tar, I'd rather have it than cancton a la presse or a supreme de sole.

"Tack and slush is the sailor's bread and butter. What if ye do have to break yer tack with a tack hammer, and what if yer slush is sometimes strong enough to queer the compass? Sailors need strong food, for they must do their work."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Little Card Trick.

A Russian priest was so devoted to the amusement of card playing that he played up to the last moment before commencing the church services. On one occasion, having a particularly good hand dealt him, he thrust the cards into his pocket, intending to return and finish the game after the service. Unluckily the cards fell out on the church floor, to the extreme scandal of the congregation. The witty priest, however, was fully equal to the occasion. At the conclusion of the service he beckoned up one of the choristers and asked him the names of several of the cards, which the boy knew correctly. He then suddenly asked the lad the name of the next saint's day, which the child could not tell.

"See!" cried the priest, turning to the congregation. "You teach your children the names of every card in the pack and leave them ignorant of their religion. Let this be the last time I am compelled to bring playing cards into the church to shame you." And picking up his hand he made an honorable retreat.—London Answers.

"It beats the Dutch," said a young broker, "how much trouble a fellow's wife's most charming girl friend can make for a fellow—or for a fellow's wife." Then he explained what appeared to be greatly in need of explanation. "I went home for dinner the other night," he continued, "with a friend who was married recently. The wife's old chum was there and met the husband for the first time.

"'Really,' she said on presentation, 'I quite feel that I have known you. You see, that picture of yours in football costume that Jennie always kept on her dresser so long was very familiar to me.'

"Say, you ought to have seen the face of that friend of mine. But he finally found his voice.

"'But, my dear Miss Smith,' he replied, 'I never was a football player and never had on a football costume.'

"Then you should have seen Miss Smith's face."—New York Globe.

Animals Are Not Proud.

Professor Schuster asserts that animals lack moral feeling entirely, none of their acts being immoral or moral in the broad sense, and that they have no trace of a sense of shame or of honor. Their courage, he declares, is "a mere impulse of nature," and of moral courage they know nothing. He continues: "And animals have no pride in the sense of man's conception of that quality. They are not proud of their kind, of their kindred, of their individuality. They neither have an individuality nor are individual. Animals are not proud because they have no consciousness of the scope of the value of their kind, of their enterprise or of any other form of their capability. They are neither supercilious, proud nor the contrary—that is, grieved, wounded or depressed in regard to a possible pride."

Where Beggars Have Trades Unions.

Begging is a vocation in China and beggary an institution. In every province there is an organized beggars' trade union or guild—in some districts several. These guilds have presidents and officials and are in every respect thoroughly well organized. There is a membership fee of about $4, and all members swear to abide by the rules. The chiefs, or "kings," as they are called, are under the protection of the magistrates, and their power is considerable.—Wide World Magazine.

The Age of Artificial Beauty.

Writers on topics concerning women's matters would fain have us believe that the present is the age of beauty. The fact is that never before have the arts of artificiality been so widely adopted among all classes as they are today.—London Opinion.

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription."

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in alterative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchia, stomach (as catarrhal dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous diarrhœa), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerative stages of these affections it is often successful in effecting cures.

The "Favorite Prescription" is advised for the cure of one class of diseases—those peculiar weaknesses, derangements and irregularities incident to women only. It is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nervine. For weak worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulæ of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines. The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

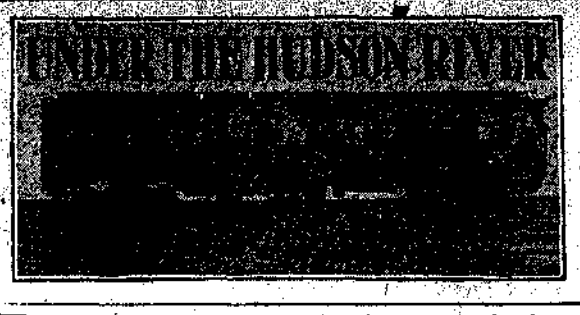
Little Great Men.

A Chinese who had long studied the works of Confucius, who knew the characters of 14,000 words and could read a great part of every book that came in his way once took it into his head to travel into Europe. Upon his arrival at Amsterdam his passion for letters naturally led him to a bookseller's shop, and as he could speak a little Dutch he civilly asked the bookseller for the works of the immortal Xixofou. The bookseller assured him he had never heard the book mentioned before. "Alas," cried our traveler, "to what purpose, then, has he fasted to death to gain a renown which has never traveled beyond the precincts of China?" There is scarce a village in Europe and not one university that is not thus furnished with its little great men.—Oliver Goldsmith.

—This is what Hon. Jake Moore, State Warden of Georgia, says of Kodol For Dyspepsia: "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Dear Sirs—I have suffered more than twenty years with indigestion. About eighteen months ago I had grown so much worse that I could not digest a crust of corn bread and could not retain anything on my stomach. I lost 25 pounds, in fact I made up my mind that I could not live but a short time, when a friend of mine recommended Kodol. I consented to try it to please him and I was better in one day. I now weigh more than I ever did in my life and am in better health than for many years. Kodol did it. I keep a bottle constantly, and write this hoping that humanity will be benefitted. Yours very truly, Jake C. Moore. Atlanta, Aug. 10, 1904." Sold by all druggists.

Pants and Trousers.

Everybody talks well when he talks in the way he likes, the way he can't help, the way he never thinks of. The rest is effort and pretense. The man who says "trousers" because he likes to say it and the man who says "pants" because he likes to say it are both good fellows with whom a frank soul could fraternize, but the man who says "trousers" when he wants to say "pants" is a craven and a truckler, equally hateful to honest culture and wholesome ignorance. He belongs in the same sordid category with the man who wears tight shoes and high collars that are a torment to the flesh, who eats olives that he doesn't relish and drinks uncongenial clarets in imitation of his genteel neighbor in the brownstone front.—Atlantic.



—Be careful about that little cough. Get something right away; some good, reliable remedy that will move the bowels. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup acts gently yet promptly on the bowels and allays inflammation at the same time. It is pleasant to take and it is especially recommended for children, as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. Sold by all druggists.

His Apprenticeship.

"Yes," said Mr. Pater, with ill concealed pride, "my youngest boy makes some smart remarks at times. Only recently he asked me what it meant to be an apprentice. I told him that it meant the binding of one person to another by agreement and that one person so bound had to teach the other all he could of his trade or profession, while the other had to watch and learn how things were done and had to make himself useful in every way possible."

"What did he say to that?" asked one of the audience.

"Why, after a few minutes the young rascal looked up at me and said, 'Then I suppose you're apprenticed to mother, aren't you, dad?'"—London Answers.

THE era of travel under the Hudson river has come at last. It means much to the country at large as well as New York city and its environs. Manhattan Island is now joined by underground railways with Long Island on the east and the New Jersey shore on the west. Distance is annihilated. Electric trains can whiz through the tubes laid under the waters over which great steamships ply, and whether the waves run high and the storms rage or fogs endanger navigation it is all the same to the tunnel traveler. One hundred feet beneath the surface of the rushing waters the elements can no longer interfere with the schedules of transportation.

Recognizing the general public interest that would be taken in the opening of the twin tubes from Hoboken to New York on Feb. 25, the officials of the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad company decided to invite President Roosevelt to press the electric button which should furnish the impulse for the starting of the first trains, and they planned by way of further signalizing the event a dramatic meeting between the governors of New York and New Jersey under the bed of the noble Hudson and midway between the opposite shores. Thus the honor of officially declaring the tunnel open fell to these two executives, Charles E. Hughes, representing the Empire State, and Franklin Fort, representing New Jersey.

The so called McAdoo tunnels pierce the earth beneath the North river to the south of the tunnels which are being bored by the Pennsylvania railroad. The part of the McAdoo route now complete consists of a twin tube tunnel extending from Hoboken to Sixth avenue and Nineteenth street, New York, a distance of nearly three miles. This section of the tunnel system is generally spoken of as the Morton street or uptown tubes. The downtown tubes run from Jersey City to the great terminal station at Cortland and Fulton streets, Manhattan borough. The south or downtown tubes will be completed some time during the coming summer. On the New Jersey side between the terminal at Hoboken and that at Jersey City a transverse tunnel has been constructed. It taps all the trunk and local transportation lines on the Jersey shore and serves as a feeder to the underriver tubes. Passengers on any of the roads whose stations on the Jersey shore are in proximity to the transverse tunnel may reach New York by the underground route now in readiness. At present they can only go to uptown New York by the McAdoo system, but six months or so hence they will be able to travel under the river to the downtown section also. Besides the routes described, the McAdoo system of railways underground and under river includes a branch running from Jersey City to Newark and a spur running from Sixth avenue, New York, under Ninth street to Astor place, connecting with the Interborough company's subway at that station. The Newark branch is partly underground and partly above the surface. The entire system embraces about eighteen miles of underriver and underground railways. Five minutes is all the time necessary for the trip under the Hudson, and the trip from Hoboken to the station at Sixth avenue and Nineteenth street, in the heart of upper Manhattan, may be made in less than ten minutes.

In equipping the new road under the Hudson with facilities for transportation the latest devices for comfort, convenience and safety have been employed. The cars are of steel, absolutely fireproof, and both tunnel and cars are brilliantly lighted. The stations are built of concrete and metal so as to preclude the possibility of fire in their case; also congestion and crowding have been avoided as far as possible by providing the cars with entrances both at the ends and in the middle and by arranging the platforms at stations so that passengers enter on one side of the car and leave at the other. In the tubes under the river the atmosphere will be preserved fresh and cool by the system of ventilation adopted. Each train as it proceeds acts as a piston, forcing the air ahead of it and drawing it more as it moves on. Apparatus for artificial ventilation has been installed for use in emergencies like the blowing out of a fuse to clear the tunnel quickly of smoke.

ENTRANCE TO TUNNEL FROM NEW YORK SIDE.

At the downtown terminus of the tunnel a great structure known as the Hudson Terminal building is almost completed, and beneath it trains coming into lower New York from Jersey City will discharge their passengers. There are two sections of the building, Dey street running between them, and together they comprise what is said to be the largest office building in the world, with thirty-nine fast running elevators, all sorts of conveniences for the public and offices providing room for 10,000 people, a small city in itself.

Looking into the tunnel now open to uptown New York one sees extending out under the river from the vaulted archways of the station itself two brilliantly lighted tubes dwindling as they vanish in perspective until they resemble most the points of polished needles. Though the effect is subterranean, it is not unpleasant, and an impression of mystery is given, which may well be inspired by the sight of a completed work of engineering which has involved an expenditure of $70,000,000 and the employment of capital and brains on a scale never before witnessed in the execution of such an enterprise.

NOTED IN TWO FIELDS.

S. Weir Mitchell, Author and Physician, and His Ideas.

A new story by Dr. Weir Mitchell, entitled "The Red City," has just begun running as a serial in the Century Magazine. It is a romance of the second administration of President Washington, and the first installments describe the experiences in America of a young Frenchman who flees hither after the murder of his father during the French revolution by a Jacobin mob.

DR. S. WEIR MITCHELL.

Dr. Mitchell was born seventy-eight years ago on the 15th of February, but is by no means past his usefulness. One of the things he has done in his old age is to furnish aid and encouragement to the new movement combining medical science and Christian faith in the treatment of bodily ills. Indeed, at Emmanuel Episcopal church, Boston, where it originated, the rector a few Sundays ago made an address in which he credited Dr. Mitchell with being the inspiration of the movement. The venerable author was sitting at the time in one of the pews of this church—"the clearing house for sorrows," as they call it in Boston. The rector, Rev. Dr. Elwood Worcester, acknowledged that he had obtained from Dr. Mitchell many of the ideas which he and his associate have put in practice in Boston and which have now extended to other cities, for besides being a noted author Dr. Mitchell is eminent as a physician and especially as a neurologist.

Though an authority on how to treat other people's nervous troubles, his own nerves once got the best of him. He was in Austria at the time, and he consulted the most eminent nerve specialist in Vienna. The foreign physician noted that he was an American and asked from what city he came. Learning that Dr. Mitchell lived in Philadelphia, he exclaimed, "You come to Vienna to be cured of a nerve trouble when you live in Philadelphia?"

"Why not?" asked the physician-author.

"Because," was the reply, "you have in Philadelphia the greatest and most famous nerve specialist in the world. Dr. S. Weir Mitchell."

His Description.

In the English club at Hongkong a white haired old gentleman who had come down from some northern port was seated at dinner when he suddenly became very excited. He had been brought a letter by a solemn faced Chinese butler, and he saw something on the outside of this letter which sent him downstairs two steps at a time to interview the hall porter. When he came back he told us what was the matter. The hall porter had inscribed on the envelope in Chinese for the information of the butler:

"This is for the old baboon with white fur."

Unfortunately for the hall porter, the old gentleman was a first class scholar in the Chinese language.—London Mail.

The Buckboard.

"There are few persons who know how the name of 'buckboard' came to be applied to a vehicle," says a writer. "It was away back in the twenties, when the transportation of goods, wares and merchandise was almost entirely by wagon. A Dr. Buck was then in charge of military stores en route to army posts in the southwest. In east Tennessee much difficulty was experienced by reason of the rough roads, and there were frequent mishaps, mostly from wagons overturning. Dr. Buck overhauled the outfit, and, abandoning the wagon bodies, long boards were set directly on the axles or hung below, and the stores were loaded in such a manner that there were no further delays from breakdowns, and the stores safely reached their destinations. In special emergency, too, the load could be shifted or taken off in a hurry. Dr. Buck's example was followed, especially when roads were rough, and soon much hauling was done by the use of wheels, axles and boards only. Now we have the buckboard, both in carriage and automobile forms, conforming closely to the original idea, though few suspect the source of it."—Chicago News.

Technical Swearing.

The late Sir John Millais was a very keen fisherman. He used to tell a story of an old man who was his attendant during a day's sport in the north of England. The old man was full of local gossip and small scandal, and where the natural supply failed him he was clearly able to manufacture enough of his own to go on with. "I were out with the bishop yesterday," said the old man, referring to a popular church dignitary, who is also a good fisherman. "Ah," replied Millais, "he's a good man?" "Well," continued the old fellow, "'e may be, but 'e do swear a bit when 'e's fishin'." "Oh, nonsense!" replied Millais. "I don't believe that." The old man insisted that he was right, however. "I'll give you an instance," he said. "I was standin' 'longside o' the bishop; same as I might be aside o' you, and 'e'd got a big fellow at the end of 'is line that was pretty nigh pullin' 'im off 'is feet, and I turns to 'is lordship and I says, 'E pulls —— 'aid, don't he?' and the bishop says, 'Yes, 'e do.' Well, now, ain't that swearin'?"—London M. A. P.

St. Patrick and the Roosters.

St. Patrick's reputation as a snake charmer is known all the world over, but what he did to the roosters is a bit of history less disseminated. There is a small district in the heart of County Sligo, it seems, which strenuously resented the intrusion of the Scotchman, Succat (St. Patrick) had become exceedingly domineering, and it was decided to put a damper on his progress. He said to his hostess, "Wake me when the cock crows." When he had gone to bed she whispered this command to the neighbors, and all the populace concealed their roosters under small creels so they could not lift their heads high enough to crow. In consequence thereof the saint overslept himself and was furious when he discovered the trick that had been played on him. He laid his everlasting curse on the roosters of that district, and they have never crowed since.—Exchange.

The Number Fourteen in France.

So far as France is concerned, it is the number fourteen that has played a conspicuous and generally portentous part in her history. On May 14, 1554, the Rue de la Ferronnerie was enlarged by order of Henri II., and four times fourteen years later Henri IV. was assassinated there by Ravaillac—namely, on May 14, 1610. Henri had lived four times fourteen years, fourteen weeks and four times fourteen days—i. e., fifty-six years and five months. Then Henri's son, Louis XIII., died May 14, 1643 (the same day and month as his fathers). And 1643 added together equals fourteen, just as 1553 (the year of the birth of Henri IV.) equals fourteen. Louis XIV ascended the throne 1643, which added together equals fourteen and similarly the year of his death (1715) equals.

The Doctor at Sea.

A veteran naval surgeon, speaking of the odd things that crop out in the service, said that one of the younger medical cranks in the navy discovered much virtue in sea water, and no matter what disease came on his first action was to throw down the patient's throat a large dose of the nauseating liquid. The crew soon learned to hate him thoroughly. In process of time he fell overboard in a choppy sea, and a great bustle ensued. In the midst of it the captain came up and anxiously inquired the cause. "Oh, nothing, sir," replied a tar, "only the doctor has fell into his medicine chest!"

Fooling the Youngster.

"Mother," said Mr. Popley guardedly to his wife, "why not take the y-o-u-n-g-s-t-e-r to the m-a-t-t-i-n-e-e tomorrow?"

"Pa," chimed in the youngster quietly, "there's only one 't' in 'matinee.'"

A Lesson in Grammar.

In a certain mountainous region the teachers are appointed with little question concerning their grammatical orthodoxy. Occasionally, however, a wave of school reform sweeps through the valleys, and undesired examinations are thrust upon embarrassed pedagogues.

It was during one of these periods of intellectual discomfort that the following sentence was given: "The bird flew over the house." Accompanying it was the query, "Is 'flew' a regular or an irregular verb?"

One teacher after another shook his head hopelessly despite the slow, thought inspiring fashion in which the examiner repeated the perplexing fact that "The—bird—flew—over—the—house."

Finally a man rose in the rear, and, with the assurance of one who puts his trust in logic and a practical knowledge of natural history, he volunteered a solution. Said he:

"If that bird which flew over the house was a wild goose, it went in a straight, regular line, so the verb is regular. But if it was a peckwood that flew over the house, then it went in a crooked, zigzag line, and so the verb is irregular."

All but the grammar bound examiner were satisfied with this sensible and rational explanation.—Youth's Companion.

Artistic Slips.

It is a frequent matter of lamentation on the part of artists that one of their number may spend genius and time on a piece of work, only to fall conspicuously in small detail.

There is a story that one Royal academician gave a hand five fingers and a thumb and that another painted a live lobster bright red.

The clever Goodall had been engaged in painting a number of laborers dragging a huge stone across the desert when a man of science entering the studio said to him: "I say, Goodall, if you want those fellows to pull that stone you must double their number. It would require just twice as many for the task."

But it is not modern painters alone who slip up on points of accuracy. Even Albrecht Durer in a scene representing Peter denying Christ painted one of the Roman soldiers in the act of smoking. Turner put a rainbow beside the sun, and in another picture he got fearfully tangled in the ship's rigging.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Fixing a Photografter.

Senator Stone of Missouri once made himself unpopular with a certain photographer. The latter individual appeared at the senator's room at the capitol and announced that he was there to take a picture. Stone expostulated, but in vain. A few days later the photographer again appeared and presented the pictures and also a bill for $10. Remembering how hopeless was his argument against having the picture taken, Senator Stone decided it would be still more useless for him to decline to pay for them. So he wrote a check. After the man's name was on the check he wrote the word "Photografter."

When the man presented the check at the senate disbursing office for payment, he was required to indorse the check and write after his name, just as it was written on the face of the check, the word "Photo-grafter."—St. Louis Republic.

A Limit to His Power.

A curious historical anecdote is handed down from the time of James I. James, being in want of £20,000, applied to the corporation for a loan. The corporation refused. The king insisted. "But, sire, you cannot compel us," said the lord mayor. "No," exclaimed James, "but I'll ruin you and the city forever. I'll remove my courts of law, my court itself and my parliament to Winchester or to Oxford and make a desert of Westminster, and then think what will become of you!" "May it please your majesty," replied the lord mayor, "you are at liberty to remove yourself and your courts to wherever you please; but, sire, there will always be one consolation to the merchants of London—your majesty cannot take the Thames along with you!"

W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH, 4, 1908

In another column The Times publishes an open letter from District Attorney W. B. Baker which should be read by all men. Mr. Baker has been attacked without cause or truth and for political purposes only by Prohibition Chairman Pitts, and at Mr. Pitts' behest by James Graham, foreman of the last Grand Jury. At the last meeting but one of the Grand Jury Mr. Graham concurred with the other grand jurors that there was no necessity for engaging "special counsel" in the conduct of the investigations. Pitts having previously instructed Gov. Hughes that he should demand such action. Following the receipt of a communication from Pitts, during the term of recess taken by the Grand Jury, Graham appears to have been born again and under the hypnotism of Pitts' superior mentality he sees things in a different light and echoes Pitts' plaint that "special counsel" be assigned to Oswego county. Pitts has made many claims anent miscarriages of justice in excise cases in this county and he blames District Attorney Baker apparently for each and every liquor seller and user, save only and except Graham, who are not in State's prison

As a matter of fact and record, a perusal of the disposition of excise cases during Mr. Baker's tenure of office shows but one acquittal, that of Al. Kellar of Volney when G. D. Harger and Claude Duvall were the District Attorney's witnesses that there had been violation of the excise laws. Harger, who is next to Pitts in Prohibition authority in Oswego county, swore that "he took several drinks afterwards so as to be able to swear it was wine he had at Kellar's." The jury did not seem to place much credence in the testimony of these two and an acquittal was secured.

But we will leave Pitts as a character study, until a later day and return to Graham.

The Oswego Times of Feb. 28, in commenting upon the situation says:

"Now a leading feature in this investigation related to the violations of the excise laws, and here is where the matter becomes interesting. Pitts apparently was working through Graham and his hammer was out for about everything if not for everybody. The foreman put up at the Adams house while the Grand Jury was in session. Here, although excise cases were to be investigated, this selection of Pitts for his especial ends, is reported as drinking and at times drinking heavily. Also as drinking at other places. It is also asserted that his condition became such before the Grand Jury that two of its members threatened to report him to Justice Scripture for dismissal. These went to Assistant District Attorney Colony with their complaint, who said he would have a talk with Graham about it. That night one of the Grand Jurors was with Graham at the Adams house for hours trying to quiet his drunken outbursts.

Graham resented the publication of these events in the career of the Prohibition leader's new protege, and he wrote to The Times that "during the session of the Grand Jury held in Oswego on Jan. 28, I did not drink anything of an intoxicating nature whatever." The records showing that a session of an hour and a half was held on that date. Such self control on the part of the foreman is worthy of commendation.

A week later Mr. Graham again plunges into print with another communication to The Times in part as follows: I have not drank or used in any form during the past ten days anything stimulating or intoxicating. During this period I have been an absolute teetotaler. Trust this statement of fact to be sufficiently plain and specific to be entitled to full credit.

The morning following, Graham was called into District Attorney's private office in the Court House. There, in the presence of Assistant District Attorney Colony, District Attorney Baker had a plain talk with him, telling him that he and whiskey could not mix and that unless he gave his solemn promise as a man not to drink again during the continuance of the session he would have him discharged. This was about the last of January or First of February. It is said that after this admonition he refrained from drinking. The reason the District Attorney did not have him summarily discharged was on account of the man's family. Graham asked for forbearance on that ground, breaking down and crying, shaking hands with the District Attorney and thanking him for his forbearance. Even the foreman himself, it seems, at once the last adjournment, concurred with the other jurors that there was no occasion for special counsel. Notwithstanding this, several days later he writes Justice Scripture asking that special counsel be assigned, and this upon consulting with only one of the grand jurors and that one refused to sanction such course. In view of this record it would be interesting to know how foreman Graham voted in the various excise cases coming before him.

It is said that Graham's behavior at the Adams House subsequent to the scene made by him in the Court House and the discharge of the Grand Jury was in keeping with his previous conduct there as already referred to. In the light of these revelations, how can any weight be given to an attack from such a source upon any public official? The Times is advised that the grand jurors are firmly standing by the District Attorney in all that relates to this matter."

That submarine boat business looks like an extremely unsavory mess. Two newspaper correspondents have been smirched, and there is reflection on most of the members of the House committee on Naval affairs. It is sincerely to be hoped that Speaker Cannon will abandon his attitude of belittling the affair and will appoint a committee which will probe it to the bottom. President Roosevelt, when he found that he had inherited a postoffice scandal from a previous administration, demonstrated that the best politics in the world is to probe a festered sore to the bottom, make public all the facts, expose the culprits and then have a new deal. It takes a big, courageous man to adopt that course, but the heartiness with which the people endorsed Mr. Roosevelt's course in 1904, demonstrated the soundness of his methods. The American people love the open, frank, manly course and politicians would do well to realize that fact.

There is ground for curiousity as to the purpose of the Hearst Independence League. It was supposed that Mr. Hearst purposed to organize his league, hold its national convention just before the Democratic national convention, have it endorse himself for President and then utilize that endorsement in trying to get control of the Democratic gathering. The Hearst League has, however, set the date of its convention later than the Democratic gathering. What then does it all mean? Is it possible that Mr. Hearst is playing a farseeing game with the hope of capturing the Democracy in 1912?

Up to Sunday, February 23, seventy-six delegates had been elected to the Republican National Convention. Of that number forty-eight are instructed for Taft, twenty-six for Fairbanks and two are uncomitted. Only fourteen delegates from Ohio had been elected and all are instructed for Taft. The remaining thirty-four Taft delegates come from states other than Ohio.

Nearly three hundred New York clergymen have petitioned Congress not to increase the navy, arguing that the United States now pays 65 per cent of its revenues for its military establishment. And yet, there are those who believe that at least a competent military establishment is the surest preventative of war. The President is one of these, and Secretary Taft is another.

Speaking of Civil Service Reform, Secretary Root has practically established it in the consular and the minor diplomatic service without special provision of Congress. Unfortunately, however, as this stands merely on the Secretary's order, it might be entirely abolished by a President unfavorable to the reform.

Board of Public Works

A meeting of the Board of Public Works was held on Saturday, Commissioners Bradley, Howe and Thomson being present. It was voted to hold regular meetings each Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock until further notice.

A resolution was adopted that no plumbing or other supplies will be furnished by the department except upon payment of cash in advance. Commissioner Thomson was named as a committee to purchase a street sweeper and scraper.

The bills of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power company were referred to the city attorney.

The matter of water rebates and some water bills was discussed. Several bills were audited and others were referred to the city attorney for investigation.

City Attorney Guile was authorized to confer with Ex-City Attorney Hillick relative to some bills which were in dispute.

Governor Shown to Have Little Strength Among Lawmakers.

TUBERCULOSIS AMONG COWS

How This Insidious Disease Menaces the State—Steps For Its Restriction. New Bills of General Effect—The Initiative and Referendum.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, March 4.—"The governor's reform legislation is doomed" is the remark frequently heard at the capital. The decisive defeat in his attempt to remove Insurance Superintendent Kelsey has brought about the feeling in many quarters that the anti race track betting, ballot reform and direct nomination measures will also fall of passing in either senate or assembly or both.

It is felt that the governor's announcement that he would not accept a renomination has had considerable to do with the apparent weakness of his following in the legislature. The governor, however, has undoubtedly more strength in the assembly than in the senate. The governor's banking reform legislation will probably pass both houses, but that is apparently all of importance that he will succeed in getting through.

Campaign Issue Raised by the Minority

The minority continues to make powerful attacks on the first department of the public service commission having jurisdiction over New York city and in this way also attacks the governor. Evidently the fact that this department has not been conspicuously active will be made a prominent issue in the next political campaign, and Minority Leader Palmer is in the van of the assault and has for his aids, among others, Assemblymen Robert Wagner and Aaron Levy, Democratic members from New York city. Like Mr. Palmer, these men are good orators and able lawyers of extensive trial practice in the courts and consequently are well equipped for the debates which frequently occur on the floor of the lower house.

ASSEMBLYMAN JESSE PHILLIPS OF ALLEGANY.

[Mr. Phillips is one of the ablest lawyers in the assembly. He is a Republican and has for several years represented Allegany in the lower house. He is chairman of the important committee on judiciary and a leading member of the ways and means committee, etc.]

"Biggest Thing of the Session."

"The race track fight is the biggest thing in the legislature this year."

That statement is heard most frequently in and about the capitol. The general opinion is that Governor Hughes will call a special session of the legislature to consider the question of abolishing betting at tracks if the Agnew-Hart measures do not pass.

The charges of Governor Hughes' special insurance investigator, Matthew C. Fleming, against State Superintendent Otto Kelsey and the superintendent's detailed answer to the same have been widely discussed during the last few days. Some critics state it to be a good defense, one that will make him friends. Others say Kelsey has not entirely cleared himself of the charges and ought to resign. Opinion on the subject seems to be about evenly divided.

Mr. Kelsey's communication to the senate in his defense concludes as follows:

I profoundly regret that the question of my removal has once more been presented to your honorable body. It is so presented through no fault of mine, and I would avoid the present situation were such a course consistent with my honor as a man and my reputation as a public officer. Conscious that I have faithfully and competently performed the duties of my office, I submit my record as superintendent of insurance to the calm and deliberate judgment of the senate.

The fact that the vote in favor of Kelsey was larger than last year is deemed significant as evidencing that the influence of Governor Hughes in the legislature is on the wane.

Fight Against Bovine Tuberculosis.

The spread of tuberculosis among the cattle and other animals of this state has been the subject of considerable investigation in the immediate past and is now receiving added attention. One of the preventive measures now advocated is the rigid restriction of the bringing into the state of diseased cattle from Canada and the southern and western states. Much of the existence and spread of the disease are attributable to lax methods of inspection of cattle brought into the state.

It has been well established that bovine tuberculosis destroys by death a certain number of cattle in each herd affected; that it causes a waste of food because affected animals do not give an adequate return; that it causes heavy loss by spreading from one animal to another through milk and by contact; it also reduces the market value of animals and destroys the good reputation of a herd or of a locality.

Considerable evidence on this subject has been presented to the legislature in various forms, and it is certain that some steps will be taken to aid in the wiping out or halting of the insidious disease.

Professor Veranus A. Moore of Cornell university has spent a lengthy period in investigating the subject and has tabulated elaborate statistics pertaining to various of its phases.

Impressive Figures.

Bovine tuberculosis, states Professor Moore, is the most devasting animal plague with which dairymen have to contend. Of 1,459 animals examined and tested with tuberculin by the state department of agriculture up to 1906, 641, or 43.9 per cent, reacted. In 1905-7 Professor Moore obtained additional data from a large number of practicing veterinarians throughout the state. The investigations of the veterinarians showed that of 364 herds tested, containing 8,640 animals, 265 herds, or 72.8 per cent, were infected with tuberculosis and 99 herds, or 27.2 per cent, were free from the disease; 36 per cent of the 8,640 animals tested were found to be tuberculous. The official test made by the commissioner of agriculture in 1903-6 revealed a much smaller percentage of reacting animals. Of 3,488 cattle tested, 673, or 21.79 per cent, reacted, and of 262 herds tested 121, or 46.18 per cent, were diseased. Taking the totals of the private and official tests together, it is found that tuberculosis existed at the time in 383, or 61.7 per cent, of 626 herds and that of 11,728 cattle tested in all 3,784, or 32.26 per cent, reacted. That is to say, 40.89 per cent of animals in the diseased herds were infected with tuberculosis. The average size of the diseased herds was 23.9 per cent animals, and the average size of the nondiseased herds was 10.3 per cent animals.

These figures, Professor Moore says, are alarming when one considers the heavy financial loss which bovine tuberculosis each year means to the farmers in New York state.

Some New Bills.

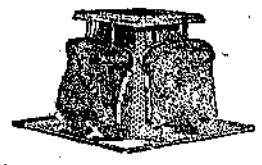
Senator Hill has introduced a bill that could be well made general or else re-enacted to relate to various localities. The bill provides that in the city of Buffalo every dance hall and dancing school shall be compelled to have a license. By so restricting resorts of this sort it is believed that many places of a questionable nature will be closed up and cease proving a menace to the morals of young folks of both sexes.

Senator Travis has introduced a proposed amendment to the railroad law regarding street surface railway cars as follows:

Section 1. Chapter 565 of the laws of 1890, entitled "An act in relation to railroads, constituting chapter 39 of the general laws," is hereby amended by adding thereto a new section to be section 101-b thereof and to read as follows:

Sec. 101-b. Name of owner, lessee or receiver to be printed on cars.—A corporation, whether as owner or lessee or any receiver thereof, shall not operate or run a street surface car either for the carriage of passengers or freight upon any street or highway in any city or village unless the name of the corporation operating such car or which had formerly operated such car, in the event that a receiver thereof has been or shall be appointed, shall be painted or printed upon the sides and ends of said cars in letters of not less than six inches in size and of such a color as to be readily seen and distinguished from the color used upon the said car at the places thereon where said letters are to be painted or printed, and unless, further, that the name of the corporation, person or receiver thereof so operating said car shall be conspicuously posted or placed within said car in the view of any person riding thereon. Such corporation or receivers thereof shall not operate or run a street surface car upon the said street or highways within any city or village with the name of a corporation or receiver thereof which formerly operated a street surface railway in said city or village painted or printed or otherwise placed upon or in said car or any part thereof other than the name of the corporation, receiver or person actually engaged in the operation thereof. A person or corporation violating any of the provisions of this section shall be liable to a penalty of $50 for each such violation, to be recovered by any person who shall by an action duly brought prove and establish such violation.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.



Senator Martin Saxe of New York has introduced in the senate a highly important concurrent resolution proposing the amendment of the constitution of the state (article 3) giving the people the right of initiative and referendum.

The amendment would enable 5 per cent of the voters to initiate legislation either in the state legislature or a municipal common council. The resolution seeks to add several new sections to the constitution, one of which is that "the people reserve to themselves power to propose laws and amendments to the constitution and to enact or reject the same at the polls independent of the legislature, and also reserve power at their own option to approve or reject at the polls any act, bill, resolution or resolve passed by the joint action of both branches of the legislature."

Another section provides that "the veto power of the governor shall not extend to any measure approved by vote of the people, and any measure initiated by the people and passed by the legislature without change, if vetoed by the governor and if his veto is sustained by the legislature, shall be referred to the people to be voted on at the next general election."

The operation of the initiative clause provides that the people may suspend the action of laws passed by the legislature and originate new legislation by petitions and have it submitted to a vote of the people.

COMMON COUNCIL.

At the regular meeting of the Common Council held on Tuesday evening of this week, it was decided to make charter amendments that the city money be placed in the banks which would pay the largest rate of interest. That there be but one official paper in the city. That a single property owner cannot hold up street and highway improvements.

Snow and ice must be removed from the sidewalks before twelve o'clock, noon, or it may be done by the city at the expense of the property owner. All contracts made by a department must be signed by the heads of departments rather than by the Mayor. The City Attorney was authorized to put these changes in the form of a bill to be presented the legislature for enactment.

The city hall janitor is to work under the watchful eye of the city clerk and be responsible to him for faithful performance of duty. Considerable routine business was transacted.

Will Be Recalled.

Dr. De Marsan Spencer, an actor known to many Fultonians, dropped dead in Grand Junction, Colo., on February 18, as he was about to go on the stage for the second act of "The Wheel of Love." Heart disease caused his death. He was 65 years old.

About twenty years ago, De Marsan Spencer played the title role in the tragedy of Richelieu in Stephens Opera House, supported by an ameteur cast. Prominent in the cast of characters, were Fred G. Bennett, son of Job Bennett; G. Will Hoff, Frank Coates, Miss Maude Barnes, Miss Caroline Nichols and other local talent, and the excellence of the performance was widely commented upon. Dr. Spencer trained the young people who appeared upon the stage with him, and his ability as an actor was marked. His stage name was Hal Newton Carlyle.

The Dramatic Mirror in commenting upon his career prints the following: "Mr. Carlyle's real name was Dr. De Marsan Spencer. In 1885 he made his home in Salem, Mass., where he was well known by everyone in the small town. He was a lineal descendant on his mother's side of Marquis de Marsan, confidant of Louis XVI of France. His father was a descendant of Sir Isaac Newton. In Salem he was known as a Shakespeare reader, musical critic, and expert, and editor of the 'Salem Evening Telegram.' At one period during his stay in Salem he conducted a musical school. Many prominent actors, now on the stage, are indebted to him for training. His office in the quarters of the 'Telegram' was the rendezvous of all theatrical stars who played in Salem. Carlyle's father was a well-known clergyman of the Church of England, and married Sarah de Marsan, third Marquise de Marsan."

ELECTRICITY HELPS

Can You Explain?

You would not attend one performance if a theatre were poorly lighted; you insist that cars and similar places should be well lighted; your clubrooms are well equipped—But, WHY do many people still fail to take advantage of Electric Light at HOME where they LIVE, when it costs less, with all its desirable features, than any other?

We are ready to do our part—why do you delay?

A Masonic Convention is to be be held in Albany on March 5 and 6. In speaking of a well-known former Fultonian, the Rev. Warren C. Hubbard, who is Grand Lecturer for the State of New York, the Albany Journal says: "Grand Lecturer Warren C. Hubbard is justly recognized as one of the foremost men in the great order. Not alone in the York Rite but in the chivalric orders and in the Ancient Accepted Rite he fills many important positions with characteristic dignity and fidelity. Dr. Hubbard is a gentlemen of commanding presence and winning personality. He is a ready and eloquent speaker and his reports from the committee on necrology to the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar are treasured by students of masonic history as gems of English literature. The eminent craftsman will be given a most cordial reception."

A Slap at Mother.

Dinner was done, and the family was assembled in the sitting room. Mother had taken up the evening paper and was reading an account of how a highwayman had been operating in the suburbs. Father was down on his hands and knees trying to act like a horse while little Willie drove him around the floor.

"Papa," finally remarked the good lady, glancing toward her husband, "here is a story about another man who was waylaid. Do these holdups always stop you with a pistol and then go through your clothes?"

"Oh, no," grimly replied father, arising from the floor. "Sometimes they wait until you hang your clothes over the back of a chair and go to sleep."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

CHAPTER XIII.

On Wednesday morning two items appeared in one of the New York newspapers, neither of which would strike a casual reader as being important; but, so far as this narrative is concerned, they led to complications. The first was an obviously exaggerated report and read as follows:

TEXAN FATALLY INJURED.

Mr. Richard Williams, son of the famous millionaire and cattle king of San Antonio, Tex., was severely injured on Sunday last in an automobile accident. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where our reporter called last evening. Mr. Williams was too prostrated by the shock to be interviewed, but we learn from one in authority that the young man is suffering from concussion of the brain, besides sustaining a fracture of the shoulder and internal injuries. The accident was due to the carelessness of an inexperienced chauffeur, who gave his name as Peter Wilson, but whose address had not been ascertained up to a late hour last night. The police are making inquiries.

The above paragraph chanced to catch the eye of a certain Mr. Loger, who had taken the morning train for Chicago. He was an intimate friend of old Bill Williams and would have gone to look after the son himself except that urgent business necessitated the continuance of his journey west. Mr. Loger therefore wired his friend from Pittsburg, stating that Richard had been hurt and lay at the point of death in a New York hospital.

On receiving this startling information the father became greatly agitated. He had not heard from Richard for several days and had begun to worry even before the receipt of Mr. Loger's telegram. He wired at once to the St. Regis, where he knew his son to be stopping, and received an answer to the effect that Richard Williams had not been seen since the previous Monday morning, though his dress suit case and other belongings were still in room No. 926, which had not been given up.

Bill Williams, who loved his son as he loved no other being on earth, committed the deep water harbor and improvement business to his most trusted subordinate, although affairs had reached a critical stage, and started for New York on a special train.

The other newspaper item appeared in the social column under the head of "Gossip." It read as follows:

On Friday evening of the present week an entertainment will be given in the beautiful country home of Mr. Jacob Renwyck, at Irvington-on-the-Hudson. Among other features a little one act play will be presented, entitled "The Man and the Bird," in which Miss Imogene Chittendon, one of the season's most charming debutantes, will take the part of the bird, while the charming and accomplished Miss Renwyck will assume the leading role, wearing a costume ordered specially for the occasion and the famous Renwyck diamonds. The entertainment, we understand, is given to a few intimate friends in honor of a distinguished guest, Lord George Fitz-Clarence de Courcy Howard, earl of Crofland. The affair promises to be an unusually brilliant one.

This breezy but otherwise unremarkable item caught the attention of one Jack Bibbs, a gentleman possessed of much ingenuity, some varied experience, quite a collection of aliases and a passion for acquisition. He had received no invitation to the above mentioned social function, though he hoped to profit thereby in ways best known to himself.

Mr. Michael Corrigan, returning from a business meeting in the city, took the 12 o'clock train for Irvington and went into the smoker, where he seated himself and lighted a short black pipe, the pet aversion of his refined brother-in-law, Jacob Renwyck, who visited most of his disgust upon his unfortunate wife. His business transactions in the city evidently pleased Uncle Michael vastly, for that gentleman kept chuckling to himself and rubbing his plump white hands in the manner of one upon whom good fortune has descended suddenly.

After a time his attention was arrested by two men on the seat opposite him. They were engaged in a whispered conversation while they ate their lunch from a brown paper parcel. To a casual observer there was nothing unusual in the appearance of the two passengers. They were roughly clad, unshaven and apparently poor, having the air of workingmen out of a job. Mr. Corrigan would probably have not noticed them at all except that one of them—the better looking, who if he had been shaved and well clad might have been called good looking—had a slight cast in his eye, a physical blemish which the old gentleman had ever regarded as a sort of name plate on the front door of a scalawag. He saw the man only a moment or two before getting out of the train, and in the stress of far more important matters the incident passed out of his mind. It was recalled later on. He was sitting on the front porch of Restmore, where he had just taken luncheon, when a tramp entered the place and came timidly to the house, begging for food in the usual professional whine.

Mr. Corrigan had small patience with tramps and was about to order him off the place when something changed his mind. The fellow had a cast in his eye. He recognized him instantly. It struck the old gentleman at once as being singular that this man should claim to be starving when not two hours before he had been eating heartily from a brown paper parcel in the train. Tramps did not usually travel by train—not inside of them, at any rate—which was an additional cause for suspicion. Uncle Michael determined to investigate the matter further, so he led the tramp to the back of the house, where a plate of bread and meat was set before him. He ate sparingly for a hungry man, but took in the premises with a seemingly careless eye, while the account he gave of himself was far from satisfactory. He claimed to have come from Albany on foot, as was shown by the travel stained condition of his shoes, which was clearly a lie, for Mr. Corrigan had seen him traveling in an entirely opposite direction and was more convinced than ever that a cast in the eye was the brand of a scoundrel. He declined to give the fellow money and watched him suspiciously until he left the place, feeling instinctively that something would bring him back again.

Richard, who was sitting on the lawn with Miss Harriet, had also seen the tramp as he limped through the open carriage gate into the road. Bills had ridden over to Tarrytown in quest of pipe tobacco for his master and was stopped by the vagrant at the entrance of the drive. Richard saw him bend in his saddle, confer with the man for a moment or two, then turn into the stable yard. Presently he reappeared and crossed to his master with the tobacco which he had secured.

"Navy Capstan, m' lord," he stated triumphantly, "the kind wot you smokes at 'ome, sir."

"Thanks," said Richard. "By the way, Bills, what was that queer looking beggar saying to you just now?"

Bills started slightly, as one ashamed of being seen in such evil company.

"Oh, 'im? Yes, sir. W'y, 'e was awskin' his way to the station, m' lord. A rum sort, I calls 'im, sir, beggin' your pardon for'—

"Yes, yes, Bills," Richard reproved, with a show of impatience. "That will do. You may go."

The valet bowed respectfully and departed, while Miss Harriet looked at her companion in polite surprise.

"Why are you so short with him?" she asked. "To me he is perfectly delicious. I don't believe he ever laughed in all his life, did he?"

"Don't know, I'm sure," drawled Richard lazily. "I curb his tongue from necessity. The fellow is inclined to be loquacious. At times I am forced to—ah—sit on him."

Miss Renwyck laughed.

"Do you know," she said, "you are becoming an American very rapidly? Really, I am beginning to be quite vain of my success with a first pupil."

"My dear young lady," the Texan answered in a tone half banter, half in earnest, which was deeper than she dreamed, "if you should wish it I'd gladly become—er—a kangaroo."

Again Miss Renwyck laughed till the silvery echoes reached the ears of Michael Corrigan, who lounged on the front veranda.

"By George," he chuckled to himself as he rubbed his hands in the manner characteristic of him, "that young man is making progress!"

In the evening when Mr. Renwyck came up from the city Mr. Corrigan took him aside and related the day's experience with the tramp, suggesting that a detective be employed while the valuable lot of diamonds was in the house. The two gentlemen, as has already been stated, never got on together peaceably. If one of them offered a suggestion the other found reason to combat it vigorously, and in this case Mr. Renwyck took the opposite side with a vengeance, poohpoohing the possibility of theft from start to finish.

"Why, my dear Michael," he said in a tone of undisguised scorn, "what you say is nonsense, pure and simple. The house is equipped from top to bottom with a perfect system of burglar alarms, which I set myself each night. Unless there is collusion with some person on the inside I not only defy any light fingered gentleman to enter, but I give him a cordial invitation to try. No, sir! If you want to put a Gatling gun in your own house, do so by all means. In mine I have no room for artillery or an army of Pinkertons. Now, don't you see how absurd you are?"

"All right," assented Mr. Corrigan. "I've warned you, and that's all I've got to say. They're not my diamonds."

"Just wait a moment, Michael," said Mr. Renwyck, walking after him. "I want to show you what an idiotic stand you have taken. You say the man has a cast in his eye. Very good; I'll admit that, but I venture to say that in the state of New York there are from twenty to thirty thousand people with casts in their eyes. You claim that it is a mark of rascality. I don't agree with you. My own father had a cast in his eye."

"Don't doubt it in the least," snapped Mr. Corrigan. "That explains it. I've often wondered"—

"Come, come," laughed Mr. Renwyck; "you gain nothing by being personal. But listen. You saw a man in the train—though you confess you only glanced at him—and immediately recognized him as a bristly murderer who has committed the crime of being hungry. Did you see murderer No. 1 get off the train? No, of course not. He is probably dining in the bosom of his humble but honest family, while you, my dear sir, are aching to clap him in the penitentiary." Mr. Renwyck paused to laugh. "Really, Michael, you amuse me. Any is responsible for bad eyesight perhaps, but it is your poor old brain that troubles me. You have developed into a fussy old woman—Miss Michaela Corrigan, spinster, sixty-one and afraid to say 'boo' to a hat."

The old lawyer paused suddenly in his walk and thrust the ferrule of his cane deep into the gravel path.

"Jacob," he said in a tone of suppressed anger, "that will do. You have gone just a little too far. I told you what I thought without any wish for an argument, and now I'll tell you something else. I don't care whether you lose your diamonds and plate or not. What's more, I hope you will. Good night."

He had intended staying for dinner, but changed his mind and swung rapidly away, while Mr. Renwyck looked after him, laughing merrily.

"Oh, I say, Michaela!" he called. "Don't forget to look under your bed tonight. You might find a burglar with a cast in his eye."

For once Mr. Renwyck had got the better of his brother-in-law, and the fact pleased him immensely.

"The poor old granny!" he muttered as he went into the house. "Upon my word, I'm astonished at him!"

It may be stated that, contrary to Mr. Corrigan's flat denial, that gentleman did take further interest in the possible burglary, if only to prove his own theory. On the following night three private detectives came out to Irvington and stole separately to the lawyer's house. About 11 o'clock, accompanied by Mr. Corrigan in person, they concealed themselves at various points of vantage on the Renwyck place and awaited developments. The night was damp and gloomy—most excellent weather conditions for a housebreaking party, but with disadvantages for amateur detectives at the advanced age of sixty-one. Beyond a touch of rheumatism Mr. Corrigan bagged nothing, and the morning found him a very disgruntled old gentleman. However, there was a humorous side to the vigil, and with this the old lawyer consoled himself.

"Lord!" he chuckled. "The joke's on me this time, but I wouldn't have Jacob find it out—no, not for a thousand dollars cash."

Meanwhile Mr. Renwyck, having scored decisively on Uncle Michael, enjoyed his dinner as a victor should. He was in the best of spirits, not alone because of his triumph, but because of certain cheerful developments which had come to light at the meeting of the stockholders of his new deep water harbor company. He was so elated over his certain success that he cast out broad hints which were mystifying enigmas to all present with the exception of Richard, who understood only too well. To him they meant the collapse of his father's cherished hopes, while he, a dutiful son, was forced to sit calmly and watch an enemy gloat.

Dinner was scarcely over when callers were announced. They were old friends of the family, claiming the attention of Mr. and Mrs. Renwyck and Miss Schermerly, which left the four young people to their own devices. For this Richard thanked the visitors fervently and wandered with Miss Harriet across the lawn, where they seated themselves on a favorite bench and enjoyed a long and uninterrupted chat. Had Uncle Michael been present instead of sulking in his lonely bachelor home he might have had cause to exchange his frowns for chuckles, in view of the fact that a certain young scamp was assuredly making progress.

The progress was not of tremendous moment, after all, yet Richard forgot

"I don't care whether you lose your diamonds and plate or not."

the troublous harbor company and all else, indeed, besides the lady and himself. Miss Harriet in tugging at a rosebush had wounded her finger with a tiny thorn, and the Texan at once became far more solicitous than he would have been had he himself been gored by the horns of a fractious steer. He found it imperative to examine her hurt by the light of matches which Miss Harriet struck and held in her unwounded hand, and the physician, therefore, required a much longer time than he might have taken under more favorable circumstances. At length he was forced to admit reluctantly that neither was there any danger of lockjaw nor was he studying palmistry, yet as the last match went out he applied a remedy by pressing the afflicted member to his lips.

True, Miss Harriet had snatched her hand away, but she smiled in the darkness and was not half so displeased as she tried to make this impertinent nobleman think. Nor was the impertinent nobleman half so contrite as he might have been, for before they left their seat he had bent his head and kissed her hand again on a certain dimple which had taunted him for several days.

His heart was singing now, and the words he set to music were the words of advice by his eminent counsel, Michael Corrigan:

If ever you hope to find your joy,
You've got to brazen it out, my boy,
For—

And here the heart's song ended abruptly, for Mr. Renwyck was calling them from the steps of the veranda.

"Crofland," he said laughingly as they came into the light, "if you and Harriet have finished your flirtation I'd like you to come into the library for a quiet smoke. There, Harriet," he chided, "you have had this young gentleman to yourself all day. You don't begrudge him to your hard working father for an hour, do you? Kiss me and run along to your nest."

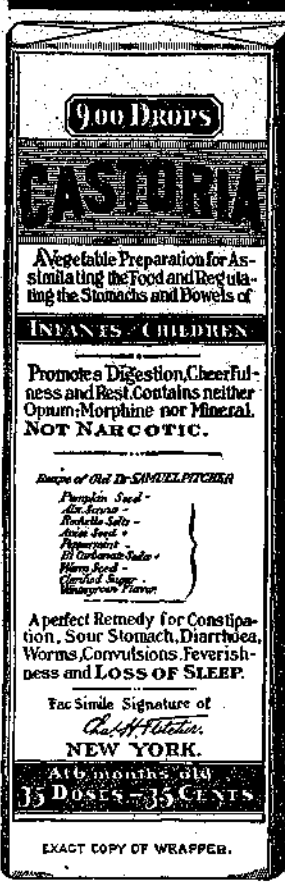
The Texan longed with all his soul to say the same, but was forced to part more formally, at the same time bidding good night to the rest of the little house party, after which he braced himself for an ordeal and followed Mr. Renwyck into the library, wondering what was coming.

(To be continued.)

How He Did It.

"When I was connected with a certain western railway," says a prominent official of an eastern line, "we had in our employ a brakeman who, for special service rendered to the road, was granted a month's vacation.

"He decided to spend his time in a trip over the Rockies. We furnished him with passes.



"He went to Denver and there met a number of his friends at work on one of the Colorado roads. They gave him a good time and when he went away made him a present of a mountain goat.

"Evidently our brakeman was at a loss to get the animal home with him as the express charges were very heavy at that time. Finally, however, hitting upon a happy expedient, he made out a shipping tag and tied it to the horns of the goat. Then he presented the beast to the office of the stock car line.

"Well, that tag created no end of amusement, but it served to accomplish the end of the brakeman. It was inscribed as follows:

"'Please pass the butter. Thomas J. Meechin, brakeman, S. S. and T. Ry.'"

Where the Shoe Pinched.

It was easy for Mr. Randall to bear with his wife's remarkable decision of character at all times, but her obstinacy be found most difficult to endure.

"I can't quite comprehend her," he confided to his brother after one trying experience. "Many years as we have been married, she still surprises me. Why, all in the same day, sometimes in the same hour, she will settle a disturbance in the kitchen, put the children just where they belong, adjust some matter in the church and then, when her judgment ought to be at its best, display the most astounding obstinacy in attempting to regulate my goings out or comings in. It's—it's incomprehensible."

An Ode to His Washerwoman.
From the Bohemian.

Even in the face of financial embarrassment the Yale student refuses to be downcast. For when the florist threatens suit if his bill is not paid or when, in walking through the city streets, the student sees his newest shirt adorning the grinning face of his washerwoman's young unhopeful, it is not his nature to spill a bottle of ink on a dissertation on the Subconscious Relationship of Poverty to Vice. More likely he will go whistling back to the campus and put to the tune some such verses as appeared in The Yale Record of ten years ago under the title, "Owed to My Washerwoman:"

I promise thee that some day I will come
In answer to thy oft repeated dun
And in thy eager hands I then will lay
The dollars ten I've owed for many a day.
I will not censure thee for rips and tears,
For even the socks that now thy husband wears.
Yes, some day in the dim futurity
I'll pay it all, I promise thee.

And so set the whole campus laughing, if not to paying their bills.

—Mr. John Riha of Vining, Ia., says: "I have been selling DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills for about a year and they give better satisfaction than any pilll I ever sold. There are a dozen people here who have used them and they give perfect satisfaction in every case. I have used them myself with fine results." Sold by all druggists.

Harvard and Yale.

In times of athletic rivalry no sentiment expresses the thoughts of a Harvard man better than "To hell with Yale." Dean Briggs of the Faculty and the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, veteran clergyman and chaplain of the United States Senate, once went down to Soldiers Field together at such a time.

"When are you going, Dean?" asked a friend. "To hell with Yale," answered the smiling Briggs patriotically and with diplomacy.

Ant Merchants.

Ant merchants, clad in leather underwear, are to be found in Paris, London and several other European cities. Wherever pheasants are preserved the ant merchant is in demand.

It is not, however, ants, but the eggs of ants, that the man chiefly deals in. From every part of Europe ants are shipped to him, and he keeps them in ant runs—places similar in their nature to chicken runs—and he feeds and tends them carefully, so that their health will keep fine and they will lay generously.

The eggs he packs in wooden boxes and ships to various earls, dukes, counts and other game preserves in different parts of the world. And the ants themselves he slays as soon as they cease to lay, pressing them and selling them in black blocks similar to plug tobacco to dealers in birds and bird food.

It is interesting to be an ant merchant, but leather underwear is essential to the business, as the little creatures bite unmercifully.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Coincidence.

The strange story told by a defaulting debtor of his being recognized after he had been for six years trying to live down the past is not so strange a story as one which came within the ken of Professor Jowett. A good man went wrong, was caught and sentenced at Liverpool to imprisonment. After the sinner had served his term Jowett and others helped him, and he obtained a colonial editorship where his past was unknown. He did well; was a new man. One day a tornado swept off the roof of his office. Under the roof was discovered a batch of old English papers which had been placed there and forgotten after the mail had brought them. He set members of his staff to work to get out of the derelicts anything which might be interesting enough to print. The first thing that they found was a full report of the trial and conviction of the man himself, their editor, at Liverpool all those years before.—St. James' Gazette.

Representative Charles McGavin, Who Would Tax International Marriages—Miss Maud Ashford.

CHARLES M'GAVIN.

THE number of the international marriages that have been solemnized recently is so large that point has been given to the contention of Representative Charles McGavin of Chicago that a tax ought to be placed on the dowries of American heiresses who form unions with titled foreigners. A bill to this effect was introduced not long ago by Representative Sabath, also of Chicago, and in speaking on it Mr. McGavin said he wondered if the pioneers of the country did not turn over in their graves at the spectacle of "so many of the women of this country sacrificing their souls and honor on the altar of snobbery and vice." The house at the time was in committee of the whole on the state of the Union, and Mr. McGavin thought it was opportune to inquire into the general tendency toward "unions." Finding that the bill of Representative Sabath had been referred to the committee on ways and means because it proposed to levy a tax, Mr. McGavin continued:

I was curious to know whether the present tariff schedules included dukes, earls, lords and counts, and, finding that these things were nowhere mentioned, I thought that it might be proper for the customs officer to classify them like frogs' legs or as poultry, for it is the general opinion among Americans that they are a species of geese.

We upon this side of the house have in recent years referred triumphantly to the fact that as between this and other nations the balance of trade was in our favor, but nowhere in the summary can be found a reference to such trades as these, where soiled and frayed nobility is exchanged for a few million American dollars wrung from the limbs of Wall street, with a woman thrown in "to boot."

There was a time when wealthy Americans traveling in Europe were contented with buying costly fabrics and paintings by old masters of whom they knew nothing, but now they want something even more costly, but less valuable. So when the wealthy girls traveling with their parents abroad see some remnant of royalty they enthusiastically exclaim, "Oh, mamma, buy me that!" An interpreter is obtained, the bargain is made, and the money is produced, and the girl is gone, soon to return a sadder but a wiser one.

Mr. McGavin was born in Illinois thirty-four years ago, is a Republican and is serving his second term in congress.

William B. Craig is one of the new congressmen from the south and is also one of the youngest members of the Sixtieth congress. He was born in Selma, Ala., in 1877 and represents the Fourth Alabama district, which includes his native city. He was educated at the grammar schools and high school of Selma and in 1898 graduated from the law department of Cumberland university, Lebanon, Tenn. Before receiving his degree as a bachelor of laws he was for several years employed in the shops of the Southern railway at Selma as a machinist. For the past few years he has practiced law. He married in 1903 Miss Irene Kunst of Weston, W. Va., and has served in the Alabama national guard as private and noncommissioned officer in Troop C, First cavalry, and as captain of Company C, Second infantry.

WILLIAM B. CRAIG.

Miss Maud Ashford, who broke off her engagement to ex-Senator Henry Gassaway Davis of West Virginia to avoid precipitating a quarrel in the latter's family, was at one time a newspaper woman. She was a childhood friend of the daughters of her former fiance, who is a widower, and, while they valued her as a friend, it is said they did not take kindly to the notion of having her for a stepmother. Senator Davis is eighty-four, and Miss Ashford is nearly half a century his junior. The ex-senator is a remarkably well preserved man for his years, however, and when he was the Democratic candidate for vice president in 1904 showed that he still possessed much of the vigor of youth. Senator Davis is supposed to be worth about $30,000,000.

MISS MAUD ASHFORD.

DIFFERENT IDEAS OF A HERO

Nathan Hale as Portrayed by Two Noted American Sculptors.

A short time ago a committee of Yale alumni assembled in the studio of William Ordway Partridge in New York to see the newly completed statue of Nathan Hale by that sculptor which the alumni of the institution propose to offer for the campus of the university. The patriot spy is the chief hero of the famous institution of learning at New Haven. He had the diploma of his alma mater with him on that fateful journey within the enemy's lines on Long Island which ended in his capture by the British and his execution under a warrant by General Howe on Sept. 22, 1776. Near the scene of his execution, in City Hall park, New York, a statue of Hale by Frederick MacMonnies now stands. Upon the pedestal are engraved the immortal words spoken by him as the hangman's noose was about to be adjusted to his neck, "I only regret that I have but one life to give for my country."

STATUE OF NATHAN HALE BY MACMONNIES.

Yale men have long felt that there should be a statue upon the college grounds of an alumnus who did such honor to his alma mater; hence the movement resulting in the execution of this work. Mr. Partridge has studied the subject for ten years and has written a book about the character of Hale and the story of his great sacrifice for country. His statue presents an interesting contrast to that of MacMonnies. Neither had any portrait of Hale upon which to work, for none exists. They had to be guided by the descriptions of the hero which have been handed down and by their own conceptions of his appearance and expression. Each statue has its special admirers. Hale was twenty-one at the time of his cruel death. Perhaps he seems more boyish in the statue by MacMonnies. Partridge has succeeded well in expressing in the features of his Hale the patriotic fervor of the young enthusiast in the cause of the new nation and his athletic qualities. The hero was about six feet tall and could put his hand on a fence as high as his head and clear it with a bound. The spot on the Yale campus where he made the famous jump that marked him as the best all around athlete of the college was shown for years after his time. He is said to have possessed not only ideal proportions, but a grac and charm which endeared him to h he met. Yale men are enthusiasti over the manner in which Mr. Par tridge has met their ideals in the po trayal of Hale and over the historic s well as artistic value of his interpreta tion in sculpture of the hero.

STATUE OF NATHAN HALE BY PARTRIDGE.

The MacMonnies statue of Hale i New York was erected in 1893 by th sons of the Revolution and is consi ered a work of sculpture of the fir rank.

Something has happened to cause the bottom to drop out of the matrimonial market. Is it the stringency in the money market or the stringency of the marriage law?

Resident Engineer Ripley will be able to compress more practical information into his talk before the members of the Citizen's club and their friends relative to barge canal matters than one could glean from days of reading. It is an opportunity not to be lost. The club was indeed fortunate to be able to induce Mr. Ripley to give the address.

Helen Lackaye, who will soon be seen here as the breezy widow Kate Brandon, in "The Heir to the Hoorah," is an example of an actress who has forged to the front by her pluck and inherent talent. Miss Lackaye adopted the stage in direct opposition to the wishes of her parents and her brother, Wilton Lackaye, who had already reached the ranks of stellardom, when she ran away from a convent and secured her first engagement. Miss Lackaye has played many prominent parts in theatrical organizations during the few years of her experience and ranks high among the younger leading women of the American stage.

Clerk and Carrier Examinations

A competitive examination under the rules of the United States Civil Service Commission for the position of clerk or carrier in the Fulton postoffice, will be held on March 25, at 9 a. m. Applications for this examination must be made on the prescribed form, which, with necessary instructions, may be obtained from the Commission's local representative, Miss Elizabeth G. Fassell, at the Fulton postoffice, or from H. N. Saxton, Secretary Civil Service Board, Custom House, New York. Applications will not be accepted unless received by the persons designated before 4.30 p. m., March 20. Secure blanks at once and fill them out in order to allow time for any necessary corrections.

Book Evolution.

"Books" have progressed from the days when they were only wooden rods or bits of bark. For the derivation which connects "book" directly with "beech," both having been "boc" in Anglo-Saxon, is the favorite one. "Buchstaben," the German word for letters of the alphabet, means literally "beech staves." Many book words go back to such vegetable origin. The Latin "liber," a book, whence comes our "library," was properly the inner bark or rind of a tree, especially of papyrus. The Greek "biblion," whence "Bible" and "bibliophile," meant much the same thing. A "codex" was a block of wood, and "leaf" is obvious.

A Compromise.

A private soldier was taken to the guardroom for being intoxicated. He became excited. "Sergeant, am I drunk?" he asked of the "noncom" in charge.

"Yes—take off your boots," was the reply.

"But excuse me, sergeant," the delinquent continued, "I am only half drunk."

"Very well, then—take one boot off!" said his superior.—London Scraps.

Unintentional Sabbath Breaking.

In the early days of New England it was the custom to keep the Sabbath from sundown Saturday night until the same hour on Sunday. That this practice was attended by pitfalls is shown by an incident told in "The Papers of the Connecticut Valley Historical Society:"

There lived in Ryefield a thrifty dame, an enterprising, driving woman and a notable housewife. The good woman was not willing to lose Sunday evenings out of her catalogue of housework, but she was pious withal and strictly kept the day to the sunset limit. As soon as the sun was fairly below the horizon she would begin her washing and get her clothes ready for drying bright and early on Monday morning.

One cloudy Sunday she, supposing the day was ended, changed her Sunday gown, rolled up her sleeves and went to work. As she was scrubbing away in the kitchen, her face toward the west window, the clouds suddenly broke, and the great round sun shone in full on the poor Sabbath breaker at work. She gave one cry of amazement and horror and fled the kitchen.

After that sinful day she never began her work on Sunday evening.

Ink Froze on the Pen.

The winter of 1683-4 in Europe still holds its place as one of the most severe and remarkable on record. So tremendous was the cold that trees split asunder with deafening reports. The strangest sight of all was on the Thames. Here on more than a foot thickness of ice a thoroughgoing town of streets was erected. There were tailors' shops, butchers' shops, tobacconists, printers and, indeed, many other businesses all being carried on as if they had stood there for years.

Writing anywhere but near a large fire was impossible, as the ink froze in pot and on the pen, whole barrels of liquids were frozen solid and wine was sold in one pound blocks. New bread on being taken out of the oven would immediately stiffen and become solid. There were hundreds of deaths from the cold, and throughout the frost the poor suffered miserably.—Pearson's Weekly.

Peculiarity of Madness.

The Board of Fire and Police have adopted a resolution to the effect that the storage of rags in quantities by the several paper companies in the city is dangerous to property and expensive to the city owing to the liability of spontaneous combustion and the length of time necessary to locate the seat of the trouble. A bill will be presented the Volney Paper company for the services of call men during the late fire in their mill.

The Charity ball given on Mondy evening in Church's hall under the auspices of the Acacia Companions—Messrs G.E. Mason, W. H. Hornbrook, J. D. McIntyre and David Katz, was a pronounced social success. The hall was prettily decorated with bunting and roses and the stage on which Kapps' orchestra of Syracuse was seated, was banked with palms and potted plants. An unusually delightfully dancing program was rendered and delicious refreshments were served.

Grey-haired "men of metal" have organized a little side pool tournament to be tried out in the Citizens club and some of the more festive members of the club have disrespectfully dubbed it the "Old Codgers Pool Tournament" To date seven contestants, Messrs G. B. Farley, W. G Morton, S. B. Mead, J. R. Fairgrieve, J. A. Foster, C. M. Allen and G. G. Chauncey have signified their intention to stand-by, come weel or woe. It now behooves the above mentioned contestants to challenge the young lads who so mockingly laugh, and then put it all over them with the cue.

MOCK TRIAL.

"If you want a good entertainment, go to the State Street church."

This is an axiom of Fultonians. The State Street church entertainments are worth attending. When Mr. T. J. Redhead of that society was so strenuously tried last year for disturbing the peace of his neighberhood with his band of grey haired musicians, the parlors were packed to the doors. And now, upon March 13th, 1908, there is to be held another mock trial in the church parlors, practically by the same actors who made such humor for the immense crowd of last year.

There are those in this city who know one Linwood A. Richardson—well known musician in the city band, and celebrated as an Italian composer, the most genial of all our worthy citizens and the best fellow in the bunch, also an officer in the church and one who holds the respect and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact, was a strictly honest man, but it seems that the fellow who went poking around with a lantern has got to keep on a little while longer when it is learned that one night not long since driven from home by the hard times and not seeing any manna falling from heaven to fill the awful cavity known as the celebrated Linwood A., he accidentally fell asleep in the hen-house of a local suburbanite who is known for the rotundity of his broilers, and in the morning when he got home it was found that in his sleep he had a fit of somnambulism, likewise the chickens, although this is the first case on record. Tracks in the snow about the hen-house bore the initials "L. A. R." and now the husky Sherlock Holmes of this city who goes about dressed in the guise of a policeman's "billy" holds a man corresponding to these initials in the city's cells and has scheduled him to be tried at the State Street Church upon March 13th, that there may some good be obtained from him before he is electrocuted The case is attracting wide spread attention and in all probability will draw a large crowd. It will be the best entertainment ever held in State Street Church and attention is called to the fact that but few tickets will remain to be sold upon the night of the affair, so that the church people are requested for their own benefit to secure them as early as possible.

The actors in the farce are well-known to Fultonians, having come before the public eye in similar occasions, prior to this time. The lawyer for the plaintiff is none other than that brilliant wit and gentleman farmer, Mr. Fred A. Vogelgsang of the city of Volney. He is well acquainted with the plaintiff, they having set bulldogs upon boys after chestnuts on their premises, together. This will add zest to his manouver. The counsel for the defendant has been secured at considerable expense and red-tape and after much persuasion, W. Dudley Pelley, who so gloriously defeated his present opponent in the trial of last year, will again this year show to the rising young law-inclined Volneyite that he lays on his back and should turn over. Mr. Pelley expresses his intention now that he has consented to defend his friend of many years standing that he will do his utmost to keep the chickens out of sight and prove to the loaded jury that chickens act to the supposed culprit as an emetic and as doctors come high in this place, the honest Linn A. had no motive for the crime and therefore should be allowed to go free providing that the next time he does it, he is not caught. If the presiding judge of the evening, Hon. Claude A. Guile, imposes too heavy a fine upon the defendant providing it is proved he is guilty, Fultonians are to be called together upon Saturday, the 14th of March, to elect another city attorney, for it is feared the present one will be lost, strayed or stolen.

Before the trial a literary entertainment is to be rendered consisting of the following:

Musical selection . . . . . High School Mandolin Club
Recitation . . . . . Miss Grace Burns
Vocal Solo . . . . . Miss Maryette Flint
Recitation . . . . . Miss Merrill Wells
Musical selection . . . . Mandolin Club

The price of tickets will be 15 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. They will be upon sale at the door or may be secured from any member of the Standard Bearers of the church. A large audience is earnestly requested that the necessary funds may be secured with which to purchase the piano needed.

Salvation Army

Special meetings are still being conducted in the Salvation Army hall by Capt. and Mrs. Jordison. To-night, (Wednesday) Rev. F. A. Miller will preach. Subject for Saturday night: "How to be good looking; Sunday night, "The Verdict." All are welcome. Mrs. Jordison is an interesting speaker and will not fail to help you. Her music, both vocal and instrumental, is of a high order.

If you do not like the job you do not have to take it if it is printed at The Times office, 66 First Street.

Answered.

Two ministerial candidates named Adam and Low preached in a Scottish church. Mr. Low preached in the morning and took for his text, "Adam, where art thou?"

He made a most excellent discourse, and the congregation was much edified. In the evening Mr. Adam preached and took for his text, "Lo, here I am!"

ANNUAL REPORT

Of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Fulton Hospital.

This month completes the fourth year of the existence of the auxiliary and we again meet to look over the work and prepare for the future.

There have been twelve regular meetings and one special during the year at which the attendance of the executive board has been larger and the average general attendance one smaller than that of last year,—namely seventeen. The average attendance of the executive board was fourteen. Twenty-three was the largest number present at any one meeting.

The entertainment committee has been very successful in whatever work was undertaken.

In May the annual supper netted $78.51 more than the one of the previous year.

There were two food sales in October and November and in the latter month the annual donation was held.

The assistance of the Schumann club was secured and a most delightful and profitable entertainment was given, which closed their efforts for the year.

Mite boxes were distributed at the beginning of the year, to be collected before the annual meeting with the hope that the sum thus realized would add materially to the treasurer's report.

In June the ladies decided to establish a building fund to which sums small or large could be added as occasion offered and $100 was set aside as a nucleus for that purpose. In July another $100 was added.

Pins were given to the two nurses who graduated in March and January.

As in the past we have had the help and co-operation of the people of Fulton so in this coming year we hope for a continuance of the same and extend the thanks of the Auxiliary to all who in any way assisted in the work.

MRS. E E. MORRILL,
Recording Scretary.

Mrs. George E. True, Treasurer of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Fulton Hospital, filed the following report for the period between May 1, 1907, and March 1, 1908:

AUCTION SALE.

On Thursday, March 19th, at my home three miles east of Fulton on the Gilberts Mills road, I will sell at public auction, beginning at 10 a. m., five young cows, one pair horses, harness, wagons, sleighs, farming tools, quantity of hay, and a few household goods.

PETER KLEIN.

Business Change.

Photographer W. Harry Langdon has purchased the very desirable business block, No 61 First street, which has for several years been occupied by Col. Wisner. Mr. Langdon proposes to rent the second floor for offices or living rooms, the front store room for business purposes and he will occupy the rear of the building as a studio. Mr. Langdon will remodel the rear rooms into an up-to-date studio with all the modern appliances known to the metropolitan profession.

Mr. Langdon came to this city nine years ago and by applying progressive methods to his work and strictly attending to every detail tending toward the improvement of his productions, he has built up an excellent business, not only catering to the local residents but drawing patronage from a wide territory.

The Times congratulates Mr Langdon upon this evidence of prosperity and upon his acquisition of such a desirable piece of property.

New Grocery Firm.

Mr. E. R. Wilcox has sold his Cayuga street grocery business to Mr. Charles A. Baker of Jacksonville, who has taken possession. Mr. Baker informs The Times that he proposes to conduct a first-class grocery store and he respectfully requests the patronage of the public. He has had considerable experience in the grocery line and knows where and how to buy right.

Mr. Baker and family have leased and are occupying the T. H Webb house in Utica street. A son is associated with the father in business.

Hospital Donations for February.

The Woman's Auxiliary, Fulton Hospital association gratefully acknowledge the receipt of the following articles during February:

Miss Blanche Hall, magazines.

Mrs. R. P. Alger, magazines.

Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co., heating pad.

James Coles, bushel vegetables.

Mrs. C. C. Benedict, Mrs. A. P. Tucker, Mrs. Charles David, Mrs. George Johnston, Mrs M. H. Brando, basket groceries.

Benefit Game.

On Friday evening a double game of basketball will be played in the City Hall for the benefit of the High Scool Athletic association. The association is financially embarrassed through no fault of their own, several northern games having been cancelled on them without due notice. It is therefore hoped and expected that this game will be so liberally patronized that the boys may be placed upon their feet again.

The games on Friday evening will be played between the ex-High school and the High school players and the line-up will be as follows:

Ex-High School—Forwards, Harry Parks, Verner Blake. Center, Jay Hollingsworth. Guards, Clinton Hulett, Glenn Streeter.

High School — Forwards, Bayard Webb, Thomas McCollum. Center, H. Ames. Guards, Frank Morin, Russel Gulle.

Referee—William Stauring.

A preliminary game will be played between the Sophomores and the Freshmen. The High school orchestra will be present and play throughout the evening. The first game will be called at 7.45 sharp. Admission 15 cents.

Buy a ticket whether or not you can attend the game. It will encourage the members of the association and is assisting in maintaining the record of the school.

ENGINEER RIPLEY'S ABLE ADDRESS

Barge Canal Work Made Intensely Interesting to Members of the Citizen's Club and Guests. Stereoptican Views of Completed Work and Other Instructive Pictures.

Wednesday evening two hundred and twenty-five men became the guests of the Citizen's Club of this city. Invitations had been sent out several days previous by the Club's entertainment committee. Messrs. W. G. Morton, B. S. McKinstry, S. B. Mead, T. H. Webb and Dr. E. A. Gladman, the purpose of the "at home" being to hear Resident Engineer T. M. Ripley of the Barge canal office, speak upon the intensely interesting and vital subject, "Barge Canal Work." It would have been much easier for Mr. Ripley to have addressed a company of engineers, men familiar with the technical terms, than it was to make the subject enlightening and interesting to the audience composed of business men, farmers, and men from every walk of life save only and except practical canal men, because the speaker had to interpret as it were, the terms which he used in every day intercourse with his business associates, but he handled the matter in a manner which won for him the hearty commendation and praise from all who were present.

The talk was interspersed with stereopticon views of completed portions of the canal work and other interesting pictures. The evening was fruitful of pleasure and profit for all who attended.

It gratifies the publisher of this paper to reproduce Mr. Ripley's address, for the benefit of its readers who were not present:

THE ADDRESS.

There is considerable encouragement, to an amateur speaker, in knowing his subject, is one of vital interest and even if indifferently presented, the material facts thereof will command, at least, a portion of his audience's attention. Of such interest is the subject, a branch of which is to be presented to you.

With the knowledge gained in the past few years, knowledge common to all of us, it would be difficult to name a subject of more vital importance to the material well being of our country, than adequate means of transportation.

The main reason for my being before you this evening is to show, pictorially, what has been done on the Barge Canal, but it is only fair to this grand work being done, to introduce these pictures with a short resume of what made them possible.

Not go into a lengthy historical essay on canals and tell you when Egypt, China, Rome, Spain, India, France, Germany, England, etc., etc., built their first canals, why or how much they cost. If that was done there would be no time remaining for the pictures.

It is desirable, however, to sketch the acts immediately preceding the responsibility for the law under which the present work is being done and touch upon one or two points of the law itself.

Neither will it be amiss to state briefly what our neighbors have done, what is their standing.

The history of our own canal system is almost a history of our State. Work and legislation thereto has touched in greater or less degree every State Department. The canals with their connecting and connected rivers and lakes, beyond doubt, for the greater part of our Commonwealth. Along the main artery, the trunk line is situated, like golden beads upon a silvery thread, the populous line of cities and towns, of which any state can boast.

The spinning of the thread was not begun or finished, excepting as are other works of like or lesser magnitude. From its inception, the scheme had its opponents, and its birth was no less a labor, than that at the time it was born again. But, to the glory and honor, as well as to the gain of our State, the scheme prospered. When it was built, it was enlarged, an abortive attempt was made to again enlarge it, and lastly, a plan was adopted and is now under way to construct a waterway undreamed of a generation ago; a waterway to be navigated by 1,000 ton barges with locks large enough to pass one of 3,000 tons burden and the work to cost $101,000,000.00. Stupendous!

New York has been and is, pre-eminently, the Canal State, although at one time, and that time may come again, she had a close rival in the State of Ohio.

Our sister state closely followed New York's lead and in 1825 began the construction of a system that eventuated in more than 800 miles of canals. These were constructed of exactly the width and depth of prism as our own. The growth of the tonnage and the revenue on this system was all that could be desired up to the year 1860.

In the year 1861 Ohio leased her canals for a period of ten years and renewed that lease in 1871. The lessees abandoned their contract and the canals came again into the State's possession in 1875; a wreck of their former greatness.

During sixteen years the lessees paid, as rental, $3391,227.60, equal to an annual payment of $20,702.34.

But during that period the State spent $174,015.77, plus a portion of the $99,224.14 spent in the year 1878. Assuming that only about 20 per cent of this 1878 expenditure was made prior to May 1st (ordinarily the major portion would have been spent during that time), would make the expenditure by the State during the life of her canal lease, $200,000.00. This amount deducted from the payments on the lease and averaged for sixteen years gives a net annual income to the State of $8,202.34; $8,202.34 rental per year for over 800 miles of canals, $16.40 per mile; $8,202.34 rental for the use of $16,000,000.00 property; one twentieth of one per cent. A black chapter in the history of Ohio canals; its only palliating feature being that it began in the darkest days of our Nation's history.

The year had brought business to many lines, almost to a standstill. Whether it was a lack of faith or of confidence, I shall not attempt to say.

For the sixteen years prior to 1861, the average yearly net revenue had been $1,229,009.

From 1861 to 1895, the gross receipts on the Ohio canals were $16,000,000.00; total expenditure, $12,000,000.00, and net earnings, $4,000,000.00. This, too, in view of the fact that in no year since 1880 have the receipts equalled the expenditures. Until the lessees returned to the State a dilapidated canal system, and that that system has been out of date for forty years.

Its hard to lift a canal.

Including in our own State, I wish first to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. Noble Whitford, compiler of the "History of New York Canals," which now forms a part of State Engineer's report for 1906.

A table in this history contains 14 canals and navigable streams. The State Auditor's report for 1895, just following the abolishing of tolls, shows that seven of these fourteen have been operated at a loss and seven at a profit. The Oswego canal was one of the latter.

The revenues from these fourteen waterways amounted to $135,415,325; cost of construction, $78,655,389.93, cost of operation, $48,529,286.99. Therefore the revenues were in excess of cost of construction and operation to the amount of $8,263,447.15.

Allowing that the canals were worth in 1882, what they had cost, and this is certainly fair in view of the financial showing and from the fact that enlargements, etc., are included in that cost, leaves gross earnings of $85,019,038.11.

Now let us look at it from another point of view, viz: that the canals were worth only their operation, then by deducting their total cost from earnings leaves a balance in their favor of $56,782,744.17.

On these figures was based the argument, that if the canals were of enough value to sustain themselves, pay their total cost of construction and yet leave a balance of over eight million dollars when operating under a toll system, that they would be of greater value to the State if tolls were removed and navigation made free and unrestricted. Moreover, at the time tolls were abolished, several of the canals, which had operated at a loss and been abandoned.

While Ohio's canals were being operated under lease to their ruin, those in New York were being enlarged. Again in 1880, an enlargement was urged, and the sentiment of that time culminated in what is known as the $5,000,000.00 work. The nine million dollars was done, but the "work" was not.

Following this attempted enlargement, there was appointed, by Governor Black, from my Albany knight, used to amuse (was so lovable as to stop work on the capitol) by him I say "was appointed the "New York Commerce Commission."

The legislative acts, under which this commission was appointed, conferred authority "to examine into the commerce of New York, the cause of its decline and the means for its revival."

Mr. Roosevelt followed Mr Black as Governor and continued the "Commerce Commission."

This Commission's final report was published in 1900 and I desire to quote several paragraphs therefrom, which bear upon the immediate subject.

On page 67 is the following:

"During the last quarter of a century, the commerce of the canals has steadily declined in volume and value, and this decline has been attributed by some, to indicate that the canals have outlived their usefulness; that they are obsolete; that they have been superceded by the railroads; that they are no longer a factor in rate making in competition with other routes of transportation; that their further improvement and their maintenance is a heavy burden upon the taxpayers of the State; and that they should either be abandoned, or turned over to the Federal Government, in order in the latter case, that the future enlargement and maintenance may be borne by the whole country, upon the claim, by some alleged, that the benefits of New York's canals are enjoyed only by those outside of the State.

"The testimony presented to this Commission during the course of its investigation is conclusive against such contentions. At the terminal points, where the business conducted upon the canals originates and terminates, those engaged therein have unitedly testified to the usefulness of the canals, and have presented convincing reasons why they should be further improved. This is even true of those who came to prove that the canals had outlived their usefulness and had been supercseded by the railroads. The agents of railroads patrolling and competing with the canals were the most effective witnesses in proving the comparative economy of canal transportation even with the present inadequate canal."

On page 72:

"There is nothing in the history of New York's canals to show that the people of this State are prepared to turn them over to the Federal Government. On the contrary, there is much to indicate that the great mass of the people of this State are still anxious to retain, maintain and improve their own canals. One has but to go back to the year 1882 to find a vote of the people, which vote, by a majority exceeding 322,000, forever thereafter freed the canals from all tolls, accompanied by the declaration at the same time that the canals should never be sold, leased, or abandoned, but that they should remain the property of the State forever. By a majority of over 115,000 the people of this State in 1894 adopted a separate amendment to the constitution of the State, providing for the improvement of the canals in such manner as the Legislature may direct. In the succeeding year the Legislature, directed by law that the Erie, Oswego and Champlain canals should be deepened throughout 4x56 feet beyond their then existing depths and that the unlengthened locks on the Erie and Oswego canals should all be lengthened to accommodate the passage of boats in pairs through the locks at one lockage. By a majority exceeding 276,000, the people approved of that act at the general election of 1895. That was the last time the people had opportunity to express their will concerning the canals of the State. That the amount appropriated by the State to carry out that improvement, was quite inadequate to the undertaking, does not justify the abandonment of that plan of improvement, until, at least, the people have again been permitted to indicate their will with regard to their canals."

On page 73:

"It has been asserted that before the nine million dollar improvement was undertaken State officers had esti-

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

A fire drill was held in the High school Monday. The 775 students left the building in excellent order, the time being 2 minutes and 15 seconds.

The High school basketball team defeated the Walton High school team in the fastest and best exhibition of basketball seen here this season. After the game started the way the locals played their positions showed that they were bound to win. After about five minutes of play, a foul on the part of Walton gave the first score to the home team. Fulton maintained the lead throughout the game although their opponents were close upon them several times. Webb and Gulle for the Fulton team and Morrow of Walton were the stars of the game. The final score was 25 to 15

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. C. J. Bacon, who was to have been hostess, the regular meeting of Kayendatsyona Chapter, D. A. R., was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Foster, West First street, Monday afternoon. Chapter Regent Miss Alice Schenck being ill and unable to be present, and the two vice regents being absent, the meeting was presided over very efficiently by the Recording Secretary, Miss Jennie T. Osgood. The Treasurer, Mrs. Foster, reported an addition of fair proportion to our monument fund from the Kiernan recital.

A letter was read from Mrs. T. D. Lewis who has been visiting in New York for several weeks, stating that she and her daughter Sara, attended the wedding of Miss Bessie McLean and Lieu. William Dallon on Tuesday of last week. Miss McLean is the daughter of Mrs. Donald McLean, the President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution and a military wedding was held. One of the Chapters of New York City gave her as a wedding present, a life membership in that Chapter, and a handsome recognition pin set with jewels. The Fulton Chapter was invited to the wedding and the Resent sent cards to Mrs. Lewis, thus enabling her to go as a representative of our Chapter.

The subject of the paper for this month was "The Story of the Declaration of Independence." "The Signers of the Declaration of Independence," and was given by Mrs. A. P. Bradt. After refreshments, the meeting was adjourned to meet April 13th at the home of Mrs. F. L. Sears, Worth street.

State Convention.

To the Republican Electors of the State of New York:

The Republican electors of the State of New York and all other electors without regard to past political affiliations who believe in the principles of the Republican party and endorse its policies, are hereby requested to send delegates to the State convention to be held at Carnegie hall, in the City of New York, on Saturday, the eleventh day of April, 1908, at eleven o'clock a. m., to elect four delegates at large and four alternates at large to the National convention to be held at Chicago, Ill., on June 16, 1908, and to nominate two Presidential electors at large and one Presidential elector for each Congressional district; to elect a State committee and transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

Each Assembly district in the State will be entitled to representation in accordance with the basis established by the State convention of 1885. A schedule of representation is hereunto annexed showing the number of delegates to which the several Assembly districts are entitled.

TIMOTHY L. WOODRUFF,
Chairman.
LAFAYETTE B. GLEASON,
Secretary.

(Oswego county is entitled to 12 delegates.)

He Was Not a Dumpling.

Some years ago the lord chancellor of England was cross examining a shrewd bucolic witness.

"They sometimes call you a Devonshire dumpling, don't they?" asked the genial advocate.

"I believe they do," replied the witness.

"But you are not a Devonshire dumpling?"

The witness waited till the laughter occasioned by this inquiry subsided, then he slowly drawled out:

"Hey, but if I hod been a doompling you lawyers 'ud 'a' gobbled I up afore now!"

Charmless Music.

The man had just reached home after a heavy day's work at the office and was resting himself in his easy chair for a few minutes before partaking of tea. Little Jim, his youngest son, had climbed upon the paternal knee and was relating to his father the events of the day. "And, oh, father," said the boy, "won't you show me your fiddle some day?"

"I have no fiddle, my boy," answered the fond parent.

"Oh, yes, you have, papa," returned the boy, "for I heard mamma telling Mrs. Strongwill this afternoon that ever since she married you you had played second fiddle!"

Her 'Art Was Right.

Mrs. H. had a warm hearted and industrious but careless servant, who broke so many dishes that her mistress one day said to her: "Really, Ellen, I think I must take the price of the dishes you are breaking out of your wages. Don't you think you would be more careful if I did?"

"Hi might, ma'am," replied Ellen contritely, "but Hi think, ma'am, it'd be better to take it out of my 'ide."

"Out of your hide? Why, what do you mean?"

"Hi, mean, ma'am, that if you broke my 'ead hevery time Hi broke a cup or a saucer Hi'd mind myself better."

One day poor Ellen fell her full length on the kitchen floor with a gallon pan of milk in her hands. Her shrieks of dismay brought Mrs. H. in great haste to the kitchen. There lay Ellen in the pool of milk, making no effort to rise.

"Knock me in the 'ead, ma'am! Knock me in the 'ead!" she wailed.

"Oh, get up, Ellen! Get up and mop up this milk. This accident is more a fault of your heels than your head."

"You speak the truth, ma'am," replied the weeping Ellen. "If my 'eels 'ad been where my 'art is this never would 'ave 'appened, for Hi mean right in my 'art, ma'am, no matter what Hi does with my 'ead and my 'eels."—London Scraps.

Thrifty.

Two Scottish women were arguing which of them was the more thrifty.

First Woman—Dae ye see that purse? Weel, that's my first ane, an' it's as guid as the day I got it. Ye canna come up to that, noo.

Second Woman—Mighty me! Whit a poor boast! Ye ken Dugald, my husband?

"Oh, aye. What aboot him?"

"Weel, he's ma first man, an' noo you've got yer third, so dinna preach thrift to me again."

Somewhat Mixed.

Margaret Durham was the latest arrival at Miss Simmons' select boarding school, and, being pretty and well dressed, she was popular.

Would she be an usher at the monthly musicale? Margaret was horribly shy. She never could do it—oh, never! But the chosen five elected her for the sixth, so the evening found her a perfect flutter of white frills and pink bows (this was the pink musicale) awaiting to receive the early comers. Each of the hardened five bore forward an imposing auditor, and Margaret found herself inquiring of a very ancient and elegant old gentleman in a voice scarcely audible, "Sir, shall I show you to a seat?"

"What, what, what?" demanded the elderly party irascibly, holding his hand to his ear.

"Sir," screamed the flustered novice, "shall I sew you to a sheet?"

Then five lace handkerchiefs were crammed into five tittering mouths, while Miss Margaret bolted from the scene of her discomfiture, and the five were left to do the honors.—Harper's Weekly.

Boom of Governor Fort, New Jersey.

THE recent inaugural address of Governor John Franklin Fort of New Jersey, in which he made recommendations to the legislature of the commonwealth regarding regulation of large corporations, has directed national attention to that executive. His utterances on this subject are understood to have received emphatic approval from President Roosevelt, and when not long after the publication of the address Governor and Mrs. Fort and Everett Colby, the New Jersey reformer, were guests of the president and his wife at dinner at the White House the tongue of gossip started wagging over the possibility of a Republican ticket being made up reading Taft and Fort.

Governor Fort has been hailed as a reformer of a conservative type. In his inaugural address he advocated the passage by the New Jersey legislature of a public utilities law "that will meet all the demands of the most advanced thought upon governmental regulation of public utility corporations." In discussing the subject he said: "The time has come for the strict supervision of these great corporations and the limitation of their stock and bond issues under some proper public official. It will make for conservatism and strengthen the companies doing a legitimate business and eliminate those merely speculative in character."

Governor Fort belongs to a family which claims as its ancestors some of the earlier settlers of New Jersey. It was in 1677 that Roger Fort came to America in the good ship 'Kent. He was with the first party of Quakers who laid the foundations of Burlington. One trunk contained all his worldly possessions, and this trunk the pioneer Fort thought so much of that in his will, still on file in the statehouse at Trenton, he made special mention of it, referring to it as his "English live oak trunk," and signifying that he intended it to be handed down from generation to generation. It has already passed through the hands of six representatives of the family. For a time it disappeared, but recently was discovered by Attorney John Fort of

GOVERNOR JOHN FRANKLIN FORT AND HIS ANCESTOR'S TRUNK.

Camden on a farm near the old Fort homestead, at Pemberton, which has now passed out of the family. The trunk is carved with French designs and bears the initials "R. F.," and the date "1669," which is supposed to have referred to the year in which the pioneer reached his majority. Roger Fort did not stop with the Quakers at Burlington, but carved a path through the wilderness and along the banks of the Rancocas laid out a plantation for which he later received a grant from the crown.

Members of the Fort family fought in the Revolution, and Governor Fort is president of the Sons of the American Revolution of New Jersey. He is not the first of his family to occupy the executive office of the state, as his father's brother, George I. Fort, was governor from 1851 to 1854. The present governor, who was born in 1852, a year after his uncle assumed office, went to see the latter when his schooling was finished and he was starting out in the law and asked his advice. The ex-governor counseled him to settle in Jersey City and become a Democrat as that was the only party through which in New Jersey he could hope to secure political preferment. The future governor said he was willing to go to Jersey City, but he could not become a Democrat, as he was convinced of the truth of the principles of the Republican party. While a pupil of the Pemberton academy young Fort was under the instruction of Charles E. Hendrickson, and on one occasion was kept after school to perform a certain task and was so slow about it that the impatient teacher declared the only thing his head would ever be good for would be a butcher's block. Some years later pupil and instructor were associates on the supreme bench of the state and had a good laugh when the incident of school days was recalled.

Governor Fort attended the Albany Law school and had for a roommate the late Democratic candidate for the presidency, Alton B. Parker. He is married and has three children. In the Republican convention of 1896 he nominated Garret A. Hobart for the vice presidency. His friends say it would be singularly appropriate should he be nominated for that office himself.

Digests What You Eat

Lived on the Spineless Cactus.

Is cactus good to eat? Yea, verily, says Dr. Leon M. Landone of Los Angeles, who has lived well for two weeks at a stretch on cactus exclusively. Dr. Landone subsisted upon the spineless cactus developed by Luther Burbank, the California fruit and vegetable wizard. For ten years Mr. Burbank patiently experimented with the pesky cactus of our great deserts, which is covered with perilous stickers like quills upon the fretful porcupine, so that man or beast avoids it instinctively. Burbank believed that by patient cultivation he could eliminate the spines. He has done so, producing a very gentle and harmless breed of cactus that can be caressed with the naked fingers without injury.

Dr. Landone, being a scientific investigator, proposed to ascertain if the spineless cactus would sustain human life, and he proved that it would. At first he lost a little weight, but later he regained the loss, and at the end of the fortnight's novel diet he was very fine and fit. During those two weeks he did much mental and manual labor without feeling any more fatigue than he feels when doing similar work under a general diet.

The spineless cactus is no better food than the spined cactus. It is merely safer and more comfortable eating. The only reason why cattle on the great plains where cacti grow have not eaten them to their fill these many years is the reason eliminated by Burbank—the spine. Indians and some white men have eaten cactus and found it palatable and nutritious. Now that the Burbank brand of stickerless cactus bids fair to become general in time if properly cultivated, it is believed that the problem of cattle grazing on the semiarid desert areas of our great west and southwest will be solved by the simple matter of letting the cows and steers eat cactus when the grass runs out or when they prefer cactus to grass.

On the far western deserts the cactus grows to a bulk of 600 pounds in three years. Every pound is said to make excellent food for man or beast. The lonesome mining prospector or "desert rat," otherwise the man who lives in the desert because he likes it, will find a new food right at hand. There are various species of cacti. The plants grow in any climate this side of the frigid zone. Millions of acres of land which, unirrigated, will produce nothing else may be cultivated to cactus, thus adding billions of dollars to the national wealth—if the food claims of the spineless cactus as reported are substantiated in actual test.

While it is not at all likely that the average man will care to confine his diet to the cactus plant, Dr. Landone's successful experiment is valuable as showing that in case of emergency one need not starve so long as cacti abound. The prospector lost on the desert whose food supply runs out may preserve life until succor comes or until he reaches friends and food by plucking and preparing cactus for his palate. The prickly pear which the plant bears, heretofore so near and yet so far because of the stickers, seems destined to render desert life much less perilous than heretofore.

It is asserted by some students of the matter that Mr. Burbank's spineless cactus triumph will prove in the end to be of greater material benefit to the semiarid regions than will any other of his marvelous productions in the vegetable and fruit world. Granting such importance as this, the experiment of Dr. Landone may be looked upon as a serious contribution to scientific knowledge and in nowise as a mere freak undertaken for purposes of notoriety. Despite this fact, however, a wag asserts that the doctor has shown that he possesses a good deal of backbone by living for two weeks on spineless cactus.

Mr. Burbank has got the cactus plant to a stage where he can dive into it headlong, taking the great leaves and rubbing his face and hands against them without any injury to himself whatever. On the section of his farm devoted to the cactus he is able to show the visitor the plant in its various stages of evolution from its original prickly condition to that in which it appears as a plant capable of harming no one. Step by step the plant loses its thorns, like a conscious, intelligent being gradually dropping off crudities and superfluities to emerge into a state approaching as near as possible to perfection.

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers. Even the untutored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, imparted freely to the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases, if we would properly investigate them; and in confirmation of this conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, blood cleanser known to medical science. Dyspepsia or indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action. The reason why it cures these and many other affections, is clearly shown in a little book of extracts from the standard medical works which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., to all sending request for the same.

Not less marvelous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar, affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of unsolicited testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrhal pelvic drains, painful periods, irregularities, prolapsus and other displacements, caused by weakness, ulceration of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines and physicians had failed.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wholly made up from the glyceric extracts of native, medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried on by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle-wrapper.

Some Knowledge Profound.

Nobody knows how noble it is to know. But if you do not know, and nobody knows that you do not know, and you know that nobody knows that you don't know, it is very pleasant to know that they don't know that you don't know that they don't know that you don't know. No man knows how much he really knows until he knows how much other people know that he doesn't know. To "know thyself" is really all there is worth knowing, and since no man really knows himself and there is no other knowledge worth knowing and we do not know the only thing worth knowing we really know nothing. But to know that we know nothing is knowledge greater than the knowledge that some people think they have when they really know nothing and think they know something. Therefore it is greater to know nothing and know it than to think we know something when we know nothing. So if you know nothing and you think you do, and I know nothing and don't think I do, I know more than you. It is therefore well that we know that we don't know.—Exchange.

A Breakfast in Siberia.

"I spent two weeks in the hut of a Siberian savage a prisoner to the black frost," said an explorer. "Shall I ever forget those two weeks? No, no! A Siberian breakfast comes to my mind. We took it lying on our stomachs round a kind of pie board, which was our table. The first dish was frozen weeds dipped in seal oil and served with large chunks of fresh blubber. The second dish was raw walrus. The third dish was walrus hide, an inch thick and hairy. You swallowed it whole, for it was too tough to chew. Dinner was breakfast over again plus a hot meat, seal or reindeer, after the hide course. Supper consisted of cold blubber and cold hide served with seal oil. Don't wrinkle your nose and shudder. In that intense cold, the thermometer never above 40 degrees below zero, I liked that greasy food. You should have seen me munching away at great soft yellow balls of fat similar to duck fat."

ELLEN BEACH YAW.

The "California Lark" and Her Unusually Romantic Career.

Ellen Beach Yaw, who is a member of the Metropolitan Opera company this season, is sometimes called the "California Lark." She has a very high voice and one of extraordinary range. Her home is in California, where she has spent most of her life, though she was born near Buffalo, and it was in Buffalo that she made her debut. That was about nine years ago, but for some six years of the time Miss Yaw was absent from this country while studying under foreign masters and making a name for herself in France and Italy and other countries of Europe as an operatic singer. In Italy she appeared under the name of Mlle. Elvanna, an adaptation of Ellen and Yaw, more acceptable to the musical tongue of Italy than her real name. In private life she is Mrs. Vere Goldthwaite, a name perhaps even more musical than Mlle. Elvanna. Her marriage took place about a year ago and was the culmination of quite a romance. There is a story that her husband heard her sing first when she was a young girl and a visitor to a western mining camp. He had gone from a Boston home to the west and became a cow puncher. He formed a slight acquaintance with her then and was much impressed—in fact, so much that he joined "Buffalo Bill's" band in order to get a chance to go to Europe, where she was studying music. There he met her again, but she was devoted to her art and asked him to wait. Returning to Massachusetts, he settled down to the study of law, entered the bar, built up a practice and also became known as a writer on music and art. At last his suit for the hand of the beautiful singer was successful.

Miss Yaw was chosen to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" at the McKinley memorial exercises in Paris in 1902, and a great demonstration followed her song.

GEORGE L. LILLEY.

Author of the Resolution to Investigate a Submarine Boat Company.

George Leavens Lilley, congressman at large from Connecticut, suddenly became a figure of national interest when he introduced his much discussed resolution for congressional investigation of the Electric Boat Company of New Jersey and its relations with certain members of the house naval affairs committee. He was quoted as saying that some men on the committee, both Republicans and Democrats, had been "fixed" by the boat building company through contributions to campaign funds. Congressman Lilley vigorously denied that he had made such charges when protest was entered by the chairmen of the respective committees, Messrs. Sherman of New York and Griggs of Georgia. Nevertheless he stuck to his resolution for an investigation by congress in spite of pressure to withdraw it. He claimed that the resolution reported by the naval affairs committee for the purchase of eight new submarine boats for the navy virtually delivered the contract into the hands of the Electric Boat company and made other charges alleging the use by the boat company of improper methods to influence legislation.

Mr. Lilley is serving his third term in congress. He was born in Oxford, Mass., in 1859 and educated in the common schools of Oxford, at the Worcester (Mass.) High school and the Worcester Polytechnic institute. He settled in Waterbury, Conn., in 1881 and has since resided there. He is a bank director and has served on the Republican state committee and in the state legislature.

Pianos! Pianos!

I am showing a line of Pianos of such worth that when you inspect and hear them, you will be surprised at the price I place upon them. The very best Pianos in the country are represented on my show-room floor, and I have placed panic prices upon them all—Let me substantiate this claim.

If you contemplate purchasing a Piano within the next five years, it will be to your advantage to talk with me about it at once.

PRETTY BILLIE BURKE.

She Has Captivated Theater Goers on Both Sides of the Ocean.

Miss Billie Burke, who is winning praise as leading woman with John Drew in "My Wife," has captured audiences on both sides of the ocean by her beauty and cleverness rather than by any extraordinary qualities in her acting. She is what the British call "fetching" and has such a charming, unaffected, almost childlike manner on the stage that her auditors often forget to inquire of themselves whether they like her acting or not. She is sometimes spoken of as an English actress, but she was born in Washington and is a daughter of William E. Burke of the former vaudeville team of Burke and Andrews. Her first name is Ethelberta, but having acquired the pet name of Billie it has stuck to her. It was about five years ago that Miss Burke set London swelldom and the music hall habitues talking about her hit in "My Little Canoe," a song introduced in "The School Girl" by its composer, Leslie Stuart, also the composer of "Florodora." The refrain of the song runs:

MISS BILLIE BURKE.

Mamie, I've a little canoe,
Room for me, my Mamie and you.
I'll paddle along and rock you in my cradle,
Mamie, you've nothing to do
When I've told my worries to you.
Then, Mamie, we might canoodle, we two,
In my little canoe.

Miss Burke soon had all London humming the tune of the song. She graduated from the music hall to the operatic stage and in 1905 made a success in a musical lyric called "The Blue Moon." Speaking of why she is called Billie, the actress once said:

"I happened to come of a literary family. My grandmother was one of the first women to write on the question of slavery. That is why, I presume, they took it into their heads to call me Ethelberta. As soon as I grew old enough to think of it I wished to chop it down to Ethel. Unfortunately, however, my best chum was named Ethel, and the Billie came about as a survival of the fittest, and—there you are."

An Irish Tale.

One day an Irishman, having put his hat upon a gate post by which he lay down to sleep, sprang up at midnight and, mistaking the object for an enemy, dealt it a desperate cut with his scythe. Perceiving his mistake, the man gave thanks to heaven that he had taken it off before lying down. "For," said he, "had my head been in that hat, 'tis ten to one I had laid it open with my scythe, and 'tis a dead man I would have been seein' mesilf at this minute!"—London Captain.

Not Far to Go.

The reporter hurried up to the scene of the accident. A workman engaged on some scaffolding had missed his footing and had fallen many feet into the street below. Then the reporter went off to interview the unfortunate man, who luckily had escaped with a very severe shaking and a few nasty bruises, and asked sympathetically:

"Did you have vertigo, my man?"

"Oh, no, sir; only about thirty-five feet. Quite far enough for me, though."—Pearson's.

Sensible Dog.

"Talking about the intelligence of animals," said young Kanebiter, "why, I have a dog up at the farm that's simply wonderful."

"How so?" said Pitken.

"Why, you see, I was out shooting one day when I found a large, handsome dog lying on the ground moaning with pain. Some ruffian had shot it in the leg. I carried it home, bandaged the wound and finally cured the poor beast. Some months after that I was compelled to travel a lonely road after dark, when suddenly Ponto, who accompanied me, growled warningly. The next moment a highwayman stepped out of the bushes and put a pistol to my head."

"Ah," cried the listener, "I see! Thereupon the grateful dog seized the robber by the throat."

"Not at all. The man robbed me easily enough—took watch, purse, everything."

"But Ponto?"

"Ran off as fast as his legs would carry him. That's the point—don't you see? Animal instinct—didn't want to get shot again."—Illustrated London News.

Need of Covers While Asleep.

"The reason it is necessary to be well covered while sleeping," said a physician in giving some advice to a patient, "is that when the body lies down it is the intention of nature that it should rest, and the heart especially should be relieved of its regular work temporarily. That organ makes ten strokes a minute less than when the body is in an upright posture. This means 600 strokes in sixty minutes. Therefore in the eight hours that a man usually spends in taking his night's rest the heart is saved nearly 5,000 strokes. As it pumps six ounces of blood with each stroke, it lifts 30,000 ounces less of blood in the night's session than it would during the day when a man is usually in an upright position. Now, the body is dependent for its warmth on the vigor of the circulation, and as the blood flows so much more slowly through the veins when one is lying down the warmth lost in the reduced circulation must be supplied by extra covering."

Cigar Cutters and Disease.

"No," said the Sixth avenue tobacconist, "I have no cigar cutters in my store. They're too much a menace to the public health. How? Why, every man who buys a cigar cuts the end of it off in a cutter if he sees one on the counter, but that isn't all. He has a habit of putting the end of the cigar in his mouth first, thus wetting it and preventing the dry tobacco leaf from splitting too much. If the man is afflicted with tuberculosis or any other disease, he may transfer germs to the cutter, and the next man who sticks his cigar in there to cut off the end gets them on his cigar, and in this way to his mouth."—New York Press.

THE FULTON TIMES

[Entered as second class matter, April 12, 1882, at the postoffice at Fulton, New York, under the act of Congress of March, 3, 1879.]

E. K. HUGHES, Editor
W. E. HUGHES, Proprietor

Issued Every Wednesday at No. 66 South First street, Fulton, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH, 11, 1908

The endorsement of Governor Hughes's candidacy for the Presidency was unanimously made at the meeting of the Republican State committee in session in New York city last week. In introducing the resolution Committeeman Knuckle of Brooklyn truthfully and well said: "We have in our White House today a great man, a man who has blazed a way, a man who by his efforts and accomplishments has electrified the world and shed luster upon us. He has dug deep into the morass of things that have sapped at the vitality of the nation. Let us call this man the pathmaker. We have among us another man fully capable of carrying out the great Policies of President Roosevelt—a man of calm judgment, who will bind up any wounds that may have been made and by his clear sightedness and deliberation will complete the great work that our President has begun. We have had the pathmaker; let us name him peacemaker. We need have no fear of praising the one and endorsing the other." The name of Governor Hughes was then presented the committee.

The entertainment committee of the Citizens club is to be congratulated upon the success of the "at home" given by the club last week. Mr. Ripley's talk was most enjoyable. The club is fast growing in membership and the tone is kept high. Few cities can boast of so truly representative an organization as the Fulton Citizens Club.

The Times readers have complied with the new postal law relative to the shutting out from the mails of papers upon which the subscription is past due. Several others have failed to discharge their obligation. May we hope for a prompt settlement of the matter by a remittance?

With that perfect mastery of itself and its methods which has always characterized the Republican party and made it the efficient political entity that it is, it now purposes to arrange programme for the work preliminary to tariff revision. The tariff commission scheme of Senator Beveridge has been flatly and emphatically rejected. There is to be no blare of trumpets, no beating of bass drums about the matter, but before Congress adjourns the Finance Committee of the Senate and the Ways and Means Committee of the House will have been authorized to hold sessions during the recess and to take such steps as they deem expedient in view of the approching readjustment of the tariff schedules. The President, also, will do his part by appointing a committee of Treasury officials who will prepare a report embodying such changes in the administrative portion of the law as experience has demontrated to be advisable. When Congress meets again, next December, everything will be in readiness for prompt and expeditious action and before the industries have had time to feel any disquieting effects the work will have been accomplished.

It is entirely natural that there should be dismay in the Democratic camp over the news that the Republican party purposes to undertake, next winter, the revision of the tariff. The lowering of the Dingley schedules has been the one practical plank with which the Democratics hoped to appeal to the country. And now they are bereft of that. Moreover, every thinking revisionist, even in the Democratic party, must vote the Republican ticket if he is true to his convictions. He must realize that even if there were elected a Democratic President and a Democratic House the Senate would remain "hopelessly Republican for at least another administration," and that under such circumstances any tariff measure would result only in a deadlock. If he really wants a tariff revision, therefore, he must vote for a Republican President and a Republican Congressman.

Wilmot Atkinson has fooled the country with a pamphlet condemning the laws governing second class mail matter. The constitution provides for the freedom of the press and from that Mr Atkinson argues that Congress has no right to say what are and what are not legitimate newspapers and therefore entitled to the use of the mails at pound rate. The logic of Mr. Atkinson's argument is that every advertising sheet, every newspaper published solely to exploit a mail-order house, etc., should be carried the same as a newspaper, because the constitution forbids Congress to discriminate. But why does not his logic go a step farther? If Congress has no right to say what is a legitimate newspaper and therefore entitled to newspaper postage, how has it any right to prescribe any postage rate at all?

Police Capture Burglar.

During the winter several petty burglaries have occurred in different sections of the city which were so evidently done by an amateur that the policemen and the parties burglar-visited believed the work to have been done by boys. Chief Ross and the patrolmen have been on the alert with the result that on Saturday night Verner H. Austin, aged 29, a resident of the West Side, was apprehended in the act of cutting through a panel in the back door of the S. D. Wells shoe store. As soon as Patrolmen Hartigan and Blodgett flashed a light upon the man he darted from the alleyway back of the row of stores and ran out on Cayuga street. The officers followed swiftly and overhauled the fleeing man on the upper bridge. When searched he was found to have on his person several articles which were identified as having been taken from the McRae hardware store the night previous. Austin was arraigned before Judge Spencer on Monday and plead guilty to attempted burglary of the S. D. Wells shoe store. He was held in the sum of $2,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The second arraignment was on the charge of having broken into the McRae store and taking therefrom $2.79 in cash and several articles. He was held in $2,000 bail on this charge

It is believed that Austin was also the individual who broke into Porter & Co.'s, the E. S. Brown furniture store, the R. E. Phillips drug store, Henderson, Thomson & Co.'s, Palmer's feed store and the Gilbert & Nichols mill.

Austin was taken to Oswego jail pending his securing the fine money. No burglaries have been reported since. The patrolmen have warned the business houses that their back doors and windows are not sufficiently safeguarded with bars, bolts, etc., and that individuals should pay immediate attention to these defects.

Annual Meeting Hospital Association

At the annual meeting of the Fulton Hospital Association, held last evening, the following officers were elected: H. L. Paddock, president; Thomas Hunter, vice-president; Thomas Marvin, secretary; Charles R. Lee, treasurer. Directors: Messrs. Hunter, Cusack, Lee, Webb and Marvin.

Favorable action toward obtaining a measure of support for the institution from the city authorities and an amendment to the city charter authorizing the same was hoped for in the immediate future.

Pathfinder Boat Club

The annual meeting of the Pathfinder Boat Club was held last evening in the City Hall. After the transaction of routine business, Messrs. F. B. Dilts and E. E. Morrill were elected directors for three years. The Board of Directors elected the following officers: President, James C. Hunter; vice-president, B. W. Bennett; treasurer, Charles Hall; commodore, H. L. Lake. Mr. T. H. Ripley, resident engineer in charge of Barge Canal construction work in this section, was elected an honorary member of the club.

MARRIED

At the home of the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle, on Tuesday evening, March 10, Mr. Garret Bleecker Farley was united in marriage to Mrs. Minnie C. Adams. Both are well-known residents of this city and have a host of friends who join with the Times in wishing long life and prosperity to the happy couple

Mr. Eli DuBois of Mount Pleasant and Miss Florence Cole of Medina, N. Y., were united in marriage at the home of the groom's parents on Thursday evening, March 5th, by the Rev. W. H. Pullen. Miss Grace Sykes of North Volney and Mr. Guy Hall of Mount Pleasant attended the bridal couple. The ceremony was performed as the bridal party stood in a beautiful arch of evergreens. The bride and bride's maid carried carnations. After the congratulations a bountiful repast was served. About twenty-five invited guests witnessed the ceremony.

Pitts Up Against It.

Clarence E. Pitts and his newfound friend, James Graham of Sandy Creek, journeyed to Albany last week to demand from Governor Hughes an explanation as to why he did not more promptly do as they had told him it was his duty to do—send "special counsel" to usurp the office of District Attorney Baker. Governor Hughes calmly and dispassionately told Mr. Pitts in a letter last week that he should not interfere in county matters unless a verified complaint was filed and specific charges against county officials made.

Mr. Pitts has notified the Governor that he is not inclined at present to do this and reiterates his plea for "special counsel".

From the beating of bass drums and waving of bloody flags done by Pitts during the past two years one would be led to believe that up his sleeve were at least a million verified complaints and specific charges against each and every official in Oswego county. When a man like Governor Hughes looks upon Pitts and calls his piteous bluff by demanding incontestable proof of the truthfulness of the charges, the man and his bluff collapse.

The result of the journey of Pitts and Graham to Albany has not been as yet revealed but it is safe to say they neither intimidated nor coerced Governor Hughes into deviating one bit from his position to proceed justly and legally in whatever course he decides upon.

Republican Congressional District Convention.

The Republican electors of the Counties of Jefferson, Lewis and Oswego, comprising the 28th Congressional District of the State of New York, and all other electors, without regard to past political affiliations, who believe in the principles of the Republican party and endorse its policies, are invited to send delegates to a convention to be held at the Court House in the City of Watertown, N. Y., in said district, on April 9th, 1908, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, for the purpose of electing two delegates to the National Republican Convention called to be held at Chicago, Ill., at 12 o'clock noon on Tuesday, June 16th, 1908.

Jefferson County, 14 delegates; Lewis County, 6 delegates; Oswego County, 12 delegates.

County Owes Thomas Moore.

The experts who have been conducting an investigation of the County Treasurer's office, Oswego, in behalf of the State, have concluded their work and it is stated that they found that ex-County Treasurer Moore has failed to draw his salary during the past twenty-one years up to within $500 of the amount due him. As no charge of misappropriating funds has ever been made against Mr. Moore, this is but additional proof of his right to the appellation "Honest Tom Moore."

The investigation revealed carelessness in the conduct of the office, though, as has been frequently charged. The full report is expected this week from Comptroller Glynn.

Surrogate's Court.

Letters were issued today on the estates of David R. Too Bad.

It is a lamentable fact that the Charity ball given by the Acacia Companions in Church's hall on March 2, was not a financial success. The young men comprising the club worked faithfully to secure a snug sum for the hospital but the public did not seem at all interested in the worthy project. The Companions assumed all the responsibility without expectation of reward other than having the satisfaction of having been of material assistance to this cause and they feel deeply the fact that they did not reach the $150 profit mark which they had established as their ambition to reach. From a social standpoint the party was a decided success.

The Acacia Companions wish to acknowledge the following donations for the Charity ball held on March 2: Knights of the Macabees, $3.00; Fulton Times, invitations; Mrs. H. C. Giesler, $2.00; E. J. Schem, $2.00.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving McClellan will remove to the home of Mr. D. L. Brown in Broadway.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jewett will leave this month for Fort Ann, where she will make her home with her son, Mr Walter Jewett.

A missionary tea will be served in the parlors of the First M. E. church Wednesday, March 11th from 5:30 to 7 p. m.

Ex-Supervisor W. D. Streeter of Richland has purchased a furniture store in Carthage and will remove with his family to that place.

Mrs. M. S. Powell has been entertaining her mother from New Jersey. Mrs. Powell accompanied her as far as Albany on Monday.

Mr. Orrin Henderson has leased his house in Rochester street to Mr. W. L. Forsyth, who with his family will take possession this month.

The coal sheds at the foot of Oneida street have been removed and the lower bridge in all its beauty and entirety may now be viewed from First street for the first time since its construction.

The Board of Health has added the following to the sanitary laws of the city: "No meat dealer or peddler of meat within the limits of the City of Fulton shall be allowed to offer for sale or have in his possession any poultry that has remained undrawn for more than twenty-four hours after being killed. Violations of this ordinance will subject the offender to a fine of $5.00 for each violation."

The report of Chief of Police Ross for the month of February shows that there were sixteen arrests during the month. Twelve were for public intoxication, one for assault in the third degree, one for defrauding a hotel keeper, one for being a disorderly person and one for carrying concealed weapons. One was discharged and fifteen were convicted. Fines were imposed to the amount of $8 and patrolmen's fees for civil services were collected in the amount of $12.10.

Prof. Charles R. Drum of Syracuse, N. Y., has been secured by the Brotherhood class to give that popular lecture the subject of which is "The Wickedest Man in Fulton" on Friday evening, March 13, at eight o'clock at the First M. E. church before the members of the class and their invited friends. This lecture which is free is for men only, and no boys will be admitted neither will anyone be admitted without a ticket. This lecture is generally considered one of the most popular talks to men of the 20th century and was given recently in Rochester, Auburn, Detroit and other places by Prof. Drum, to packed houses in the interest of Y. M. C. A. work. Every man in Fulton fortunate enough to secure a ticket to this popular lecture will hear an address well worth listening to.

Master Haswell Grant is ill with a slight attack of scarlet fever.

Mr. and Mrs. Roe of Syracuse spent Sunday at the Morton homestead.

The fifty-fourth session of the Oswego District Conference of the M. E. Church will be held at Mannsville, March 9th and 10th.

W. S. Blake of West Granby is searching for his 12-year old son, Isaac, who left home last week after a scolding from his father, following a fight with a neighbor's son. Whether the boy left home in anger or in fright is unknown.

The annual convention of the Oswego county Sunday School Association will be held at Fulton, March 30-31. A good program is being prepared. It is hoped that every Sunday school in the county will be represented.

Friday evening "Ladies' Night" will be observed at the Masonic club rooms when an illustrated lecture will be given by the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle and a musical program will be presented. The refreshments will consist of a spread "fit to set before the King". The committee on entertainment is composed of Messrs. C. A. Gilkey, W. C. Morgan, H. M. Murin, Frank Stafford, W. W. Kennedy, W. J. Watson, J. W. Rigley and A. J. Snow. A delightful evening is anticipated.

Riverside (Cal.) Daily Press, March 4: Confidence in the orange industry of this valley is evidenced by the continued transfers of choice orange properties. The latest deal to be reported is the sale of a 14 acre grove. This is transferred from R. E. Turner, the shoe man, to W. Wilkinson, a recent arrival from Kansas. The consideration was $18,000, Mr. Turner reserving this year's crop. This is one of the best sales of orange property on Arlington Heights this season.

Mr F. R. Leuscher, lessee of the Foster Theatre, was a pleasant caller at The Times office on Tuesday. Mr. Luescher's business in Fulton was to settle up matters connected with his lease of the theatre and to surrender it. Mr. Luescher faithfully carried out his part of the agreement with the local patrons of the play house and he placed upon the stage the best line of attractions ever presented here. He was ambitious to erect a new play house in Fulton but the public did not co-operate with him in this endeavor and the project was abandoned, at least for the present. Mr. Luescher and the resident managers have treated the theatre going public with courtesy and it is a regrettable matter that they have not been better sustained.

One rather significant resolution was adopted at the State Grange meeting and which did not receive much publicity. It refers to the representation in the National Grange. At present the voting members of the National Grange are the State Master and his wife— two votes from each State. The resolution referred to was handed up from the Clinton Co. Pomona, and was to the effect that each state should be represented in the National Grange according to its Grange membership. The justice of such representation becomes evident when we recall the fact that the five states of Indiana, Colorado, Iowa Minnesota and Wisconsin have only 4800 members combined, and yet the five states are entitled to ten votes in the National Grange to New York with 77,000 members, only two. There is a growing belief that this representation is far from just and we predict that the next meeting of the National Grange in Washington, D. C., in November, will find this matter of representation very much in evidence.

The Snake and the Umbrella.

"I spent a pleasant hour with a traveler," said the truthful man, "who told a lot of snake stories. I remember the last of them. It was about a man who took a nap in the woods, laying his umbrella on a rock beside him.

"After awhile it began to rain, and the man awoke. He was all wet. He took hold of his umbrella and opened it hurriedly. It seemed rather stiff in going up, and there was a ripping, tearing sound. Then a live blacksnake fell to the ground, split in two from its head to its tail.

"You see, it had swallowed the umbrella all but the handle, and the man did not notice what had happened till, putting the umbrella up, he halved the snake from stem to stern."

CHAPTER XIV.

To the suspicious adventurer the first action of his host was most peculiar, for without explanation he closed and carefully locked the door. Richard's apprehensions were relieved, however, when Mr. Renwyck produced a decanter and cigars, lighted his own perfecto and then lay back in his deep leather chair and laughed till the tears ran down his face. The mystified Texan smoked on in polite silence, patiently waiting for some explanation of the old man's humor. He could wait quietly, since it was evident from Mr. Renwyck's exuberant joy that Richard had nothing personally to fear—that his secret was still his own. After a time his host wiped his eyes with his handkerchief and apologized for his merriment.

"Forgive me, Lord Croyland," he begged; "but, to tell you the truth, I just can't help it. Affairs in Texas are not only drifting my way, but the whole situation has become intensely humorous. Why, it is a regular play. Old Bill Williams represents tragedy, my company will shortly supply melodrama, while a third corporation has appeared on the stage and is furnishing both sides with comedy. Let me explain."

"Do so, I beg you," murmured Richard, striving not to look as uncomfortable as he always felt when this Texas business came up. The financier laughed again and proceeded:

"As I told you before, Bill Williams' company is working for a deep water harbor at Matagorda City, while my company is equally anxious to operate at Longmatt. Very well. Now, listen. I learned today that a new corporation was organized last month under the laws of the state of New Jersey which styles itself the Peace and Good Will Realty company. Think of it! The very name will kill it in its teething stage."

"Who are back of this corporation?" asked Richard, greatly interested in this new development.

"I don't know. They are probably so ashamed of themselves that their names are kept secret," laughed Mr. Renwyck.

"But I thought the incorporators"—

"Dummies, like my own company, only in this case all of them are real dummies in fact as well as in theory."

"I see."

"It develops that the promoters of this company, whoever they may be, have gone down to Texas and invested their capital in the state's largest and most generous product."

"And what is that?" asked Richard in some surprise.

"Hot air," returned Mr. Renwyck in a paroxysm of mirth. "It's cheap, but they seem to want it."

"I don't quite understand."

"I will enlighten you. They have a ministerial looking representative of the name of Fishcail, whose innocence can only be described as infantile. This precious old lamb called upon a firm of promoters, Hill & Eaton, who—in strict confidence—happen to be my agents, and asked their advice with regard to a location for a deep water harbor on the Texas gulf coast they intend to construct with the assistance of a hoped for legislative appropriation." Once more Mr. Renwyck was so overcome by amusement that he was forced to pause in his story. "Now, my company—I myself, you understand?" he began at length.

"Of course," said Richard, bowing.

"—has been saddled for a long time with an utterly worthless tract of land along the gulf—a miserable, sun baked little hole rejoicing in the name of Olivia, which lies midway between Matagorda City and Longmatt, by the way. Through Hill & Eaton we advised Brother Fishcail to buy this tract, which—bless my soul—he did at once and at our own price!"

The amused speculator glanced at Richard and, mistaking his gloom for a phlegmatic British lack of humor, went on:

"It seems also that thereafter the Peace and Good Will Realty company went to Bill Williams and asked his advice. The old skinflint also owned a lot of land around Olivia, which he promptly worked off on his confiding benefactors. Now, look here, Croyland, you don't seem to appreciate the joke."

"But, my dear sir," began Richard, forgetting his role for a moment, "Olivia isn't such a bad—er—I mean—er"—

"Such a bad sale for me, eh?" laughed Mr. Renwyck, unconsciously helping his guest out of a hole. "I should say not! Why, my boy, we've sold a white elephant!"

Richard thought swiftly. Olivia, as he was about to tell Mr. Renwyck, was not such a bad site for a deep water harbor after all, and in fact he had always contended with his father that it was more advantageously located for that purpose than Matagorda City. Not only was the situation more central, but it offered shorter and more direct communication with freight routes and main lines. True, the country was sparsely populated in its vicinity, but settlers would come naturally with the development of such an enterprise. Perhaps the Peace and Good Will Realty company's representative was not such an egregious ass as the Renwyck and Williams factions supposed.

"Has the new company, in your opinion, any chance of success?" he asked his host.

"Chance!" laughed Mr. Renwyck. "Not a ghost of it! Now, listen. Here comes the cream of the joke. The time for taking a vote on these deep water harbor bills in the Texas legislature had been set for two weeks from now, but various circumstances have played directly into my hands. Senator Frank Kinwalt, president of the Texas state improvement committee of the legislature, was closeted with me for two hours this morning. He is now on his way to Austin, where my harbor bill will be passed by both houses immediately upon his arrival, and the legislature will at once adjourn."

"You—you mean," stammered Richard, "that you have bought Kinwalt—that"—

"Tut, tut!" protested the crafty old schemer. "True, I bought the gentleman a lunch at Sherry's, together with a few cigars, a couple of cold bottles, and there were some incidental expenses which ran the price of the meal up—well, up into six figures, but beyond this"— Mr. Renwyck paused and smiled. "No one in this enlightened age would dream of buying an entire legislature, my dear boy. Horrible!"

Richard rose from his seat, took a turn up and down the library, then faced his exultant host.

"Mr. Renwyck," he asked, "aren't you losing sight of one important factor in the game? From what I have heard of him, Bill Williams is scarcely the man to be lying around in a hammock while you are putting through your deep water harbor bill. In my humble opinion, you are going to have a fight on your hands that will make you sit up and get busy."

This was the most un-English language which the supposed nobleman had yet employed, but it did not attract the notice or awaken the suspicion of Mr. Renwyck at that time, owing to his deep interest in the matter immediately in hand.

"Ah," he cried, "now you've laid your finger on a beauty spot! Of course Williams will fight me with tooth and nail; but, by the Lord Harry, he can't!"

"Why not?"

"Simply because he will not be in Texas when my bill is passed."

Richard stared at his host in fear and wonder, while Mr. Renwyck continued jubilantly:

"I could not have had matters turn out better if I had arranged it all myself. It seems that Williams' foot of a son was up here in New York last week and got himself badly smashed up in an automobile accident."

"What, you don't mean"—

"Yes, it's true," added the speculator quickly without noticing Richard's look of astonishment. "Michael showed me a greatly exaggerated newspaper account yesterday morning."

"Is he—er—mortally or dangerously hurt?" began Richard, who had in truth forgotten all about the condition of the real Croyland, and he now began to fear that the man who had assumed his name really might be more seriously injured than any of them had imagined. Richard was neither heartless nor indifferent; but, not suspecting Croyland's injuries were serious and being fully occupied with his own engrossing situation, he had not given the wounded earl a thought for days.

"No, no; badly, but not fatally, of course," answered Mr. Renwyck. "I sent around to the hospital to see if there was anything I could do for the boy. I'm sorry for him. I've got no grudge against him, except his foolishness in selecting such a father."

"I'm glad to hear it's no worse," murmured Richard, much relieved. "Go on, sir."

"It struck me at once that things might happen which would serve my interests when the father heard of the sad affair."

Richard glared at his host and ground his teeth in impotent rage at this exhibition of a heartlessness that would make capital for itself in a business scheme out of such an accident. "I'll steal his daughter now without a twinge of conscience!" Aloud he asked with as much control as his thumping heart admitted, "Well, what then?"

The host, who, it may be admitted, had no feeling of hesitation at turning the incident to his advantage, however much he might and did deplore it, rubbed his hands and laughed once more in keen enjoyment of the unlooked for opportunity to get the better of his enemy. Mr. Renwyck was playing the game cold bloodedly, mercilessly, according to the rules of the street. He would do nothing dishonorable or underhand after the ethics of his kind, but he would have considered himself a fool if he had not availed himself of every opportunity or assistance that fate put at his disposal.

"What then?" he echoed. "Well, Williams did a thing which surprised even me. I have in my pocket a cipher report from one of my agents whose sole business is to watch the opposition. Do you know, Croyland, when the old fellow learned that his son had been desperately hurt, perhaps dying—that's what the dispatch said—he dropped everything, chartered a special train and started north immediately."

"The deuce you say!" cried Richard, springing to his feet.

"I do," nodded Mr. Renwyck, construing his companion's explosiveness as sudden appreciation of the master stroke of business. "He is heading for New York as fast as steam can bring him and is leaving his harbor scheme wide open to my attack—not but what I had him beaten anyway, but this makes it a little plainer sailing."

Richard's cheeks, which had turned a deep and angry red, now grew deathly pale as he sank back into his seat again. In a far shorter space of time than it takes to tell it he realized each detail of Mr. Renwyck's coup d'etat and its crushing effect upon his father's plans. Then, too, his father's grief was cutting him to the heart. It touched him to the quick; it gripped his conscience with a burning vise. He had come north on his father's business, although not primarily for this deep water harbor scheme, of which he had known little or nothing, and now he was masquerading under a false name and title for his own pleasure. He must perforce be a helpless onlooker while enemies forged a shaft out of parental love and with it pierced the heart and brought about the ruin of his dear old dad. It was unbearable, impossible, yet what could he do?

"These are foreign drafts. Draw on your bankers."

What would happen when Bill Williams arrived? He, the hapless son, seemed to be in some way responsible for the whole wretched tangle, yet honor barred him from interposing a hand to prevent the catastrophe. Seek it where he would, there seemed no loophole of escape to be found. Perhaps if he could see Mr. Corrigan he could get advice; but, no, that gentleman had already declined to help him, telling him he must brazen it out on his own account. Brazen it out? Yes, but how? Brass counted for nothing now, for Mr. Renwyck held all the cards. Reason did point to one possible course—to hedge on the winning side and save what he could for his father out of the wreck, and at this possibility the young man grasped as a drowning man reaches for a straw.

"Mr. Renwyck," he said, with a mighty effort to hide his agitation, "what you say convinces me. I have just $100,000"—his own private fortune from his mother—"in bank. I should like to place it in your enterprise."

The financier started.

"Well," he parleyed, "that is rather a larger amount than I had thought of handling for you. Still, a promise is a promise. Write me your check, Croyland, and I'll bring out your stock certificates tomorrow evening."

The name "Croyland" came to Richard like a blow between the eyes. In his intense excitement he had almost forgotten that he was another man. He could not use the earl's name for this purpose, of course, yet to sign Richard Williams to a check payable to Jacob Renwyck would be to confess all. As well wave a red flag in the face of a furious bull. Again he was experiencing the results of folly, but this time it contained no elements of humor whatever. He was in for it—a maverick surrounded on every side by whirling lariats, and soon a sizzling branding iron would burn its everlasting mark upon his hide.

"Mr. Renwyck," he faltered, desperately casting about for some practicable retreat from his dilemma, but in vain, "I fear, after all, that I won't be able to—to go on with you. My bankers—er"—

The speculator looked puzzled.

"Ah," he exclaimed, "I think I can appreciate your difficulty. You doubtless bank in England, but that will not trouble us, I imagine." He opened a desk drawer and produced a pad of blank forms. "These are foreign drafts. Draw on your bankers at sight, and I will negotiate the paper through my own account and let you know the amount of exchange. You see," he laughed, "I am forcing you into a fortune, as it were. Really, I ought to charge you a commission."

The Texan took the blank draft handed to him, held it a moment, then slowly tore it down its length.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Renwyck, but—but I can't go in."

His companion eyed him critically for a full half minute. A moment ago he had volunteered to embark $100,000 in the enterprise, and now he would fain back out. What had changed him? The financier determined to probe this suspicious circumstance to the bottom.

"Why this sudden change?" he asked directly.

"Well, you see," began Richard, writhing inwardly at the falsity of his position, "I've been bitten in deals before, and while"—

"Nonsense!" interrupted the old gentleman shortly. "You can't lose on this. Why, my dear sir, it's a dead certainty. What more do you want?"

"True," agreed Richard sadly, "and yet"—

"There are no yets," interrupted Mr. Renwyck. "It is not a question of my needing money, for I have plenty of my own. I made you the proposition simply and solely out of friendship and"—

"And for that very reason," Richard cut in, "I must decline. I appreciate the spirit in which you have tried to help me, but circumstances render my acceptance impossible."

Again the financier regarded his extraordinary young friend critically through half closed eyes.

"Come, come!" he said bluntly at last. "Don't let's beat about the bush. What is your real reason?"

"Do you mean that?" asked Richard rising to his feet.

"I do."

"Mr. Renwyck," he said in a clear, level tone which was now free from any deception, a brilliant idea coming to him, the more acceptable in that it was strictly true, "you are right. There are several reasons which we need not discuss. I shall mention one which is sufficient, and that is this: You are about to take advantage of a father's love for his son, which has removed an antagonist from the field. Pardon my speaking plainly, but it strikes me as being a rather unfair business method. I prefer to have nothing more to do with it."

Richard wanted a good slap at the unscrupulous old man and rejoiced in its delivery. It was Mr. Renwyck's turn to flush, though the condition was brought about by anger rather than shame. He was about to make a sharp retort, but checked himself and asked coldly:

"Why didn't you think of that when you offered to take $100,000 worth of shares?"

"I—I don't know."

"Ah!"

"It is sufficient that I did think of it before the money was paid, isn't it?" queried Richard, angry at this monosyllabic comment on his irresolution and vacillation.

"Quite," answered Mr. Renwyck in his most frigid manner. "Yet I think if you understood the circumstances better, Lord Croyland, perhaps you would view the matter in a different light. But every man has a right to his own opinion, and so, if you please, we will say no more about it."

He rose as he spoke to intimate that the interview was at an end.

"Thank you," shortly returned the Texan, "and now, if I may, I will say good night. I regret that I have taken up so much of your valuable time."

He crossed the library, unlocked the door and went upstairs without a backward glance, while the financier sat looking after him moodily. For many moments Mr. Renwyck did not move. His cigar went out and was held unheeded between his silent lips till at last he dropped it into a silver ash tray and, rising, sighed.

"Something surprising there. I don't quite understand. Who would have thought he would have taken it that way? I wonder if that was his real reason. I don't see that I'm to blame. I didn't run over the boy. Well, I'd be a fool not to take advantage of his father's absence. Besides, what difference does it make? He was a goner anyway. It's a life and death struggle between us. We used to be good friends. Is the Englishman right? I wish that—here, here, this won't do! I must go to bed at once. I can't make out that Lord Croyland. Seems as if I'd met him—er—what could be the matter?"

The millionaire paced the floor of his library for a quarter of an hour, then set his burglar alarms and went to bed.

Richard was equally uneasy. He looked at the little pile of Croyland mail that had accumulated, including several telegrams, which of course he had not opened, and decided to take it to the hospital the first thing tomorrow. It was criminal for him to have neglected it and his friend as well. And there were other things he would do on the morrow.

(To be continued.)

The Ferret and the Rat.

A correspondent of a London paper, commenting on the crusade against rats in Great Britain, says: "The real remedy against rats is the ferret, not the unhealthy ferret kept by the half starved rat catcher of the agricultural village, but the strong, healthy ferret bred on the ground floor of a well ventilated, commodious dog kennel and there kept on skimmilk, table refuse and small birds. Bedded with clean wheat straw, the ferret is one of the sweetest of animals, and the expert goes into the kennels and cheers them as though in a kennel of hounds, and they crawl about him harmlessly. The young bucks will run miles across the country with the expert, just like little terriers. With this healthy life they grow too big for hunting rats in barns or other buildings, but they can settle any rat in a wheat stack if put in before the rat has made a labyrinth inside the stack. The doe ferrets will rout the buildings, and they alone should be the chief instrument in the crusade. The rat is too cunning for guns, traps and other devices."

ABOARD SHIP

Christmas Tree on U. S. S. Chicago at Philippine Islands, from Which Gifts are Distributed to Men and Officers.

The following interesting letter was received by Mrs. Mary Johnson of this city, from her son, F. H. Johnson, who is a mechanic on the U. S. Steamer Chicago. The letter was written right after Christmas from Cavite, P. I., and follows:

I will tell you something about our Christmas aboard ship. Last night (Christmas Eve) we had something most unusual for a man of war—a real Christmas tree—with a present for every man of the crew, from the "skipper" down. Now don't that sound rather odd to think of a crew of grown men around a Christmas tree taking as much delight in it as ever any child did in such a thing. Here is the way it went off. To begin with we have a fine paymaster, "Mr. Hancock," and from his fertile imagination came this most unusual Christmas tree. Not a word did any one hear about it 'till yesterday morning, and then only a rumor that "there would be something doing Christmas Eve." What, no one knew. Then Mr. Hancock sent for me and asked if I would get our orchestra together for a little musical programme (I am the musical director in our famous minstrel troupe). Then I and one or two others got up a little programme of songs, music, etc. Shortly after the carpenter and electrician gang appeared on the scene. In the afternoon they erected a Christmas tree on the quarter deck (the tree was a large palm tree) with a great illuminated sign over it that stretched from one side of the ship to the other "MERRY CHRISTMAS." At about 7 p. m. the bugle sounded "assembly" and all hands mustered aft—officers and men. Then we put though our little musical programme. Just as the orchestra was finishing the last piece (here came the surprise); the air was shattered by a bugle call from the deck below sounding "attention" and then a salute of ten rifles. (the President of the U. S. only rates four rifles, so you can imagine every one was on edge to see what "peerless monarch" was about to appear). Then slowly and solemnly up the hatchway came, well of all persons! "Santa Claus," with him were two little imps. Say, I guess if ever a man in that whole crew had ever had a Christmas in his childhood days, he surely thought back a few years for a time. Santa immediately proceeded to read a document, presumably from the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., in which he was given command of the ship until he saw fit to return command of it to Capt. Hodges. After reading that he directed one of the imps to present the Captain with a bucket of whitewash, which he was to use in whitewashing the conduct book—that is, to cover or erase all the breaks the boys had made in the last year. After that he distributed the presents to all hands and that ceremony was over. Bob Hart was over and had dinner with me Christmas—came about 11 a. m. and staid until 4 p. m. All day we did nothing but live over the old days back in Fulton, and the result is I'am a trifle homesick.

New Year's Eve we had a swell time—had visitors from all the ships in the fleet and from the marine barracks ashore. Kept up the hilarity until midnight, and greeted the New Year with a grand crash. The Captain turned the ships over to the crew and the fun was fast and furious. Our minstrel troupe gave a performance in Cavite not long ago. As usual, "twas a big success. I'll send you a programme. Tomorrow the enlisted men of the American fleet now in the harbor, give the German enlisted men now here, comprising the crews of the First Bismark and Nioba, a big time, including a street car excursion about Manila, a big banquet and vaudeville entertainment in the evening. I am one of the executive committee, and I can tell you there is something to do to handle 800 men and arrange for their individual needs. There is ten of us on committee. It will cost about $1,500. There are twenty-five men who leave the ship the 14th of January, going home to be paid off. We are more than short-handed on here now—only about one-half a crew left and no signs of any more coming out from the States. Out of a force of 91 in the engineer's force we have only 57 left. You can see how our crew is diminishing every month now.

"Prayer for Blessing."

[Suggested by modern church methods]

"O Lord, I come to Thee in prayer once more,
But pardon if I do not kneel before
Thy gracious presence, for my knees are sore
With so much walking, In my chair, instead,
I'll sit at ease and humbly bow my head.
I've labored in Thy vineyard, Thou dost know—
I've sold ten tickets for the minstrel show;
I've called on fifteen strangers in our town,
Their contributions to our church put down;
I've baked a pot of beans for Saturday's spree,
An old time supper it's going to be.
I've dressed three dolls, too, for our annual fair,
And made a cake which we must raffle there,
Now, with Thy boundless wisdom, so sublime,
Thou knowest that these duties all take time—
I have no time to fight my spirit's foes,
I have no time to mend my husband's clothes,
My children roam the streets from morn till night,
I have no time to teach them what is right.
But Thou, O Lord, considering all my cares,
Wilt count them righteous and wilt heed my prayers.
Bless the bean supper and the minstrel show,
And put it in the hearts of all to go.
Induce the visitors to patronize
The men who in our program advertise,
Because I've chased these merchants till they hid
Whene'er they saw me coming—yes they did!
Increase the contributions to our fair,
And bless the people who assemble there;
Bless Thou the grab-bag and the gypsy tent,
The flower table and the cake that's sent.
May our whist club be to Thy service bleat,
Our dancing party gayer than the rest,
And when Thou hast bestowed these blessings, then
We pray that Thou wilt bless our souls.
Amen.

In the Light of Publicity

JOHN DALZELL.

JOHN DALZELL, the Pennsylvania representative who has long been known as one of the chief apostles of protection, came in for some rallying from his good friend Representative Champ Clark of Missouri in the course of the notable speech on tariff revision the latter made in the house a short time ago. Congressman Clark made the assertion in this speech that if there was any person about the capitol who was in sore need of abundant spiritual instruction "as to the new Republican evangel of tariff revision," it was Mr. Dalzell.

"He is a fixed star of portentous magnitude in the constellation of stand patters," he exclaimed. "He is the stand pat sheaf to which all other stand pat sheaves do obeisance even as Joseph saw things happen in his dream. He is to all stand patters what Aaron's rod was to the rods of the magicians." He remarked that should Mr. Dalzell ever arise in his place in the house and unequivocally declare that he was earnestly in favor of general tariff revision downward, "the angelic choir should break forth in full chorus:

"Sound the glad timbrel o'er land and o'er sea, Dalzell is converted, the country is free."

Not long ago Dr. Wiley, the government's pure food expert, walked into a Washington cafe, took a seat and said:

"Bring me a chicken pie—one of those little individual pies."

A few minutes later it was set before him, brown and hot, and with a smile of anticipation he broke the crust to find just beneath a three inch feather.

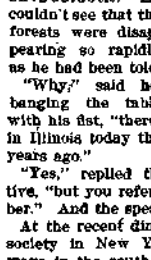
"Take this away!" he commanded. "What does it mean, anyway? Tell me that."

The waiter was evidently a man of resource, for he immediately leaned over and said in a confidential voice:

"Why, A'll tell yo' sah. It's dis way: Yo' know dat Dr. Wiley been raisin' such er howl 'bout food not bein' what hit was claimed ter be, de cook des puts one chicken fedder in each one of dem pies to show ter folks dat dey's recebin' de genwine article, sah."

Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia dropped in to see Uncle Joe Cannon at the capitol the other day to try to urge him to be friendly to the forest reserve bill. He described the inroads the lumbermen are making in the forests and said the bill of Representative Currier for the preservation of the White mountains and the southern Appalachians should be permitted to pass.

HOKE SMITH.



The speaker was not inclined to be enthusiastic. He couldn't see that the forests were disappearing so rapidly as he had been told.

"Why," said he, banging the table with his fist, "there is more timber out in Illinois today than there was thirty years ago."

"Yes," replied the Georgian executive, "but you refer to presidential timber." And the speaker blushed.

At the recent dinner of the southern society in New York the prohibition wave in the south was the subject of many jests by the speakers, and one of them declared jocosely that in Georgia, which has just gone "dry," the staid and sober citizens made Governor Smith sign a pledge not to take a drink in the state during his term as its executive. Another speaker, who represented North Carolina, declared that his state was the one that had "produced three presidents, peanuts, indigestion and Hoke Smith."

There is more than usual interest in the engagement of Lee DeForest, inventor of the DeForest system of wireless telegraphy and of wireless telephony. The inventor was recently divorced from his first wife, who was Miss Lucile Sheardown and whom he courted by the wireless method. In his second venture in matrimony he chose one of the most remarkable young women in the country, though she is so modest that publicity is very distasteful to her. In the first place she is a granddaughter of the late Elizabeth Cady Stanton and a daughter of Mrs. Margaret Stanton Blatch, vice president of the Equal Suffrage league, president of the League of Self Supporting Women of New York City and leader of the delegation of "suffragettes" which recently appeared before Governor Hughes at Albany in behalf of the principle of political equality between men and women. True to her family traditions, Miss Blatch, who was born in England in 1883, made up her mind when she came to maturity to pick out a profession which appealed to her interest whether it was traditional for women to enter it or not. She thereupon studied civil engineering at Cornell university and at twenty-one she graduated from that institution, being the first woman to receive the civil engineering degree from it. She was the first woman to be admitted to the American Society of Civil Engineers. She was employed for a time by the American Bridge company and recently was appointed a member of the staff of engineers which has charge of the building of the great $161,000,000 Catskill water supply system for New York. Miss Blatch is quite athletic and while at Cornell accomplished the feat of swimming the entire length of Cayuga lake, three miles. She has no masculine manners and is quite good looking.

MISS NORA BLATCH.

Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, who risked offending President Pardo said the Peruvians when a bullfight at Callao got too brutal, is commander of the third division of the fleet now in the Pacific and has on several occasions been delegated by Rear Admiral Evans to represent him on shore. "Fighting Bob's" rheumatism has made it difficult for him to attend social functions arranged by South Americans in the fleet's honor, and in this emergency Rear Admiral Thomas has worn becomingly the dignity tendered him. In the case of the bullfight he and some of the other commanders watched the sport as long as they thought advisable, but when it came to witnessing the slaughter of men as well as animals they began to think the demands of international courtesy should not necessitate their remaining, so bidding a brief farewell to President Pardo and his suit they retired from the boxes assigned them and returned to their ships.

REAR ADMIRAL THOMAS.

Admiral Thomas, who not long since commanded that famous old battleship, the Oregon, was born in Rittenhouse square, Philadelphia, in 1840, and entered the navy in 1861. He married a daughter of Admiral Simpson and has a son in the navy, so that three generations of the family have been connected with the sea fighting branch of the government service. While commandant at the Newport station he brought about the change in the present system of seamen apprentice training for the navy, thus solving a difficult problem in the enlisted arm of the service.

Dr. Charles F. Stokes, the innocent cause of the Rixey-Brownson controversy in the navy, is the first American surgeon to command a naval vessel. As soon as he was appointed commander of the hospital ship Relief he set about preparing to make that vessel of the utmost possible value to the great fleet of warships now journeying up the Pacific coast of the Americas. The Relief was fitted out at Mare Island navy yard, San Francisco, and was ordered to proceed from there to meet the fleet at Magdalena Bay.

DR. CHARLES F. STOKES.

Under Surgeon Stokes are four commissioned surgeons, six hospital stewards and forty-six hospital apprentices. The Relief, which has a reputation as the most up to date floating hospital in the world, has accommodations for 250 patients and in case of an engagement could take care of 600. She carries field hospital tents and equipment for a landing force of 3,000 and large stores of drugs and disinfectants for issue to ships of the fleet. The ship also has a well equipped dental office, dispensary and the latest things in surgical apparatus.

Commander Stokes was appointed to the navy from New York and previous to his present duty was for nearly two years in charge of the naval hospital at San Juan, Porto Rico.

Julius Kahn of San Francisco, noted as actor, lawyer and legislator, has hitherto enjoyed the distinction of representing the theatrical fraternity in congress. But he will have to look to his laurels, for another man widely known in the theatrical world, E. D. Stair of Detroit, threatens to break into the senate and appropriate the seat of that veteran in politics, Julius Caesar Burrows. Mr. Stair is head of the firm of Stair & Havlin, whose theatrical interests reach from Nova Scotia to the Pacific ocean. In these days most members of the upper branch of congress are supposed to have what is popularly known as a "barrel," and in this connection it is interesting to learn that Mr. Stair once owned "Barrels of Money." In fact, it was as proprietor of the show of that name that he started his career as a theatrical manager. Previously he had been a printer and had owned a country weekly in Michigan. His fortune was made as a purveyor of popular priced melodramas and other forms of amusement.

"What is the number?" repeated central.

"Violet Park, eight-seven-seven."

"Violet Park, eight-double-seven?"

"I reckon so."

"And what number do you want?"

"Elmdale, two-naught-four-seven."

"What is your name?"

"My name is John Henry Miggles. I live at 65 Bicken street, Violet Park. My house phone is Violet Park, eight-seven-seven or eight-double-seven, as you choose. I am married, have no children. We keep a dog and a cat and a perpetual palm and a Boston fern, and"—

"All that is unnecessary, sir. We merely"—

"And last summer we didn't have a bit of luck with our roses. I tried to have a little garden, too, but the neighbors' chickens got away with that. The house is green, with red gables. There is a cement walk from the street. I am forty years old. My wife is younger and looks it. We have a piano, keep a cook and an upstairs girl. Had the front bedroom papered last week, and I want"—

"Did you want Elmdale two-naught-four-seven?"

"Yes?" gasped Mr. Miggles.

"Well, the line is busy now. Shall I call you?"

But Mr. Miggles wrote a letter.—New Orleans Picayune.

Squaring the Circle.

There is a record of an attempted quadrature in Egypt 500 years before the exodus of the Jews, and, if we are to take Hone as an authority, the problem was solved by Hippocrates, the geometrician of Chios, nearly 500 years B. C. By some it is claimed that the efforts of Hippocrates were in the direction of converting a circle into a crescent because he had found that the area of a figure produced by drawing two perpendicular radii is exactly equal to the triangle formed by the line of conjunction. This last is the famous theorem of the "lunes of Hippocrates." The "Papyrus Rhind," the oldest mathematical book in the world, written by one Ahmes about 2,000 B. C., gives a rule for "squaring the circle." The rule given requires that the diameter of a circle shall be shortened by one-ninth and the square erected upon this shortened line. The early Babylonians also worked at this old mathematical problem, as is attested by several references in the Talmud.

The Only One.

Henry VIII. of England, being at one time at variance with Francis I. of France, decided to send an ambassador and to charge him with a very fierce and menacing message to this prince. He chose for this office an English bishop in whom he had great confidence and whom he believed would be the most proper person to carry out his design. His prelate, being informed of the nature of his mission and fearing for his life should be treat with Francis in the haughty manner his master desired, represented to the king the danger to which he was exposing him and begged not to be sent on this mission.

"Oh, never fear," said Henry. "If the king of France should kill you, I will have the head of every Frenchman I find in my kingdom."

"I believe you, sire," replied the bishop, "but permit me to assure you that of all the heads you will cut off there is not one of them that will fit on my body as well as my own!"

The Letter M.

The Hebrew name of M was Mem, water, and it is curious to note that the original form of this character in the most ancient manuscript is a waving line, which to the not too particular ancients represented water. By some philologists the letter M as used by the Phoenicians is supposed to have come from a picture representing the human face, the two down strokes representing the contour of the countenance, the V stroke signifying the nose, the two dots, long since disused, and a stroke beneath the V representing the eyes and the mouth. The old Phoenician form of the letter does indeed bear a comical sort of resemblance to the human face.

The Cure.

"You look glum," said the husband of one clever woman to the man who had married her companion.

"So would you if your wife studied geology and filled the house with stones until there wasn't a place left for you to sit."

"Don't worry about that," was the cheerful reply. "Turn your wife's thoughts to astronomy. That will suit her just as well, and she can't collect specimens."—Sketchy Bits.

Putting It Gently.

Mr. Henpeck—I hear that young Jones and his wife are not getting along very well. Mrs. Henpeck (authoritatively)—Jones should never have married when he did. He was too young to realize the step he was taking. Mr. Henpeck—Yes, I know, but I like the boy. We have many things in common.—Puck.

IN AID OF MINERS.

Representative John G. McHenry and His Proposed Law.

Representative John G. McHenry of Pennsylvania, who has introduced in congress a bill establishing a bureau of mines and mining, is serving his first term in the house. He is a Democrat and was born in Benton township, Columbia county, Pa., in 1868. He was educated in the rural public schools and at Orangeville academy and is a banker, manufacturer and farmer. He is president of the Columbia County National bank and state superintendent of the grange national banks throughout Pennsylvania. Congressman McHenry's bill has received much attention because of the large number of fatalities and disastrous explosions in coal mines in the past few months. It is in line with the recommendations of President Roosevelt's annual message on this subject and is entitled "a bill for the purpose of supplying relief and alleviating suffering incident to accidents in coal mines." It gives the proposed bureau of mines and mining power to investigate as to the causes and effects of all accidents in coal mines and to afford such relief as the exigencies demand and provides for the establishment of a fund to be used for the benefit of victims of disasters or their families, this fund to be raised by a tax of 1 cent per ton on all coal mined in this country.

Reports as to coal mine accidents for 1907 indicate a 25 per cent increase in such accidents over 1906 without including the four big disasters in Pennsylvania in December, in which nearly 700 lives were lost.

The Ambitions of Youth.

"Johnny, why don't you be a good boy like your brother Willy?" the mother was sternly admonishing her naughty son. "Willy here may be president some day, while you will have to dig in the sewer."

"But, mother," wailed Willy, "can't I dig in the sewer sometimes too?"—Harper's Weekly.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Both Upper and Lower Houses Are Working at Fever Heat.

CRUCIAL TIME FOR RACING.

Outline of Scope of Five of Superintendent of Banking Williams' New Measures—Salary Raising Question. Fifty Millions For Highways—Current Gossip.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, March 11.—Both branches of the legislature are now working at fever heat in order to secure an early adjournment. The 15th of April is the latest date that will satisfy the members as the closing time. The prospect that Governor Hughes will call back the legislators for an extra session in case his anti race track measures do not pass is the only big black cloud on the mental horizons of the lawmakers of both parties.

The general opinion is that, in spite of the pyrotechnics in the way of oratory that have been set off by both sides, the real determining fight on the race track bills is only just begun. At any rate, the fate of the measures is yet to be decided and will be settled within a comparatively short time. It seems certain that if the bills do not come out of committee within the next three weeks they will never come out this session.

ASSEMBLYMAN ROBERT WAGNER OF NEW YORK.

[Mr. Wagner has been for several years a member of the lower house. He is a Democratic representative from New York city, where he is well known as a trial lawyer. He is the introducer of the Wagner five cent car fare bill, providing for a five cent fare from New York and Brooklyn to Coney Island, the pleasure resort. This bill has attracted considerable attention for two years. Mr. Wagner is a member of the committee on cities and has other important assignments.]

Governor Black's Speech.

There is no doubt that the able speech of ex-Governor Frank S. Black of Troy before the recent continuation of the joint senate and assembly codes committees' hearing has had considerable effect on the minds of many of the legislators as well as those of many of the unofficial spectators. Mr. Black promoted general good humor, causing members of both sides of the argument to literally hold their sides in their laughter at various periods. Nor did he fail to muster the broadside of his legal abilities to bear on his side of the constitutional questions involved.

Never has New York state been so thoroughly aroused over the race track question. Both sides together appear to have tapped representatives of the entire population of the state in the procuring of witnesses and speakers. The backers of the race track owners, however, claim that most of the sentiment in favor of the Agnew-Hart measures has been artificially created; that it is not spontaneous. Of course this statement is stoutly denied by those in favor of the Agnew-Hart bills.

Large Sum For New Roads.

The question of new state roads has been receiving active attention, and an expenditure of no less than $50,000,000 has been provided for. The new highways and improvement of old highways have long been needed, and the good that will result to the state at large as well as to particular localities will be nothing short of enormous.

There is a strong tendency in the assembly to bring about an investigation of the government of New York city, particularly relative to the tremendous debt of the city, how it originated and increased and how it is to be cut down. Assemblyman Bennett of New York started the legislative ball a-rolling in this direction by his recent resolution calling on Comptroller Metz to explain why it was necessary to extend the debt assuming ability of the city. The reply of Mr. Metz is not considered entirely satisfactory.

Busy Banking Superintendent.

Superintendent of Banks Clark Williams is undoubtedly the busiest man in Albany today. In addition to conducting the multitudinous affairs of his office he has been drawing up the governor's bills that have for their aim the reformation of the banking and trust company business of the state. Then, after the bills are drawn, they must be introduced, explained to the committee members and opportunities given for public hearings. Next come possible amendments to wipe out the parts that may be proved objectionable to responsible parties, and finally the superintendent has to see that the bills pass both houses in the exact form (without further amendment) that won the approval of the committees and himself.

All these various duties take time and infinite trouble, and Mr. Williams has frequently to remain in his office at night and to do part of his work at home. The present nature of his position does not encourage many applications on the part of people who would like to supersede him.

Some of the New Banking Bills.

Five of Mr. Williams' banking bills were recently reported out by the respective committees, and they provided in general as follows:

Amending the banking law so as to vest the superintendent of banks with power in the dissolution of banks and trust companies and taking from the attorney general his present power with reference to receivers.

Two bills providing for the utilization of an amortization scheme for the valuation of securities, which was needed recently when market values of bonds held by banks were so depressed that to report them "at the market" would give no idea of their real value. The amortization scheme values bonds with reference to their par value, their interest and their approach to maturity.

Amending the banking law providing for an oath to be taken by trustees and directors of banks.

Amending the banking law permitting savings banks to hypothecate their securities in times of distress.

Governor No Longer Easy to See.

Evidently a presidential candidate is much more in demand than a mere governor and must take proper measures to protect himself. Governor Hughes is becoming more difficult to approach day by day. In the anteroom of his main office, usually termed the executive chamber, he has had erected a stout metal railing and gate, so that not even the door of the executive chamber can be reached by a visitor without permission, and the governor spends more time than was formerly his habit in the inner office opening from the rear wall of the executive chamber through a cunningly devised door made so that it is discernible only on close inspection from the woodwork.

The governor's recent statement that at the close of his term he will have spent $25,000 out of his own pocket toward his personal expenses has caused considerable surprise and accentuates the fact that the salary should be increased from $10,000 to about $25,000 yearly. Governor Hughes is a moderate liver too. He can never be accused of being what is sometimes termed a "lively spender." His statement will undoubtedly improve the chances of the passage of the constitutional amendment increasing the salary to $25,000. It is the widely expressed opinion of even the conservative residents of many states that the large and populous American states pay their executives, judges and legislators far too little. The sheriff of New York county, through his enormous fees, very often makes more money in a year than does the president of the United States.

Emboldened by the present success of the bill to increase the governor's salary, the legislators are now getting next to a regular organized plan for having a resolution offered amending the constitution so that senators may get $3,500 and assemblymen $3,000 a year. A subcommittee of the assembly judiciary committee will within a short time consult with a like body from the senate judiciary committee on the proposition, and when the time is ripe one committee or the other will have the resolution introduced or introduce it as a committee report.

Senator White.

Senator Horace White of Syracuse seems vastly pleased with his chances for receiving the nomination for lieutenant governor for the next campaign. He is daily receiving congratulations from his friends who have heard that he will be the probable choice for that position by the next Republican state convention.

Brewers Are Active.

The brewing interests of the state have a powerful lobby at the capital and are making strong efforts to influence the action on various bills touching their interests that have been introduced and progressed more or less principally less. The brewers met their first defeat recently when they attempted to secure postponements of two announced public hearings before the excise committee of the assembly. The state excise department, through its head, Mr. Clements, and Mr. Whitney, chairman of the assembly excise committee, has introduced a department bill covering various phases of the saloon question and amending former laws. This bill and the local option bill will receive most of the attention that is directed toward excise matters at the capitol. The organized hotel keepers of the state have joined with the brewers' association to a considerable extent as regards efforts to influence legislation at Albany, and they take practically the same stand on excise matters that the brewers do.

Lieutenant Governor Peter Stuyvesant Chanler is rapidly making a reputation as an all around pleasant companion at the capitol. He is a very successful handshaker and seems to have as many friends as any man in the legislature. He handles the senate with veteran smoothness, but is an unusually nervous man as a presiding officer.

mated that that amount would suffice for the entire work. This Commission have been unable to discover that any such estimate was ever submitted by either the Superintendent of Public Works or the State Engineer. It appears that the only estimate made by these officials are those submitted to the Constitutional convention of 1894, and that the suggestion of nine million dollars to complete the work subsequently undertaken by the State did not appear in those estimates. The Commission understand that that amount was placed in the bill by those who drafted it—members of the several commercial bodies, acting as a committee to secure legislative authorization for an improvement of the canals. It may have expressed a hope, rather than a knowledge, on the part of the friends of that measure. The bill passed the Legislature and received the people's approval without having been submitted to the State officials for an opinion."

The expenditure of nine million dollars had only sharpened the appetites of the canalers and a second Commission was created. This was the Committee on canals of New York State. The letter of appointment to this committee reads in part as follows:

Executive Chamber, Albany.
March 8th, 1899.

My dear sir:

I am very desirous of seeing the canal policy of the State definitely formulated. As you know, the nine million dollars designated to deepen the canal to the depth of nine feet has been practically expended, and it is reported that sixteen millions additional will be needed to carry this scheme through, while, at the same time, certain experts have said that the scheme, when carried through, will not be satisfactory. In short, there is much conflict of opinion as to what policy should be followed with reference to the canals, and even as to the proper terminus of the canals on the lakes.

I have decided to ask five of the citizens of New York, whose reputation in these respects stands highest, to act with the Superintendent of Public Works, Col. Partridge, and the State Engineer and Surveyor, Mr. Bond, to make the necessary investigations (and where necessary, to call in the aid of special experts), to enable them to report to me, as early a day as convenient, the proper course we should follow as regards this vital interest of the State of New York.

Last year the questions which arose affecting the canals were really twofold in character, namely: those affecting the actual administration of the canal, and those affecting the general canal scheme of the State. As regards the former, the questions are now all well on their way to solution.

The broad question of the proper policy which the State should pursue in the canal matters remains unsolved, and I ask you to help me reach the proper solution.

Very truly yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

The report of this committee submitted in January, 1900, contains about 150 pages of manuscript, 100 pages of tables and 250 pages of opinions received by letter.

The Kernel of this report is found in the second and third paragraph thereof, which are as follows:

First—That the canals connecting the Hudson river with Lakes Erie, Ontario and Champlain, should not be abandoned, but should be maintained and enlarged; and that the Black river and the Cayuga and Seneca canals should be maintained as navigable feeders, but that they should not be enlarged at the present time.

Second—That the project of a ship-canal to enable vessels to pass from the upper lakes to New York City (or beyond), without breaking bulk is a proper subject for consideration by the Federal Government, but not by the State of New York."

"After long consideration and some reluctance," this committee arrived at the conclusion that "the State should undertake the larger project on the ground that the smaller one is at best a temporary makeshift, and that the larger project will permanently secure the commercial supremacy of New York, and that this can be assured by no other means."

This "larger project" called for work at an estimated cost of $58,894,668.00 for the necessary surveys and estimates upon which to make a close preliminary estimate of the cost of a canal which would best serve the interests of the State.

Of the $200,000.00 appropriated under the said law, $40,000.00 was returned to the treasury by Mr. Bond, then State Engineer, after the completion of the work.

From the findings under these surveys and estimates compiled and written in the Barge Canal report of 1901. In that report was embodied an estimate which carried the immense total of nearly one hundred million dollars.

This report, so far as I know is the most comprehensive document of its kind. It is a veritable text-book on canal survey, design and cost.

Based on this report is chapter 147 of the laws of 1903, under which law, with acts amendatory thereto, the present work is being prosecuted.

Now, how to pay for this great work, which we are considering. This is usually one of the first instead of the last things to be considered, but better late than never.

Section 2 of Chapter 147, laws of 1903, contains a paragraph which, in brief, is as follows: "There is hereby imposed an annual tax of twelve one-thousandths of a mill per one dollar of valuation for each one million dollars of bonds outstanding."

Much has been and is heard concerning the Panama canal. It is a work of great magnitude but the variety of design and construction methods with their infinite details necessary to construct our Barge Canal are far in excess of those demanded at Panama and the volume of our unit qualities are greater.

A quotation from an address by William R. Hill, Special Deputy State Engineer, before the Central New York Farmer's Club at Utica, shows in a measure the magnitude of our own work:

"We have 460 miles of canals while Panama has but 50 miles. The Panama canal has but six locks and four or five reservoirs, while the Barge Canal will have 55 large locks and six other locks, making 61 in all; 40 dams, 18 guard gates, a steel viaduct, 230 feet in length, 3 reservoirs and 200 bridges besides many minor structures. The work is simply immense." "In the first three years we have accomplished 50 per cent more than the Panama canal people."

Mr. Hill further stated that there are now 17 contracts let at $27,340,000. This is $1,124,008 less than the estimate was.

CURRENT EVENTS CLUB.

Utility of Wireless Telegraphy Demonstrated—Interesting and Instructive Program

A most interesting and instructive session of the Current Events Club was held on Monday evening at the home of Attorney and Mrs. Giles S. Piper. The leaders were Messrs. William E. Hughes, M. S. Powell and L. W. Emerick. Matters of special interest to the club were disposed of by President Fairgrieve as a prelude. A "guest night" was agreed upon, when the club would meet on Tuesday evening, March 31, in the assembly hall of the Public Library building, witness a stereoptican exhibition of over 200 lantern slides of paintings by world-renowned artists, loaned Prof. Fairgrieve by the State Board of Education. Miss Helen Parmenter has kindly agreed to give a history of the paintings and interesting data connected with their production.

Professor Fairgrieve then introduced the leaders for the evening. Mr. William E. Hughes spoke on the recommendations of the Postmaster-General regarding the establishment of postal savings banks and the expansion of the parcel-post system in this country.

An enjoyable innovation was the introduction of Mrs. M. S. Powell, who delighted the assemblage by singing in a superb manner "Kathleen Mavourneen," and for an encore rendered "Killarney." Mrs. J. H. Howe was the accompanist. These ballads were rendered by special request because of the proximity of St. Patrick's day.

Mr. Powell, whose subject was electricity, had gone to no little expense and had taken considerable pains in constructing apparatus to demonstrate the utility of wireless telegraphy. Miniature sending and receiving stations were placed at either end of the large double parlors and communication established. The apparatus worked to perfection and the subject was handled in a masterly manner, delighting all who were privileged to hear it.

Miss Helen Parmenter read Lover's poem, "Rory o' Moore," which was greeted with applause.

Mr. L. W. Emerick brought the program to a close by a clever condensation of events that had recently occurred in the scientific world.

The next and final meeting of the club for this season will be held on Monday evening, April 6, at the home of Mrs. M. S. Powell. Leaders, Mrs. Thomas Hunter and Miss Mary Dugan. An election of officers will also be held.

MARRIED

On Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Peter Stevenson, occurred the marriage of Miss Jessie Stevenson and Mr. Harold Waugh of North Scriba, the Rev. W. L. Sawtelle officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Waugh will make their home in North Scriba. Mrs. Waugh's many friends in this vicinity extend congratulations.

At the parsonage of the First Methodist church on Wednesday Mr. Jay Richey and Miss Florence Besaw, both of this city, were united in marriage by the Rev. John Richards. Mrs. Richards and Miss Mabel Hodges witnessed the ceremony.

PETER KLEIN.

Fulton Milk Producers Association.

For some time there has been considerable agitation relative to the exactions to be made this year by the New York Board of Health relative to shipping of milk from outlying districts into New York City. President C. C. Wilcox, desirous of securing the most authentic information for the benefit of the patrons of the Fulton Milk Producers Association, wrote the Department of Health, New York City, and in reply to his inquiries he received the following communications:

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH
City of New York.
S. W. Cor. 55th Street & Sixth Ave.
Borough of Manhattan.
New York, March 12, 1908.

Division of Inspections,
Dictated by W. E. B.

Mr. C. C. Wilcox,
Fulton Milk Producers Asso.
Fulton, New York.

Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge your favor of March 11th, and in reply thereto, would state that this department has not as yet set any minimum score for the dairies shipping to this market. What will be done in the future I cannot, of course, prophesy, but for the purpose of your inquiry, I will state that some of the large milk companies of this city have recently embodied in their contracts with their farmers, an agreement by which the full price paid to the farmer is received only by dairies scoring 60 per cent or over; and either a still lower price for dairies scoring below 50 per cent, or else a refusal to accept such milk.

As the construction of the stable and other equipment constitute only 46 per cent. of the score card, you will easily see that we consider the proper care and handling of milk to be more important than a so-called up to date stable. This Department has at no time in the past, and I feel I can safely say will at no time in the future, practice any methods of oppression or compel any exclusion merely on account of an insufficient stable. Any dairyman faithfully applying cleanly sanitary methods in the production and handling of milk, will find a ready market.

I thank you again for your kind letter and interest in our work.

Respectfully,
RUSSELL RAYNOR,
Chief Sanitary Inspector,
By Wm. E. Burton,
R. S.

New York, March 3, 1908.

Mr. V. W. Shattuck,
Sec'y Fulton Milk Producers Asso.,
Fulton, N. Y.

Sir:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of February 29th and would inform you that this department required a certificate concerning the health of every herd, milk from which is shipped to this city.

Enclosed find a form, the wording of which is satisfactory to this department. If there are no cases of generalized tuberculosis in the herd, the applying of the tuberculin test is left to the judgment and experience of the veterinarian.

Respectfully,
RUSSELL RAYNOR.
Chief Sanitary Inspector.
By Wm. E. Burton,

The test demanded by the State Board is not the tuberculin test but a physical one and one not objectionable to the cattle owners. The patrons of the association are now readily signing their contracts and everything appears satisfactory since the patrons have assurances that the Board of Health is reasonable regarding exactions.

Board of Public Works.

The Board of Public Works met on Monday evening. Commissioners Bradley, Howe and Thomson and Superintendent Flynn were present. Some routine business was transacted and bills audited. The most important matter laid before the Board was a communication from City Engineer O. C. Breed relative to the pumping test made last week. The communication read: "Gentlemen—Acting on your request communicated to me by your Superintendent of Works, I have designed a measuring weir, have conducted the measurement of the water pumped from the Kellar spring for the continuous period of seventy-six hours, beginning March 10th and terminating March 13th, 1908. The flow of the spring was not sufficient to supply continuous working of the six-inch pump installed, but no water was permitted to run away during this period except it passed over the weir. In fact, the pump was run for a period of fifteen minutes and idle for the succeeding forty-five minutes throughout the entire period, and the water in the spring kept at the lowest possible elevation. The water comprising the run-off from the smaller spring situate about 500 feet south, and connected up with the caisson of the one pumped by a line of pipe is included with the amount shown for the Kellar spring and was pouring into the same constantly during the pumping.

"During the seventy-six hours there were 650,000 gallons passed over the weir. Reducing this to a twenty-four hour basis will give the supply of water as 200,000 gallons a day as the capacity of the spring in its present state of development. Whether this amount would be furnished in a dry time, as say, ordinarily, July and August, I do not attempt to state, neither do I offer any prediction as to whether development will produce, as these questions were not submitted to me, nor was I on the ground sufficient of the time to warrant any statement along this line, it not being at all necessary for the performance of the part assigned me."

The test has not yet been completed, but the above statement is far from assuring to a student of local water consumption affairs, that Fulton's water supply is or will be adequate unless the Johnson springs are developed and attached. The present demand upon our water supply is over one million gallons every twenty-four hours and in the event of frequent or long continued fires it would be utterly impossible to calculate the perilous condition we might be placed in.

A Tempest.

Sunday evening at the First M. E. church as the auditorium was nearly filled, on account of the extreme wind the lights were most all extinguished so that a lamp had to be obtained for the desk. The Rev. Richards gave as his subject "Where the Preacher Gets His Texts" and related the following circumstances: He stated that after he left England he preached in Canada in a small country school house, and that it was lighted by farmers' lanterns hung around on the walls. One night he said there was just one lantern and a regular tempest and in those days he wrote his sermons all out and that night just as he was starting in a sudden gust of wind entered the window and carried his written manuscript out of the one opposite and he was left in a quandary. He stated that he hesitated a moment and then earnestly sought Divine help, and then proceeded with all his might to help himself. After the service his audience told him it was the best sermon they had heard him preach and since then he had laid aside his notes.

New Hardware Company.

On Monday the Fulton Hardware company opened a hardware store in the building formerly occupied by the A. J. Snow store, Mr. Snow disposing of his business owing to his poor health and the advantageous offer made him by the new firm. Mr. F. J. Wooster, who has been a valued employe in the McRae & Sons hardware store since the firm has been in business in this city, is manager of the new store. An immense line of hardware, plumbing outfits, paints, etc., will be carried. That the public will be promptly, courteously and satisfactorily served is assured by the fact that Mr. Wooster has assumed the management. The patronage of the public is respectfully solicited by the company.

Interesting Exhibit.

The State Board of Education has sent 200 slides of valuable paintings to Superintendent Fairgrieve to be exhibited with the aid of a lantern for the benefit of any who may be interested. Miss Helen Parmenter of the High school faculty has agreed to give a concise history of the paintings or the artists, and our readers may be confident that the story will be told in a most interesting and instructive manner. The exhibition will be given in the assembly room of the Fulton Public Library, under the auspices of the Current Events club, on Tuesday evening, March 31, at 8 o'clock. This will be known as will be under the auspices of the executive committee of the club.

INTERESTING SESSION.

The session of the Oswego District Conference held in Mannsville on March 9, proved unusually instructive and enjoyable. Among the pleasing features of the meeting was a debate between Mr. E. R. Redhead of this city and the Hon. Isaac Hunt of Adams, upon the subject, "Resolved, That we approve the action of the general conference with reference to the election of Bishops for particular races and languages". Mr. Redhead led the affirmative with the Rev. E. H. Joy, Oswego, as assistant. The negative side of the question was led by Mr. Hunt with Rev. M. H. Dowd as assistant.

The action was taken by the general conference in relation to a plea by colored Methodists that a member of their race become Bishop. Prior to the decision of the conference it would have been necessary for a colored Bishop to preside over conferances of his white brothers and a certain amount of race prejudice prevented the granting of the colored mens plea. This decision removes all argument against the measure.

The debate above mentioned brought a great amount of enlightening information to the audience and has been commented upon with great favor. A Times representative asked Mr. Redhead which side won out and he replied that there was no decision. That the opponents met, discussed, and each side believes his side to have scored the greater number of points and he is correspondingly happy.

Pomona Grange Adopts Resolutions.

At the quarterly session of Oswego county Pomona Grange F. E. Rounds, of Hope Grange, South West Oswego, introduced a resolution that the Chairman of the Legislative Committee, S. C. Huntington, Pulaski, prepare a bill and send the same to our representatives in the Legislature making the office of Sheriff a salaried position.

The salary of the Sheriff is to be fixed at $2,000 a year, and he to have all fees from civil business. He is to have an under sheriff, a jailor and a matron, the compensation of whom shall be the same as paid in counties corresponding to the size of Oswego where the salary system exists.

The bill is also to provide for a purchasing agent for the county, who shall also act as the Clerk to the Board of Supervisors, and who shall receive a salary not to exceed $1,000 per annum. He shall maintain an office in the County Clerk's building to be designated by the Board of Supervisors; he shall keep a full set of books, make purchases only upon requirements and shall buy all supplies under the bid system.

Sidepath Report.

The report of the Oswego Sidepath Commission has been filed with County Judge Stowell. E. H. Stowell who has been treasurer of the commission for the past nine years has resigned.

The report shows that $28.50 was received from the sale of tags and with cash on hand its receipts were $203.61. The sum of $35.67 was expended for repairs to the sidepaths and there is a balance in the County Treasurer's hands of $108.82. A meeting of the commission will soon be held to prepare for the coming season. The Sidepath Commissioners are: H. B. Collins and Martin Diedrich, Fulton; H. H. Dobson, Mexico; M. T. Crimmins, Benjamin Baker and Thomas H. McMahon of Oswego.

Miss Osborne's Promotion.

The following item, clipped from an East Aurora, Ills., paper of recent date, will be of interest to the many friends of Miss Osborne in this city: Announcement was received by Miss Mabel Osborne, teacher of biology in East Aurora high school, this morning, of her selection as assistant in biology in one of the largest high schools in New York.

The letter announcing her appointment has been expected by Miss Osborne, who took the competitive examination while in the east during the summer and who passed at the head of the list.

Miss Osborne will not leave until the latter part of next week, awaiting the arrival of Superintendent C. M. Bardwell from the east, where he has been attending the superintendents' convention. Mr. Bardwell will reach here Wednesday and will proceed to secure a successor for the popular young teacher.

Miss Somers, who has been an assistant, will succeed Miss Osborne, and a new teacher will be hired to take her place.

Miss Osborne is one of the most popular teachers at East Aurora and has made a reputation as a science teacher, especially as instructor in biology, which is her specialty. She is a graduate of Cornell and a resident of Fulton, New York.

The salary in her new position is not stated, but is thought to be $1,800. The school at which she will teach is the Eastern District high school of Brooklyn

Baseball Matters.

At a meeting of the Empire Baseball League held in Syracuse last week, at which Auburn, Geneva, Oneida, Lyons, Oswego and Fulton were represented, the latter by Messrs. J. M. Caffrey, E. J. Schem and Irving Galusha, the following resolution was adopted unanimously by the representatives of the six clubs present: "Resolved that each club deposit a certified check for two hundred and fifty dollars ($250) in a safety deposit box in the First National Bank of Syracuse, such deposits and each of them to be subject to withdrawal upon presentation at the bank by President M. T. Roche of an authorization, signed by a majority of the directors of the league, such deposit to stand as a guarantee of good faith to the end that each club shall finish the season, pay its players and keep within the salary limit of seven hundred and fifty dollars ($750) per month for players, exclusive of the managers' salary. Upon proof of violation by any club of any part of the agreement for the keeping of which, such deposits are guarantees, the directors of the league, or a majority of them, shall be authorized by this resolution to withdraw the deposit of such club by President M. T. Roche as herein provided, same to be used in settling up players' salaries and securing another club to fill vacancy of delinquent club."

President M. T. Roche of Cortland was authorized to draft a schedule of games. The umpires' salary was fixed at $6 per game, $9 for doubleheaders, the umpires to get one-half these amounts in case of rain.

Mr. Hubbs Declines.

Attorney Irving G. Hubbs of Pulaski, who has a magnificent law practice and who has been frequently mentioned in connection with the County Judgeship campaign as a possible candidate, announced on Saturday that for personal and professional reasons he refused to become a candidate.

State Convention.

To the Republican Electors of the State of New York:

The Republican electors of the State of New York and all other electors without regard to past political affiliations who believe in the principles of the Republican party and endorse its policies, are hereby requested to send delegates to the State convention to be held at Carnegie hall, in the City of New York, on Saturday, the eleventh day of April, 1908, at eleven o'clock a. m., to elect four delegates at large and four alternates at large to the National convention to be held at Chicago, Ill., on June 16, 1908, and to nominate two Presidential electors at large and one Presidential elector for each Congressional district; to elect a State committee and transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

A Mother's Sacrifice.

Legends in India run that if a woman stricken with leprosy suffers herself to be buried alive the disease will not descend to her children. There was in the northwest provinces of India the wife of a gardener on whom the loathsome malady had fallen. Children were born to her. The disease grew worse. She importuned her husband to bury her alive. He at last, yielding to her prayers, summoned his son. The two dug the grave, and four neighbors assisted at the sepulture. So the woman died. These facts were investigated in a magistrate's court and were proved.

JUNIOR REPUBLIC

Colony Started in California. It Is Expected to Establish Similar Institutions in Other States.

On a pioneer band of a dozen boys and girls who are to-day pushing across the continent to found a George Junior Republic in California, hope of a national organization of this work is being based by the friends of the movement. If this first offshoot of the parent republic will work out near Los Angeles what has been accomplished by "Daddy" George at Freeville in the last fourteen years, they declare, other states will soon possess as successful a plant for straightening out hundreds of young lives. A splended site for the new junior republic is awaiting these sixteen-year-old "citizens" by the old San Fernando mission, and when they reach it next week it is probable that plans for similar colonization in other parts of the country will be under way here.

After half a year of training, this California colony have just left its republic at Freeville for the Pacific coast. Nine boys and three girls, picked from the ranks made up the party with "Daddy" George and "Nat" Bedford, who only five years ago entered the George Junior Republic. By the middle of this month the party expects to arrive and settle in its new headquarters.

Around a $60,000 hotel, built and deserted in "boom" times, the George Junior Republic of California will locate on a hundred acres of rich farm land beneath the Santa Monica Mountains. The buildings and land have already been leased and will be improved and extended by the California George Junior Republic Association to meet the growth of the little colony. A fund of $10,000 has already been provided by one woman for this work. Here the young "citizens" will soon set up their bakery, laundry, furniture factory, printing plant and farm to work for an honest living as they have been taught to do at Freeville.

At Chicago the young pioneers have already been given a reception by friends of the movement. At other points along the route the graduates of the republic are meeting, entertaining and speeding the party to its promising field.

—Mr. John Riha of Vining, Ia., says: "I have been selling DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills for about a year and they give better satisfaction than any pill I ever sold. There are a dozen people here who have used them and they give perfect satisfaction in every case. I have used them myself with fine results." Sold by all druggists.

And "Everybody Laughed."

The following story was told by Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler in the London P. T. O.: "At a dinner party one evening after my marriage the conversation, which was general, took a literary turn, and a gentleman sitting next to me, who did not know the identity of Mrs. Felkin with Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, began to descant on the way young authors spoil themselves with tricks. To emphasize his point he said, 'What can be more horrible than Miss Fowler's trick of saying "Everybody laughed?"' There was a dead pause. He evidently expected me to make a remark, for when I did not speak he turned and said: 'Oh, don't you know Miss Fowler's books? Haven't you read any of them?' 'I wrote them,' I replied, and then, indeed, 'everybody laughed.'"

A Call for Nurses.

The residents of this part of the state will be interested in the call for nurses issued by one of the largest and most famous schools for nurses in the world—the Philadelphia School for Nurses, 2219 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Good, honest, ambitious American girls, whether rich or poor, cannot do better than to take up the finest profession now open to women—trained nursing. The trained nurse occupies an unique position among business women. Her salary is approached by that of very few of her sister workers in other lines of effort.

The profession is so far from being overcrowded, that it is an important question among Physicians how the deficiency may be made up, since no school is of sufficient capacity to meet the need. The nearest approach to a solution has been found by the Philadelphia School for Nurses. A generous endowment enables the school to enlarge its classes very greatly and to offer a large number of free scholarships to suitable applicants. It is now desired to reach the right class of young women in small towns and country districts, that its classes for the coming year may be recruited from them.

Several hundred students are now receiving instruction, a large class was graduated in June and another in December. These young women are immediately employed, the demand for their services far exceeding the supply. There are graduates in nearly every State in the Union, and in all civilized countries there are a number of representatives.

Classes are now forming in several of the courses of the school, and applications should be made promptly in order to secure early admittance. Full information will be sent upon request.

Nasal Catarrh, an inflamation of the delicate membrane lining the air-passages, is not cured by any mixtures taken into the stomach. Don't waist time on them. Take Ely's Cream Balm through the nostrils, so that the fevered, swollen tissues are reached at once. Never mind how long you have suffered nor how often you have been disappointed, we know Ely's Cream Balm is the remedy you should use. All druggists, 50c. Mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

John Bigelow

Veteran Diplomat, Who at Ninety Is Wide Awake and Interested in the World's Affairs—Friend of Tilden, Minister to France and Panama Canal Critic.

JOHN BIGELOW, ex-minister to France, who at ninety has just published a pamphlet on the subject of the Panama canal, was the oldest man on the train which made the initial trip under the Hudson on the opening of the new tunnel from New York to New Jersey on Feb. 25, but in feeling he was one of the youngest. With his daughter, Miss Grace Bigelow, at his side, he nimbly climbed the steps of the station at Hoboken and proceeded to the platform where the opening ceremony was to take place. He remarked:

"For the greatest joys of my whole life I am indebted to the Hudson river. I was born on its banks, I sailed on its waters in dories and on cakes of ice, I have drunk it and have swum in it, but if in the wildest fever of my imagination as a young man I should have thought of having the pleasure of crossing under the river I should certainly have been pronounced a lunatic. And today I have crossed in that way. It is a new and very different pleasure and on the whole is the one of which as a citizen of New York and an American I am most proud."

Mr. Bigelow calls what he has just published about our great engineering undertaking on the isthmus "The Panama Canal and the Daughters of Danaus." It is a satirical production, claiming that the job of canal building has been botched by the president and his advisers, and the critic of the performance asks: "How much longer is this scandalously wasteful policy to be tolerated? Shall this isthmian commission be permitted to pour out the gold of our country as the maiden daughters of Danaus were condemned in hades to pour water into a bottomless vessel eternally?"

Mr. Bigelow was a member of Governor Samuel J. Tilden's canal investigating board and later for the New York chamber of commerce he visited the isthmus of Panama and studied the operations of the French there under De Lesseps. He now claims that the American engineers are not doing as well as the French did. Mr. Bigelow is the father of Poultney Bigelow, another critic of canal affairs. John Bigelow was a great friend and admirer of Governor Tilden, of whose estate he was executor and trustee. There has come from the press of the Harpers within a few days a two volume work entitled "Letters and Literary Memorials of Samuel J. Tilden," edited by Mr. Bigelow and another proof of his extraordinary mental strength at fourscore years and ten. It is his last service to his long departed friend and the third work he has issued on the subject of Tilden's career. Originally he and Mr. Tilden were not of the same political views. It was for his efficient presentation of antislavery opinions that William Cullen Bryant invited Mr. Bigelow to become his associate in the editing and publication of the New York Evening Post. Tilden bitterly expostulated with the Post editors for their support of Lincoln and on leaving the editorial rooms of that journal one day exclaimed:

"I would not have the responsibility of William Cullen Bryant and John Bigelow for all the wealth in the subtreasury. If you have your way, civil war will divide the country, and you will see blood running like water in the streets of this city."

One of Lincoln's first acts on becoming president was the selection of Bigelow to take the Paris consulate, from which post he was later transferred to that of minister to France. In this position he did perhaps the greatest service of his career, as his efforts were directed toward securing a strictly neutral attitude on the part of France in the struggle between the warring sections of the Union. Altogether he was in residence in France from 1861 to 1867. The only political position held by him since that time was that of secretary of state of New York under his friend, Governor Tilden. For many years his life has been one of dignified retirement, occupied with literary and benevolent pursuits, and it was singularly appropriate that at eighty-eight he should have published a work glorifying labor for the sake of honor and giving his secret of perpetual youth. It was entitled "The Secret of Life: A Crown to the Simple Life."

JOHN BIGELOW AT NINETY.

FAULTY CONSTRUCTION.

Other Communities Draw Lessons From Lakeview School Disaster.

School authorities and fire boards all over the country have been stirred to inquiry and in some cases to action by the burning of the Lakeview school at Collinwood, near Cleveland, resulting in the death of so many pupils. In cities where there are school buildings with doors opening inward the authorities in several cases have taken steps to change these conditions immediately. The secretary of the state board of health of Illinois on learning of the disaster sent out orders to all city, county and town officers to close all schools, both public and private, not provided with doors opening outward and with noncombustible fire escapes and to keep them closed until changes in the direction of safety are made.

Most of the children who perished in the Collinwood disaster lost their lives because in their mad efforts to escape from the flames they rushed against the doors at the foot of the main stairway. Had these doors been constructed so as to open outward no great loss of life would have occurred. The Lakeview school was not an old building, having been erected in 1901. But it was not of fireproof construction. Its wooden stairways and wooden floors permitted the flames to spread with much rapidity. In up to date schools concrete construction for such parts of the buildings is usually employed.

RUSSIAN PLAYS IN AMERICA.

Mme. Vera F. Komisarzhevsky and Her St. Petersburg Company.

At Daly's theater in New York may now be seen dramas in Russian played by two countesses and a baroness, not to mention several untitled Russians noted in the czar's empire for their literary and histrionic ability. The advent of Mme. Vera F. Komisarzhevsky and her company of Russian actors on New York's Great White Way is worthy of note if only on account of the name which the distinguished actress who heads the company brings with her to this country. Besides possessing this extraordinary stage name, she is ranked as the Duse of Russia and in private life is the Countess Vera Mouravieff. Her company includes thirty players, the cream of the St. Petersburg stage, among them the Countess Nolde, Baroness Tizenhausen and M. Kasimir Bravche, her leading man, founder of the Literary and Artistic theater in St. Petersburg, which he abandoned to play with Mme. Komisarzhevsky. The latter is a very attractive young woman of about thirty who has made her theater the center of all that is best in the dramatic art of Russia. As the result of a contest which she had with the St. Petersburg Dramatic theater some years ago, when through intrigues in the interest of court favorites there was an attempt to stifle her rising genius, she has become independent and now owns the theater in the Russian capital where her company plays.

She triumphed over the Imperial theater and its court supporters through the demonstrations of the people. Before her rise the goal of all dramatic artists had been the Imperial theater. Now it is Komisarzhevsky's Dramatic theater, and the most noted actors are glad to play subordinate parts in her company. She renders chiefly dramas of the natural school in which Ibsen, Sudermann, Maeterlinck and Gorky figure. This is the first visit of the Russian actors to America.

Which Side of the River is Best?

At the present stage of our trolley discussion please permit your informant to give a few points as to the relative merits of the routes on each shore of the river. The only merit of the West Side is no railroad to cross, which same may be true of the East side by remaining west of the O. & W. tracks all the way from Ricketts Crossing. There are many points of interest in favor of the East Side route as to the passenger traffic. First, north of the city, or in the city, is the public boat livery at Clark's Manhattan Villa which is patronized by hundreds of pleasure seekers during the summer months. Next comes our own Pathfinder Island with its thousands of patrons all summer. Next comes the great Battle Island Pulp Company plant, employing a large force of men the entire year, and also the Pierce sand beds that are to furnish fifty thousand dollars worth of material for the barge canal. The next of interest is Oak Spring farm and the famous Reynolds woods with its many campers and picnics. Next is the historical Battle Island with its fine scenery, and power plant of the pulp company at the dam. Close by is Eckert's grove of which hundreds of our citizens are aware by their journeys to it for church picnics, etc. Next, and far from least, is Bundyville with its church and school house and also a voting place for all elections, being one of the three in the town. Then comes the famous Little Field water trough which brings us to the east end of the Minetto river bridge, where we take the real trolley cars for Oswego, four miles distant, leaving but seven miles on the East Side to build with no bridge to cross while the West Side is eleven miles and must cross our river bridge which so many do not wish to have disturbed in laying tracks, defacing its beauty leaving thus very much balance in favor of the East Side route.

In Memoriam.

At a meeting of the members of the Bar of the City of Fulton, held on the 12th of March, 1908, a committee composed of C. H. David, G. S. Piper and H. J. Fanning, was appointed to draft a suitable memorial upon the death of William C. Stephens. The committee reported the following, which was unanimously adopted:

Rounding out a life of nearly four score years, William C. Stephens has passed away.

He was born in Pennsylvania in 1829, was educated at Homer Academy and was graduated from the Albany Law School in 1854. He was admitted to the Bar the same year and entered upon the practice of his profession at Fulton as a member of the firm of Luddington & Stephens, of which the late A. N. Luddington, at that time District Attorney of the county, was a senior member. He afterwards became the senior member of the firm of Stephens & Pardee, practicing for several years with the late Emery S. Pardee.

For over half a century he has been an honorable member of the Bar of the State of New York. He was a lawyer of the old school, and was proud of his profession. He held various offices of trust, both in village and county, and filled them all with ability and integrity. He had much to do in an official capacity with the development, progress and growth of Fulton. He held the office of President for many years, and also served as Trustee and Police Justice.

In the practice of his profession, he regarded a retainer by a client as a sacred trust, and fought his legal battle to the end with unusual persistency and ability.

He was not blessed with a strong constitution and lacked the physical strength for continuous hard labor, yet he never spared himself whenever a case of importance required his long and strenuous exertion, and in several notable cases, after defeat in the courts below brought victory to his clients in the court of last resort.

He was a wise and prudent counselor and advised a compromise, rather than lead his clients to disaster and defeat. He was kind and courteous in practice, extending to his adversary every favor that would not affect the rights of his clients.

He was a good companion, a kind and obliging neighbor, and a valued member of the circle in which he moved. He was beloved by his family and neighbors and was a true American citizen.

He was deeply interested in all that appertained to life, and the progress of events, but he entered the great change without fear, with an unfaltering trust in the future.

It was resolved that the members of the Bar attend the funeral of Mr. Stephens in a body, and that a copy of the foregoing memorial be sent to the family of the deceased.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, over-worked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

Pennyroyal and Fleas.

When it comes to talking about fleas the writer knows just where he is at. When he was a boy the country swarmed with them, and perhaps one of the things he will remember longest will be the sleepless nights and the torments that the fleas gave him when sitting in Quaker meetings, where he did not dare to scratch. For many years the people seemed to put up with them as an evil from which there was no escape, yet there was an efficient remedy growing on every farm in the shape of a modest little plant called pennyroyal, which is familiar to every country bred boy. The odor of this plant seems very offensive to many kinds of insects. A freshly bruised bunch of the plant put in a small bag and rubbed on the bed linen and then left in the bed will evict the last flea in a very few minutes. A few drops of the essential oil of the plant, which can be got at any drug store, rubbed on one's underclothing will drive them from the person immediately and if sprinkled about a room infested with fleas will clear them out.—Forest and Stream.

—Kodol is today the best known and most reliable remedy for all disorders of the stomach, such as dyspepsia, heart burn, sour stomach and belching of gas. Kodol contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. Kodol is pleasant to take. It is guaranteed to give relief and is sold here by all druggists.

A Little Retouching.

The wonders of photography are ever on the increase. Nevertheless there are still some limitations to the power and skill of even the most expert photographer. Mr. Hall is an amateur of no mean attainments, and when his old Aunt Hannah from Bushby came down to the city he secured a picture of her in her most characteristic pose—arms akimbo and mouth slightly open. When Aunt Hannah saw the first print she looked at it, held it off, drew it close again and then sat down to write her nephew:

Dear James—Yours with photograph taken during my late visit just received. In reply I would say I'm well enough pleased with it for myself and your folks. But in the one you send out to California to Emma I'd rather you'd straighten out my elbows and let my arms hang. Affectionately, AUNT HANNAH.

P. S.—Perhaps you'd better close my mouth a mite more, as Emma's husband is a stranger to me.

Just a Fish Story.

We cannot refrain from recording the most curious capture of a fish that has come to our notice. The circumstance was retailed many years ago by Mr. Heathcote, one of the great authorities on the fens. A Mr. Richardson of Peterborough was skating on the dikes when the ice was very clear, and he noticed a large pike swimming in front of him. The fish was terrified by the apparition and swam in front of the skater until it stopped from sheer exhaustion. The skater broke the ice and took out the fish with his hand, which proved to be a pike weighing twelve pounds. It is a story difficult even for a fisherman or a local historian to cap.—London Outlook.

Indian Blood

Big Chiefs Owen and Curtis and Their Recent War of Words Over the Red Man In the Washington Council House of the Great White Father.

THE Indian war in the senate, which furnished Washington a day's sensation, did not lead to the spilling of blood on the floor of the legislative chamber, nor were any scalps taken except in a metaphorical sense. But the way in which the two Indians who wear the toga, Robert Latham Owen of Oklahoma and Charles Curtis of Kansas, conducted their battle of words was suggestive of the kind of duel they might have fought in days gone by with tomahawks as arguments and the scene of the struggle the forest primeval. The combat between the two senatorial Indians was a reminder of the historic quarrel between the noted Iroquois chiefs Cornplanter, or Gy-Ant-Wa-Ka, and Red Jacket, or Sa-Go-Ye-Wat-Ha, which means he keeps them awake. So far as there is a parallel between the two incidents, Cornplanter, the friend of the white man, is represented in the recent altercation by Senator Owen, who stands for putting the Indians on a complete equality with the whites before the law, while Senator Curtis, like Red Jacket of old, is suspicious of the white man, at least of the type represented in many living near the reservations, who scheme to get control of Indian lands. Old Sa-Go-Ye-Wat-Ha was keen and unrelenting in his efforts to match the cunning of the white men who sought to take from his people their lands and their birthright. That is the role Charles Curtis, the first Indian senator, would play at Washington. He says it is best to go slow about placing the red man on an exact equality with the pale face, because experience has shown that he gets worsted in a contest requiring knowledge of civilization, so called. He opposes removal of all restrictions upon the Indian regarding the way he may dispose of his rights in land.

SENATOR OWEN, THE CHEROKEE, AS HE MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

Senator Owen, on the other hand, went to congress as an avowed advocate of removal of such restrictions. In the clash between the two men of SENATOR CURTIS, THE KAW, IN INDIAN COSTUME.

Indian blood in the senate the other day it was insinuated by Senator McCumber of North Dakota that the Oklahoma member had a special reason for desiring such legislation in view of the fact that he has a ranch of about 3,000 acres, valued at about $500,000, to which he cannot obtain clear title until such restrictions as now exist are removed.

Senator Curtis, who has Kaw blood in his veins and who is a Republican, served in the house as a member of the Indian affairs committee before he entered the senate. He is versed in red men's lore and on the subject of United States law pertaining to Uncle Sam's wards and has won a reputation as a stanch defender of the rights of the red man. Senator Owen has Cherokee blood and is a Democrat. His father, Robert L. Owen, a white man, was president of the Virginia and Tennessee railroad, while his mother was Narcissa Chisholm of the Cherokee Nation. He was christened by his mother Oconostota, by which name he is known among Cherokee speaking people. He is a man of remarkable knowledge of the law and of finance, as he showed when in his speech on the Aldrich currency bill he fairly outwitted, in the opinion of many, the veteran financier whose name the bill bears in the discussion upon it. In Senator Owen's debate with Senator Curtis it seemed to the galleries that the feud between the Kaws and the Cherokees which existed for generations had broken out afresh and was personified in the two men. At any rate it prompted Mr. Owen's Oklahoma colleague, the blind Senator Gore, to rise and address the chair.

"Mr. President" he said as he turned his sightless eyes toward the angered men, "I move that the senate recognize the belligerent rights of these two Indians."

And perhaps it was due to this timely bit of humor that the two Indian members a little later shook hands, even if they did not literally smoke the pipe of peace.

Tabloid Tales About People.

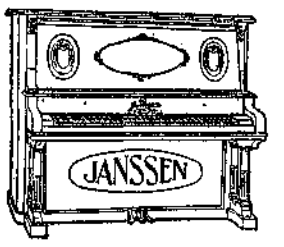
LEBBEUS R. WILFLEY, whose actions as judge of the United States court in Shanghai were called in question, but who has been exonerated by President Roosevelt of the charges against him, took office on Jan. 1, 1907. His appointment was notable in that it was the first of the kind to be made. His court is a consular court and is said to be the only one of that sort maintained by the United States government. It was instituted for the protection of Americans in China and has jurisdiction over all commercial and civil proceedings, and by virtue of a special treaty between the United States and China litigants in this court have the right of appeal to the higher courts of the United States. One of the charges against Judge Wilfley is to the effect that, in defiance of law and justice, he refused to accept bail for one S. R. Price, who had appealed from the sentence of his court. He was also charged with acting in an arbitrary manner in various instances and with being interested in a lottery run in Shanghai. Secretary Root, after investigating the charges, which were preferred by Lorrin Andrews, former attorney general of Hawaii, found that the judge was innocent and that he had been attacked because of the fearlessness with which he had endeavored to stamp out vice and crime in the Shanghai colony.

LEBBEUS R. WILFLEY.

The judge was born on his father's farm in Audrain county, Mo., in 1867. His mother's family was noted in Virginia, and his father was in the Confederate service. He studied at Central college, at the University of Virginia and at Yale and in 1893 began the practice of law in St. Louis. In 1902 he was appointed attorney general of the Philippines and was transferred from these islands to China.

One of the chief witnesses called by the senate naval affairs committee in its investigation of the criticisms recently made as to battleship construction was Rear Admiral Washington Lee Capps, chief constructor of the navy. Despite the assertions of Henry Reuterdahl and other critics of the present plan of battleship construction Admiral Capps declared before the senate committee that American warships are the equal of any in the world. He said that during five hours' firing in the battle of the Sea of Japan the rapidity of fire maintained by the Japanese ships was only one-fourth that maintained by the American navy during recent practice. The admiral replied to many of the statements of Mr. Reuterdahl in the magazine article which has attracted so much attention and defended the policy pursued by the navy.

WASHINGTON LEE CAPPS.



Admiral Capps was appointed to the navy from Virginia in 1880, and his grade is that of captain, but he ranks as a rear admiral while holding his present post.

Representative J. Adam Bede was once the speaker at a banquet at Grand Rapids, Mich., at which women were admitted to hear the speeches. Mr. Bede apologized for the nonappearance of Representative Watson of Indiana, who, he said, was detained at home because of "family matters."

"I want it distinctly understood," said Mr. Bede, "that under the Roosevelt administration the national bird has been changed from the eagle to the stork. The eagle may scream, but the stork delivers the goods."

Mammoth Cave.

For many years after the discovery of Mammoth cave the entire work of exploration was practically in the hands of negro slaves, the property of the man who owned the cave. Sometimes they would come to an obstacle that barred the passage, such as a great limestone rock or a yawning crevasse across the way. Such obstacles would often stop exploration in that direction for years, though beyond the obstruction there were likely to be scores of beautiful chambers and many miles of passageways. Thus it happened that for years nothing was known of that large part of the cave lying beyond the abyss named the Bottomless pit. This obstruction was known for over twenty years before it was crossed. Then one day in 1837 the negro cave explorer Stephen and some of his fellows dragged to the place the trunk of a small tree, and on this rather dangerous bridge Stephen crawled across the abyss. Then began the explorations that revealed one of the most wonderful and extensive parts of Mammoth cave. The abyss was found later to be 180 feet deep.

Some Witty Titles.

The pupils of one of the high schools of Philadelphia evinced great interest in a competition for a prize to be awarded the pupil who should submit the wittiest list of titles for twelve sham books on a dummy shelf. The following are some of the titles received in the competition:

"A New England Puss," by M. E. W.
"Thoughts On My Bed," Stead.
"On Different Tacks," by Van Hammer.
"Lizzie Wouldn't," by John Wood.
"The Fatal Blow," by John Knox.
Porter's "Tales of Lost Baggage."
"Lost In the Wash," by the author of "Bachelor's Buttons."
"Grinding the Poor," by Mill.
"Owe No Man," by O. W. Holmes.
"After the Ball," by the author of "Our National Game."
Morse on "Our Old Houses."
"Woodchucks and Rabbits," by Burroughs.
"E. E.," by the author of "My Double."

An Unconscious Meal.

Once John Muir, author and rancher man, was dining with a friend. They sat down, and Muir began to tell a story. The waiter came around several times, but the story was so good nothing was ordered. Muir talked and talked, and in between he would reach over and break off a piece of bread from a French loaf on the table. This he did a good many times. The story reminded him of another, and so he talked and ate bread until finally, being very hungry, his companion broke in with:

"Well, what shall I order for you, Mr. Muir?"

"Order?" he repeated in his abstraction.

"Yes, order—to eat."

He looked over at the last little remaining piece of bread on the plate and said, as if waking from a dream:

"Eat? Why, I've had all I want. That bread was bully."—Bookman.

Large Thumbs.

"People of great strength of character, who are guided by the head rather than the heart, have large thumbs," says Irving R. Bacon. "Whenever you see a person with a strikingly large, well developed thumb, you may be almost certain you have before you one who is a natural born ruler, eminently practical and fond of whatever is useful. Wherefore also he is fond of history. A large thumbed woman may fall in love as deeply as her small thumbed sister, but will not marry unless she can see a sufficient bread and butter supply ahead. But she is more apt to be a real helpmate when adversity comes."—New York Journal.

In Lengthy Terms.

In the suburbs of one of our great cities recently a new resident stopped in front of his neighbor's gate and inquired of the boy swinging thereon:

"Is your pa home, sonny?"

"No, sir," replied the lad. "He went up the road apiece."

"Gone afoot?"

"No; about a mile."—Judge's Library

Singing and Gargling.

Singers do not give away their secrets of the voice. I know, however that some of the tenors and prima donnas use an astringent gargle when ever their vocal cords become so relaxed that very high notes are difficult to emit. One famous little tenor used cold tea that had drawn a long time Such a gargle, though, does not improve the quality of the voice, even if it does raise the pitch temporarily.

The popular gargle among opera artists is the solvent. It loosens crusts which form in the throat and nasal cavities and removes mucous which cannot be got rid of by coughing and hawking. A common wash is twelve grains of chlorate of potash to a wineglassful of warm water. Many singers and orators in order to render their voices clear and mellow use a gargle containing one teaspoonful of common salt and one of baking soda in a tumblerful of water. These gargles are improved by further adding some aromatic substances to stimulate the mucous membrane with which they come in contact.—New York Press.

Needles and Pins.

The Lancet tells of a peculiar case in a London hospital. The patient, a healthy Scotch girl, aged twenty years, was in the habit of putting pins in her mouth and sometimes had been known to fall asleep without removing them. She was admitted to the hospital, having swallowed five pins accidentally while fixing clothes, and by the help of emetics she was relieved of them. Returning home, she began regularly to vomit pins and got rid of twenty-three in the course of a month. She then began to produce needles, and in a fortnight thirteen came out from the following situations: The left nostril, the origin of the sternomastoid behind the left ear and a spot on the front of the right forearm. At the same time she continued vomiting pins until seventy-five had appeared. The needles were blackened and slightly eroded, and two of them were threaded with about three inches of thread.

He Emptied His Pockets.

The Comte de Corbieres, minister of the interior to Louis XVIII., while working in the king's cabinet one day became absorbed in his work and so far forgot himself as to place his snuffbox on the king's desk after taking snuff. The king observed this unheard of familiarity from the corner of his eye, but said nothing. Presently the minister whipped out his pocket handkerchief and placed it beside the snuffbox.

"M. de Corbieres," remarked the king at last, "you appear to be emptying your pockets."

"Perhaps so, sire," was the calm response, "but that is much better than filling them."

The king smiled at the clever hit at the corruption of some of the minister's predecessors. Corbieres was noted for his scrupulous integrity.

It is reported that in their dispair over the tariff situation, the Democrats purpose to adopt some sort of Prohibition plank with the hope of absorbing the Prohibition party, as they absorbed the Populist party in 1896. Considering the acute indigestion which Miss Democracy has suffered ever since she swallowed the "Pops," we should suppose that she would be chary of adopting a diet to which Democrats are as unaccustomed as they are to prohibition.

Attorney General Bonaparte announced that he is wholly unconcerned regarding he nicknames or epithets which are applied to him. In that respect he is like the President who sees only evidence that his shots have told when men like Chancellor Day and others abuse and vilify him.

District Attorney Endorsed.

The accusations of Foreman James Graham of the late Grand Jury against District Attorney W. B. Baker seem made of the unsubstantial substance of dreams in the face of the fact that nineteen out of the twenty-one grand jurymen, belonging to all creeds and political beliefs, have written the fearless official personal letters declaring their confidence in him and their belief that he used every means within his power to obtain a fair, unbiased investigation of every case brought before him. The letters are a complete vindication of Mr. Baker from the rank, scurrilous charges brought against him by Graham and C. E. Pitts.

Last week's Parish Mirror contained a letter from Juryman Bettinger which speaks in unmistakable terms of his opinion of Mr. Baker and his conduct of his office. The letter read:

"Apropos of the controversy between District Attorney W. B. Baker and James E. Graham, foreman of the last Grand Jury, and as a member of that Grand Jury wish to submit to you the following statement for publication.

During the session of the last Grand Jury I can truly say that I believe the District Attorney did everything in his power to aid in the investigation of every charge which had any foundation. Every witness called was subpoenaed by him and the investigation proceeded as far as it could into county matters without the report of the Comptroller or the county expert. Every witness whose name was given in any alleged charge of violation of the excise laws called and sworn. I regard the attack of the foreman on Mr. Baker as entirely unjust and uncalled for. I believe too, that this opinion is shared with me by a majority of the members of the Grand Jury."

DIED.

It is reported that Frank Pruner of Geneva, formerly of this city, died on March 13.

On Saturday morning, March 14, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Earl Howard, 73 Englewood Avenue Detroit, Mich., occured the death of the Rev. S. W. Titus in his 89th year. He was born in Oswego County June 11, 1819, and was pastor of the Fulton Baptist Church from 1857 to 1865.

Mrs Sarah E Briggs formerly of this city, died on Thursday at her home in Oneonta. The deceased was 76 years of age and is survived by her husband and one son, William. The remains were brought to the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Watson in this city, from where the funeral services were held, the Rev. J. C. York officiating.

Helen F. Carrier, aged 61, died at her home on Cayuga street, Saturday afternoon. The deceased was the widow of the late Luther S. Carrier, and was prominent in church and charitable work in this city. Her prolonged illness was borne with christian patience and fortitude. The survivors are two sisters—Mrs. Ida Walker of this city and Miss Belle Smith of Syracuse. The funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon and were conducted by the Rev. A. H. Grant of the Episcopal Church. Interment in Mount Adnah.

The death of William C. Stephens which was announced in the last issue of this paper occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs David M. Sinclair, in Brooklyn on Tuesday, March 10th.

There was no time to pay a tribute to the man: to his wonderful mentality which grew and brightened with years. Mr Stephens was one of the oldest practicing attorneys in New York State and he was widely known. For the past few years he had participated but little in life's activities owing to declining health, but he lived a contented life with his family, his friends and his books. Pneumonia caused the sudden death, the news of which brought regret to so many who had been associated with him in many ways for the past years

The remains were brought to this city on Friday and the funeral was held on Saturday afternoon from the home. Messrs. G. C. Webb, R. D. Parsons, C. M. Allen, I. Achilli, J. R. Fairgrieve and F. D. VanWagenen serving as bearers. Interment was made in the family lot in Mt. Adnah

Mr. Stephens was born in the village of Montrose, Pa. on May 12th, 1829. He was admitted to the bar in 1854 after having been graduated from the Albany Law School.

On April 17th, 1856 he married Sylvia J. Buell and for more than fifty years they have lived in their home in Fourth street.

Mr Stephens is survived by his widow, four daughters, Mrs. Gertrude S. Breed of Syracuse, Mrs. David M. Sinclair of Brooklyn, Mrs. Arthur B. Wright of Hartford, Conn., Mrs. Langdon C. Foster of Fulton, two sons, Charles A. Stephens of New York and John B. Stephens of Brooklyn, two brothers, Melvin F. Stephens of Fulton and John J. Stephens of Washington, D. C.

The general estimate of Mr. Stephens' life and character is fittingly expressed in the following resolutions adopted by his associates at the bar and in an extract from a letter written by one who knew him well

A Friend's Tribute

* * * * It is hard to realize that Mr. Stephens is no more. The dear old man will live in my memory as one of my most cherished friends. It seems but as yesterday that I said good bye to him and took him by the hand, while he with his old time courtesy expressed the hope of a joyful reunion at a later day, and now we shall never see him more.

I love to think of him as he was to me, the type of the gentleman of the old school, that school of courtesy and breeding, of education and thoughtfulness so gracious in its character. I never met Mr. Stephens that I did not feel that influence of the gentleman and the scholar for he was truly a man of erudition and experience. This culture was a vital part of him and indeed I recall him as one does a teacher. It may be truly said that he was eminently a thinker for as my mind calls back our many meetings the essential remembrance that lingers with me is that of having associated with a philosopher—a lover of wisdom.

Many were our disputations and inquiries and in all of these I was the learner, for our good friend had ever the gift of having something to say worth hearing. I never knew a man more given to provoke thought than he, and that peculiar way of his, of startling one by the utterance of some original query to be followed by a most comprehensive and profound exposition of its conditions, was always an uplift and an inspiration.

Mr. Stephens' mental equipment was most versatile and the instincts of a student were his. With a vein of humor ready and subtle going hand in hand as it were with the deeper thoughts of life, with a kindly spirit of brotherhood, a reverent spirit for the Supreme and a tender heart, he was indeed a most attractive personality.

I shall miss him deeply but how much more must those of his own feel his loss as a husband and father.

My duties here will not permit my attendance at the funeral but as my dear old friend is borne to the grave my heart will follow sadly and I will hold his memory in kind remembrance. * * * * *

Resolutions of Bar.

At a meeting of the members of the Bar of the City of Fulton, held on the 12th of March, 1908, a committee composed of C. H. Durfee, G. S. Piper and H. J. Fanning, was appointed to draft a suitable memorial upon the death of William C. Stephens. The committee reported the following, which was unanimously adopted:

Rounding out a life of nearly fourscore years, William C. Stephens has passed away.

He was born in Pennsylvania in 1829, was educated at Homer Academy and was graduated from the Albany Law School in 1854. He was admitted to the Bar the same year and entered upon the practice of his profession at Fulton as a member of the firm of Luddington & Stephens, of which the late A. N. Luddington, at that time District Attorney of the county, was a senior member. He afterwards became the senior member of the firm of Stephens & Pardee, practicing for several years with the late Emery S. Pardee.

For over half a century he has been an honorable member of the Bar of the State of New York. He was a lawyer of the old school, and was proud of his profession. He held various offices of trust, both in village and county, and filled them all with ability and integrity. He had much to do in an official capacity with the development, progress and growth of Fulton. He held the office of President for many years, and also served as Trustee and Police Justice.

In the practice of his profession, he regarded a retainer by a client as a sacred trust and fought his legal battle to the end with unusual persistency and ability.

He was not blessed with a strong constitution and lacked the physical strength for continuous hard labor, yet he never spared himself whenever a case of importance required his long and strenuous exertion, and in several notable cases, after defeat in the courts below brought victory to his clients in the court of last resort.

He was a wise and prudent counselor and advised a compromise, rather than lead his clients to disaster and defeat. He was kind and courteous in practice, extending to his adversary every favor that would not affect the rights of his clients.

He was a good companion, a kind and obliging neighbor, and a valued member of the circle in which he moved. He was beloved by his family and neighbors and was a true American citizen.

He was deeply interested in all that appertained to life, and the progress of events, but he entered the great change without fear, with an unfaltering trust in the future.

It was resolved that the members of the Bar attend the funeral of Mr. Stephens in a body, and that a copy of the foregoing memorial be sent to the family of the deceased.

City Officials to be Sued.

Attorneys McCarthy & Pidgeon of Oswego have caused the service of summonses upon Chief of Police Wm H. Ross, Patrolman Michael Bray and City Judge Frederick G. Spencer of this city and Mrs. Elizabeth Stableford of New York in a Supreme Court action brought by Timothy Sullivan of Battle Island.

The complaint does not accompany the summons therefore it can only be commenced by Sullivan for false imprisonment. It will be recalled that several months ago Sullivan was arrested for kidnapping one Eugene Spellman and he was arraigned before Judge Spencer on this charge and was held to await the action of the Grand Jury. When brought before Judge Stowell by writ of habeas corpus by his attorneys, Judge Stowell held that Judge Spencer had no jurisdiction in the case and Sullivan was discharged from custody. It is now thought the action is brought to recover damages.

State Commissioner of Excise Clement reports that he has received $746.68 in payment of a judgment recovered in an action brought by him against Harrison Wells and the surety on his liquor tax bond. Wells trafficked in liquors at No. 583 South First street, and violated the Liquor Tax Law by selling liquor to minors.

Oswego finds itself in a peculiar predicament. Having invited the State Fireman's convention to meet within its gates, and having had the invitation accepted, it now hesitates and calls a public meeting to decide whether or not the windy city shall carry out the terms of the invitation. Evidently our neighboring city prefers to speed the coming guest rather than to welcome it.

Mrs. J. O'Brien, No. 414 Cayuga street has received a letter from Mrs. Martin, who with her family left for California a few weeks since. Mrs. Martin writes that the trip was pleasant and interesting, a not uninteresting feature being the fact that the train left the track between San Barnindo and Orange, Calif., without injuring anyone. The accident happened in an immense orange grove in full fruit and the owner gave the passengers all the oranges fresh from his trees, that they cared to take with them. Mrs. Martin and family are well and happy.

Mrs. Nettie Stoutenger, 23 years old, was taken to the county home by Commissioner of Charities A. W. Stoneburgh. She and her 5-year-old son were left destitute by her husband, Leonard Stoutenger, who disappeared about three weeks ago. Almost immediately upon the disappearance of her husband, application for assistance was made to the Department of Charities and the commissioner found a home for the boy with Mr. and Mrs. Charles House of No. 411 Utica street.

When the employes in the yarn department of the woolen mill reached the plant on Monday morning they were informed that an order had been received late on Saturday compelling the closing of the department until April 15. This action throws about 500 hands out. The mill has been running slack time for several months and this is the culmination of the trouble. As the Times understands it, the late financial stringency has nothing to do with the shut down, but the fact that union tailors refuse to cut cloth made in any of the mills in the combine, is responsible. This would seem a reasonable belief, inasmuch as the independent mills throughout the country are employed full time, so far as it is possible to ascertain. It is devoutely to be hoped that the difficulty, whatever it may be, will be speedily adjusted.

CHAPTER XV.

THE following day was an eventful one for the various members of the Renwyck household. Mr. Renwyck went earlier than usual to the city and in spite of a somewhat uneasy conscience worked ceaselessly to the furtherance of his harbor scheme. His triggers were set, and he only waited now for the trap to spring and catch Bill Williams in its fall and incidentally the Peace and Good Will gullibility—no. Realty company. Mr. Michael Corrigan was also quite busy during the day, though his occupation was a pleasant one. At least he seemed to derive intense amusement from the receipt of a number of lengthy telegrams from various points.

Richard, too, had occasion to use the wires, but in a different manner. Immediately after breakfast he made his excuses to the ladies and took a train for New York. At the telegraph office he sent out the following dispatch:

Mr. William J. Williams:
Mistake. Am all right and unhurt. Return to Austin at once and watch harbor deal. RICHARD WILLIAMS.

The young man made a number of copies of the telegram and had them sent to various junction points along all possible routes between Texas and New York, in the hope that his father might be intercepted on whatsoever train he might be a passenger and receive one of them. And in order to make assurance doubly sure he gave orders that the telegrams were to be repeated regardless of expense until the sendee had been reached. Richard had a perfect right to say that he was well and unhurt, and in consideration of Mr. Renwyck's method of doing business he persuaded himself that he was also right in adding his noncommittal warning. By this he hoped to put the cattle king on his guard, in which case he trusted to his father's shrewdness to circumvent the enemy.

This duly discharged, Richard called at St. Luke's hospital and was much distressed to learn that Lord Croyland was not doing well at all. He had developed a high fever, and in his present condition could receive no visitors Richard therefore could only leave the earl's mail, securely done up in a package addressed to Mr. Richard Williams, with the message that Mr. Peter Wilson had called and would come again within a day or two. Then, having nothing else to keep him in the city, after a stop at a flower shop he returned to Irvington.

In the meantime the final rehearsal of "The Man and the Bird" was materially interfered with by an upheaval of conflicting emotions on the part of Miss Imogene Chittendon. By the morning post that young lady received a letter, which she read through several times, then ran to her room, flung herself upon the bed and expressed her emotion in tears and hysterics.

Miss Renwyck, in passing through the hall, caught the sound of weeping and went in to comfort her. She found Miss Imogene in a truly pitiable state, and the better part of an hour elapsed before an intelligent explanation of the trouble could be obtained. Miss Chittendon told her story in jerky, disjointed sentences, so interspersed with sobs and gasps that to quote her in detail would be an utter impossibility. The thread of the romance ran in this wise:

Several months previous to the opening of this narrative Miss Imogene had been a pupil in a fashionable young ladies' school in Morristown, N. J. Like many of her mates, she had carried on innocent flirtations beneath the very noses of certain stately gray headed wardens of propriety harmlessly enough. In her last and most violent affaire du coeur, however, she suddenly found cause bitterly to regret her rashness.

Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge—the last Morristown object of Miss Imogene's transient affections—posed as a lieutenant in the United States army on a leave of absence, spending a furlough at the quiet little Jersey town. He was of a romantic disposition and appeared a very dashing blade, bewilderingly good looking to a pent-up schoolgirl in spite of a certain physical defect. The lieutenant was possessed of many other accomplishments, known and unknown to Miss Imogene, among which, according to the young lady's own statement, "he could make love just beautifully in the moonlight over a garden wall that was just covered with broken glass and a horrid wire with stickers all over it."

Be that as it may, this Romeo was untowardly discovered in the midst of a most poetical speech across the aforesaid wall one spring night about 10 o'clock, and the touching love scene then in progress came to an abrupt, not to say painful, end. This was caused by the pulling of Roderick Fitzgeorge's ladder from under him by the villain in the piece—the night watchman—who had treacherously crept along the garden wall at the instigation of the protagonist of the drama, the principal of the school, who, splendidly served by her intelligence department, had ruthlessly interrupted the course of true love.

The little drama ended in two more acts, the first a severe curtain lecture and a strict quarantine until graduation day for the fair Juliet and the second a brief hospital scene for the disturbed Romeo, who had encountered the watchman's club at the foot of the ladder.

Miss Imogene of course was furious. Therefore she wrote quite a dozen letters to the afflicted martyr, which she succeeded in smuggling to him, expressing her sentiments in far warmer phrases than otherwise might have been dictated by discretion or were justified by the facts of the case. She felt that her youthful heart—the dent Roderick's leg, to say nothing of his head—was broken irremediably, though the human heart requires a longer time to heal than fractured limb or cranium. But time cured both afflictions, and it came about in this wise:

A few days following his recovery Mr. Fitzgeorge left town between two trains. Many whisperings went around as to the cause of this precipitate departure, and many strange coincidences were noted. Among them was the somewhat prominent mention of a merchant's safe discovered the morning after his departure in a condition resembling Miss Imogene's broken heart. Of all this, however, Miss Chittendon knew nothing, and for many days she mourned. Of course dear Roderick knew nothing about the affair and only left Morristown because his leave of absence had expired or because he was angry at the residents of —but, whatever his reason, Miss Imogene was sure it was a good one. However that might be, from Mr. Fitzgeorge's point of view it was an imperative one.

With the lapse of time and with the advent of other objets d'affection—as her Cornelius Van der Awe, for instance—this love passage was dropped from Miss Chittendon's memory, especially as she had never heard from the recreant Roderick until he was brought rudely to her recollection by the receipt that morning of a fateful letter. In this document Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge advised her briefly that, owing to several unhappy circumstances, he was forced to leave for the far west and, being lightly supplied with funds, would be grateful if she could spare her devoted lover a hundred dollars for the journey.

In case she found it inconvenient he still had in his possession a dozen letters which would not look well if printed in the newspapers. In case she did find it convenient to make the loan, which, knowing her generous nature, her correspondent did not doubt, she was first to tie a piece of white string on the left post of the Renwycks' front gate as a signal of assent, then open the library window at 3 o'clock on Friday night, when Mr. Fitzgeorge would enter, exchange her letters for the sum above mentioned and bid her an eternal farewell. If Miss Chittendon played him false—of which perish the thought—a friend had copies of said correspondence, which would immediately be published, together with the garbled details of the former romance, a condition undesirable for a lady so widely known in the social world. The letter ended with the hope that Miss Chittendon was enjoying good health and spirits and that she might persuade herself to meet him on Friday, as requested.

To say that Miss Imogene was terrified would be putting it mildly. Her resulting condition bordered upon complete collapse, mental and physical.

"Oh, Harriet, Harriet!" she sobbed. "Whatever shall I do?"

"My dear," returned her friend as she bathed the sufferer's temples with cologne, "it is perfectly simple. You need give yourself no uneasiness. Father will quietly put the matter in the hands of the police. We will then tie the white string on the gatepost, and when this wretch enters the library window he will find himself in the arms of our officers, and we will not only have the letters, but the man."

Miss Renwyck's plan was based upon wisdom and sound common sense, yet to the frightened Miss Imogene it was the worst possible thing to do. She felt certain that if caught the man would put his threat into execution and expose the copies of her letters to the eager gaze of society. To prevent such a happening she would gladly pay five times the sum demanded. Therefore she decided hysterically that Harriet's plan was out of the question.

"Oh, Harriet, dear," she wailed, "you don't know how silly my letters were, and I'd go through anything to get them back again. Why, the pet names I called that creature—good gracious, Harriet—they were positively mushy!"

"What did you call him?" asked Miss Renwyck, humorously interested in this phase of the romance.

"'Roddy-poddykins' was one," confessed the debutante, with a vivid blush. "Then there were a whole lot more like that and worse—really, darling, I'd rather not tell them even to you. I should die of shame if Mr. Van der Awe or Lord Croyland or any one knew."

Miss Renwyck smiled, while the indiscreet Juliet went on tying her handkerchief into hard, wet knots.

"I've just got to see him, Harriet. I know I shall be just scared to death; but, no matter what you say, I'll not allow you to tell a single solitary soul, and if I'm found dead on the library floor in the morning nobody will care anyway—so there!"

The sufferer's state now became so alarming that her friend was forced to suggest another plan. It was against her better judgment, but something had to be done at once, for otherwise Miss Imogene would never be in a condition to act the part of the bird in the play that evening.

"Imogene," she said sternly, "stop crying this instant and listen to me. I believe you will do a very wrong thing in seeing Mr. Fitzgeorge in the middle of the night, but of course I have no right to interfere against your wishes. I am older than you, and I tell you candidly I don't like it. How much money have you with you?"

"Fifty dollars, and I'll give him jewelry enough to make up the balance."

"That won't be necessary. I'll lend you whatever you need, and if you still insist upon seeing the man I will go down with you."

In an instant more two very shaky little arms were twined about Miss Renwyck's neck and a sobby voice was pouring delirious thanks into her ears.

When the fear of creeping down a flight of dark stairs alone was eased by the thought of companionship the sentimental young lady began to view the affair in an entirely different light. It would be an adventure which appealed to her strongly. There would be no earthly danger, she argued, as each would be a protection to the other, while if the worst came to the worst their screams would quickly summon aid.

The more Miss Imogene thought of it the more excited she became, declaring finally that she would gladly pay $100—which somebody else had earned for her, by the way—just for the fun of the thing. She felt now that she had exaggerated the possibility of danger, as the wretched, disgraceful man was after money only and would go away instantly he had received it.

"You see," she explained, "he shows his intentions are not bad by his very letter. If he had asked me to meet him outside in the dark somewhere I shouldn't have dared, but coming here into the library, where we can call for assistance, shows that he means no harm."

"But suppose he should not come alone?" suggested Miss Harriet.

"But he will," the other continued. "Besides, you and I will stand in the door on the opposite side of the room, and the moment we see two men instead of one, why, then, dear, we'll just begin to scream 'Fire!' or something like that, and then we can say we heard a noise and came down. Oh, Harriet, precious, do go and find a piece of white string!"

Miss Renwyck was not convinced. She did not lack courage for a woman, nor had she any actual fear of this man, who was clearly an ordinary petty blackmailer who tried to make profit out of an innocent schoolgirl's foolish correspondence. She could not imagine any other motive for his coming, inasmuch as the library window would be opened by an inmate of the house and closed and locked again immediately after his departure. Yes, clearly it was blackmail, and if Imogene had her letters returned intact perhaps it was the easiest solution after all.

"What sort of a looking person is this Mr.—er—Roddy-poddykins?" she asked, with a smile.

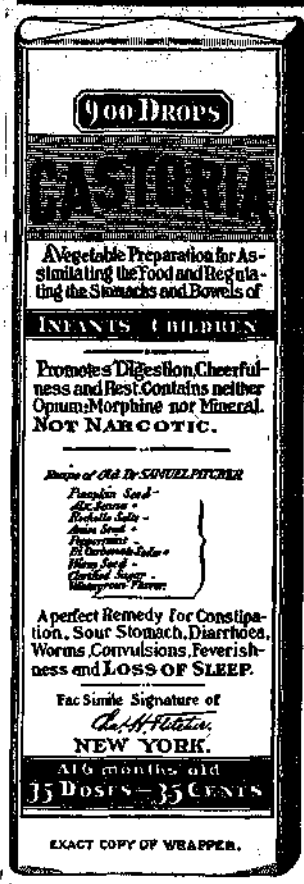
"Now, please do not call him that," begged Miss Imogene. "It makes me

"Stop crying this instant and listen to me."

feel like such a silly. Side face he is very handsome, you know, but full face—well, there is something the matter with one of his eyes."

"How do you mean?"

"Oh, I don't know!" she answered doubtfully. "He is looking at you all the time, you understand, but his eye seems to be pointing somewhere else. I think they call it a cast."



"Oh," said Miss Renwyck, "Uncle Michael told me never to trust a person with—with a cast in his eye!"

"Did he?" asked the debutante. "I wonder why. Oh, well, I'll never trust one—never again. Now, come on, precious, and let's tie the string on the gatepost!"

(To be continued.)

Not Disturbed.

Nassau William Senior, the English political economist, was a frequent guest of Lord Lansdowne at Lansdowne House and on one occasion was busily writing, quite abstracted as usual, in a room full of company when Tom Moore was singing. The scratch of his pen was not an agreeable accompaniment, and at last one of the company asked very politely, "You are not fond of music, Mr. Senior?" "No," he replied, "but it does not disturb me in the least. Pray go on."

Proving His Motto.

"Well, sir," exclaimed the millionaire, "what do you want this morning?"

"I've come again to ask for your daughter," said the poor but ambitious young man.

"Haven't I told you six times over on as many different days that it is out of the question? What do you mean by bothering me in this way? You are making a nuisance of yourself!"

"If I seem to be more persistent than circumstances warrant, I must insist that you, sir, are to blame."

"Me!" shouted the indignant old man. "I don't understand you."

"There," said the man who loved his daughter as he pointed to a motto over the banker's desk, "is my excuse for coming here day after day. 'If at first you don't succeed, try, try, try again.' Do you believe in that sentiment, or have you put it up there simply to deceive people?"

After he had scratched his head awhile the mean old plutocrat said:

"Yes, I believe in that. I haven't succeeded yet in making you understand that my daughter shall not become the wife of a fool, but I am going to keep on trying till I do! Good morning!"

What the Cat Had.

The teacher of the Sunday school class was telling the little boys about temptation and showing how it sometimes came in the most attractive form. She used as an illustration the paw of a cat.

"Now," said she, "you have all seen the paw of a cat. It is as soft as velvet, isn't it?"

"Yessum," from the class.

"And you have seen the paw of a dog?"

"Yessum."

"Well, although the cat's paw seems like velvet, there is nevertheless concealed in it something that hurts. What is it?"

No answer.

"The dog bites," said the teacher, "when he is in anger. But what does the cat do?"

"Scratches," said a boy.

"Correct," said the teacher, nodding her head approvingly. "Now, what has the cat got that the dog hasn't?"

"Whiskers!" said a boy on the back seat.—Home Magazine.

Bible Blunders.

Some curious errors have crept into the Bible at various times, giving names to the editions containing them. Here are some instances: The "Unrighteous" Bible, from the misprint "the 'unrighteous' shall inherit the kingdom; the "Placemakers'" Bible, "blessed are the placemakers'" (peacemakers); the "Printers'" Bible, "the 'printers' (for princes) have persecuted me;" the "Treacle" Bible, "Is there no 'treacle' (balm) in Gilead?" the "Vinegar" Bible, "the parable of the 'vinegar'" (vineyard); the "Bug" Bible, "thou shalt not be afraid of 'bugs' (bogies) by night;" the "Breeches" Bible, "they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves 'breeches;'" the "Idle" Bible, "woe to the 'idle'" (idol), and finally the "Wooden Leg" Testament, so called from the frontispiece depicting Satan limping with a wooden leg.

The Hundred Best Books.

"The fact is that there is no possibility of naming the hundred best books. The naming of them for any large general audience is quite impossible. All that is possible in such a connection is to state emphatically that there are very few books that are equally suitable to every kind of intellect," says Clement Shorter in his book of "Immortal Memories." "Temperament as well as intellectual endowment makes for so much in reading. Take, for example, the 'Imitation of Christ.' George Eliot, although not a Christian, found it soul satisfying. Thackeray, as I think a more robust intellect, found it well nigh as mischievous as did Eugene Sue. There are great books that can be read only by the few, but surely the very greatest appeal alike to the man of rich intellectual endowment and to the man to whom all processes of reasoning are incomprehensible."

Same, but More of It.

Sitting in a Broadway restaurant the other evening were two young women who had not met for four years. One of them had grown stout and the other had admitted that she wouldn't have recognized her old friend under ordinary circumstances. They sat silently looking at each other for a moment, when the heavyweight inquired:

"What are you thinking about?"

"I was just trying to see whether your expression is the same as it used to be," said her friend.

"Just the same," the girl with the avoirdupois declared. "Only more of it."—New York Globe.

The Meriden, Conn., Journal of March 7, contains notice of a former well-known Fultonian, Mr. M. B. Schenck, who has grown with and prospered in the city of his adoption. It gives his friends in this city pleasure to know of the trust and respect which is reposed in him by his friends and neighbors. The article says in part: "Mayor Reilly today announced two appointments for the board of apportionment and taxation, the principal commission of the city. Both are to fill vacancies, one caused by the death of John McWeeney and the other by the resignation of John C. Byxbee. Michael F. Fitzgerald, of Linsley avenue, takes Mr. McWeeney's place and Martin B. Schenck is named in place of Mr. Byxbee. Mr. Schenck is the president of the M. B. Schenck company, one of Meriden's most prosperous manufacturing concerns, and has long been deeply interested in municipal affairs. He served in the Council and at present is a member of the school board. Mr. Schenck has proven his business capacity by building up a splendid business and he is certain to prove a valuable member of the taxation board. Messrs. On Board Transport Kilpatrick.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Guy B. Loomis, who is on board the transport Kilpatrick, to his mother, Mrs. C. J. Hammond of this city. Mr. Loomis enlisted recently in the United States service.

"We left Fort Monroe a week ago today on the Transport Kilpatrick. Were on the water for five days with no sight of land and the second morning out I reached the rail of the ship just in time to contribute my supper to the sea. First two days the water was rough and nearly all of us were sick, but on the third day we struck the gulf stream and steamed along nicely for the rest of the trip. Today I am feeling all O. K. Last night I went down city to the Theatorium. People back of the curtain talk just as the people demonstrate and the result is fine. We get drilled pretty much of the day time and I am getting on very well.

We are allowed to go out around the city at night after "retreat" which is the roll call and lowering of the flag. We are obliged to be in bed by 11:00 p. m. If we are late the guard challenges us at thirty paces from his post, Halt! Who goes there! Naturally a person answers, friends. At this he calls to the corporal of the guard, Friends. He then says "advance friends, to be recognized." The soldier promptly advances to corporal of the guard, gives his name and company. He is thereupon dismissed and enters his quarters as quietly as possible; the doors are left partly open all of the time. This was my own experience last night, but being as yet a recruit and a stranger in the city I was excused from any fine. Fines are usually from three to five dollars.

The weather is nice here, just about the same as mid-summer in New York State. It had been raining when we got off the train at Mantanzas and rained hard as we marched up the slope to the fort. We came by rail from Havana which is about five hours ride from here. I am perfectly satisfied with army life and glad I enlisted. United States money is good here, but the Spanish coin is the native currency. American or foreign stamps cannot be used on outgoing mail so find stamps enclosed. I thought it would be best for you not to write until I had been assigned to my company but now here I am. Will try and await with patience a letter from home. There is no danger of my changing my residence right away.

Under separate cover am sending a box of sea shells which I thought you might like.

Write me a good long letter and tell me all about everybody.

HAY FEVER

WILLIAM B. ALLISON, DEAN OF THE SENATE

Veteran Senator Whose Contest With Governor Cummins Is Attracting Much Attention—His Remarkable Career.

Iowa Statesman Has Served Thirty-five Years in the Upper Branch of Congress—His Strict Conservatism.

THE contest in Iowa between Governor Albert B. Cummins and Senator William B. Allison over the latter's seat in the upper branch of congress is attracting considerable attention. Both men are national figures and both have a following of devoted and trustworthy admirers. The adherents of the present senator claim that his splendid service during a period of so many years should entitle him to the retention of his seat as long as he may desire it. The governor's friends say that Mr. Allison ought to be content with the honors he has had and give the younger blood a chance. Mr. Allison is the dean of the senate, which he entered in March, 1873, having previously served in the house in the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth and Forty-first congresses. His service in the senate covers a period of thirty-five years. The senator recently celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday. While he is not the oldest member of the senate, his continuous service covers a period longer than that which can be credited to any other member.

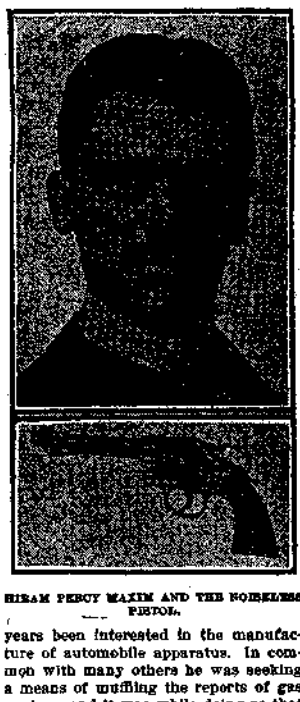
Senator Allison and Governor Cummins were born in adjoining states, the former in Ohio and the latter in Pennsylvania. The governor is fifty-eight and in the prime of his manhood, with iron gray hair and erect, athletic figure. He is nearly six feet in height. It has been said of him that wherever he sits down there is the head of the table. He is the author of the "Iowa idea" regarding the tariff and is the first man in his state to be nominated and elected governor for a third term. He broke up the operations of the barbed wire trust west of the Mississippi and has fought the railroad lobby in his state to a standstill. Cummins has been likened to La Follette. The two have political histories in many respects similar. Both have presidential aspirations. Both stand for tariff revision, for railroad control, for primary reform and popular election of senators and elimination of corporation influence from politics. Cummins has been carpenter, express messenger, civil engineer and lawyer. He was a candidate for the senate in 1899 and was defeated by three votes through railroad influence.

Governor Cummins was pointed out at the Republican national convention in 1900 as the handsomest man on the platform. The first time he ran for governor of Iowa they called him "Handsome Albert" and "the Des Moines Apollo," in the notion that those were damning epithets, but he was nominated, and the veriest hayseed in the convention that named him said, "Well, our county wan't much for him, but when I seen 'im up in 'is room he looked so much like a guv-ner that I concluded I'd vote for 'im, anyhow."

Senator Allison is recognized as one of the foremost statesmen of his day. He has been described as "the youngest old man in the senate." He has red cheeks and a handsome head of rumpled white hair. He is polished, leisurely and courteous upon all occasions, was never known to be excited or angry and in the course of his thirty-five years of service in the senate has accumulated a store of knowledge which has made him of great value as a legislator for the nation. He has often been talked of for president, but, as some one put it, "the bee of emulation was in his bonnet; the canker of disappointment was never in his heart." His quiet, easy manner and his cautiousness in taking a position on any question have led to many jokes among his colleagues in the senate, with whom, however, he is very popular. The late Senator Vest once said that he could walk over eggs without fracturing a shell. Another member declared that he could walk with hobnailed shoes on piano keys from Washington to Dubuque and never strike a note. One of the senator's characteristics is that of guardedness in answering a question. A correspondent once inquired of him when he thought congress would adjourn.

"I can't say," the Iowan replied.

"But it will adjourn soon, won't it?"



"As to that," the senator replied, "I am reminded of the story of the man who went out riding and was caught in a rainstorm. He didn't know whether to go on or seek shelter, and he applied to a farmer who was plodding along the road. 'My good man,' he said, 'do you think it is likely to stop raining?' 'Well,' said the farmer, 'it always has.'"

A NOISELESS GUN.

Dangerous Possibilities of the Invention of Hiram Percy Maxim.

The terrible possibilities of the new silent gun, the invention of Hiram Percy Maxim, have almost appalled the man who fathered the idea. The Maxim family is a very inventive one, especially where guns are concerned. The Maxim in question is a son of Sir Hiram S. Maxim, whose name is associated with many inventions of much importance and especially engines of war.

As the elder Maxim invented the Maxim quick firing gun and the automatic system of firearms as well as the smokeless powder known as cordite, it seems quite in line with family traditions that the younger man should invent a gun which may be fired without making a loud explosion. The principle of this firearm is similar to that of the automobile muffler, the gas produced by the ignition of the powder being allowed to escape gradually, thus preventing the sudden impact with the atmosphere which causes the noise when the ordinary rifle or pistol is fired. The device may be applied to any ordinary pistol or gun. Mr. Maxim has for some years been interested in the manufacture of automobile apparatus. In common with many others he was seeking a means of muffling the reports of gas engines, and it was while doing so that he ran across the invention he has just patented. In the case of the automobile he located the seat of the trouble in the piston of the engine, and when he arrived at the solution of the problem the idea flashed across his mind that if he could kill noise in the motor vehicle by application of the principle he had discovered he could apply the same theory to weapons of war. Strangely enough, like the mythical individual who opened Pandora's box and let out the mischief makers, Mr. Maxim once he had invented noiseless guns began to regret it on account of the dangerous possibilities he had created.

"I am fully conscious," said he, "of the awful possibilities of this gun, and my conscience is not at all easy on the subject. If it could be taken hold of by the government alone and its manufacture be restricted to the government, it might not be so bad. It is not a perfectly noiseless affair—that is to say, there is a slight hissing sound, perceptible a few yards away perhaps. But in the open air the rustling of the leaves in the trees or the noise of passing wagons would completely drown the sound of the gun. You would not even know what had killed the victim until an examination was made."

Mr. Maxim's fear is that foreign governments may learn the secret and arm their forces with noiseless guns or that the latter may get in the hands of the criminal classes, the Black Hand conspirators, for instance. "Perhaps," he says, "I'd better get to work right off and try to devise something that will offer a means of protection against the gun."

The Choice.

A young man stood before the mirror completing the finishing touches to a toilet of which he felt justly proud.

He was going to call upon the girl's widowed mother to ask for her daughter's hand in marriage.

At last everything was complete except his cravat. Before him on the dressing table spread the two cravats between which his choice rested, one, a neat black with a narrow white stripe, which he had bought himself; the other a cravat which the girl had given him for a present, a tie such as only women purchase.

"If I wear the black and white one, I'll look my best," he mused. "On the other hand, if I wear the one she gave me I'll please her immensely, but will look like a fright."

Then he whistled, walked around the room and carefully tied his cravat.

The mother said, "Yes," although there were tears in her eyes, and the girl thought he was the handsomest and best dressed man in the world.

Which cravat did he wear?—Bohemian Magazine.

In the Ghost Laying Business.

This advertisement appeared in London in 1777:

"Haunted Houses.—Whereas there are mansions and castles in England and Wales which for many years have been uninhabited and are now falling into decay by their being haunted and visited by evil spirits or the spirits of those who for unknown reasons are rendered miserable even in the grave, a gentleman who has made the tour of Europe, of a particular turn of mind and deeply skilled in the abstruse and sacred science of exorcism, hereby offers his assistance to any owner or proprietor of such premises and undertakes to render the same free from the visitation of such spirits, be their cause what it may, and render them tenantable and useful to the proprietors. Letters addressed to the Rev. John Jones, 30 St. Martin's lane, duly answered and interview given if required. N. B.—Rooms rendered habitable in six days."

Durability of Glass.

It does not seem odd to find inscriptions written ages ago still visible on the Tower of London or on the steeple of some cathedral, but one would hardly look on a fragile pane of glass in a common window for characters 200 years old. A notable case in point is that of the old house in London wherein the notorious Jack Sheppard once lived as a carpenter's apprentice. One of the window panes still bears an inscription cut in it by a glazier's diamond recording the name and address of a man who preceded Jack's master in that house.

The inscription is, "John Woolley Brand, Painter and Glazier, March 12, 1706."

That was nine years before the coming to the house of the famous Jack Sheppard and over 200 years ago.

Alexander the Great's Escape.

As a young man Alexander the Great escaped death in a curious manner. A great banquet was being held at Pella, the capital of Macedonia, at which were present the future conqueror of the world and his father, Philip. During the feast one of the guests proposed a toast and prayer offensive to Alexander, who hurled a goblet at him. King Philip, angry at this outrage, started up, drew his sword and rushed furiously upon his son, but he had drunk so deeply that before he reached him he fell prostrate among the terrified merrymakers. Not a whit perturbed at this extraordinary escape from death, Alexander retorted, "Here is a man preparing to cross from Europe into Asia who yet cannot step surely from one couch to another."

London's First Pawnbroker.

No one would guess that "uncle" had so illustrious an ancestor as a right reverend prelate, yet this seems to be so, for pawnbroking was first introduced into England by Michael de Northburg, bishop of London, in Edward III.'s reign. He set up an establishment for lending money to the poorer Londoners on portable property, and, according to Dugdale, if any sum so borrowed was not paid at the expiration of a year the preacher at St. Paul's cross was to announce that the pledge would be sold in fourteen days unless it was previously redeemed.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Servant.

"Remember," said the patriot, "that so long as you hold public office you are a servant of the people, a plain servant."

"Great Scott!" answered the suburban resident who had just been elected. "Can I act as haughty and overbearing and take as many holidays as all that?"—Washington Star.

To Keep From Breaking.

"My hero has a strong face," remarked the author.

"He needs it," replied the critic. "I notice his face falls every time he meets the heroine!"

Executing a Death Sentence.

Prince Urussov writes in his "Memoirs of a Russian Governor" of an acquaintance, one Von Rohren, a very kindly man, who liked to tell sometimes of his presence of mind and his police ability as demonstrated on one occasion at his former post. He was once called upon to be present at the execution of a Jewish criminal. The condemned man hung the required number of minutes and was taken down from the gallows, when the physician was supposed to confirm his death. But it appeared that they had forgotten to cut off the Jew's long, thick beard, thanks to which, although the noose had deprived the man of consciousness, it had not killed him. "Imagine yourself in my position," said Rohren. "The doctor told me the Jew would come back to life in five minutes. What was I to do? To hang him a second time I held to be impossible, and yet I had to execute the death sentence." "But what did you do, then?" I asked and received the memorable answer, "I had him buried quickly before he regained consciousness."

Two Clever Answers.

A pretty southern girl recently showed herself a match for the curious minded women in her boarding house who were bent on knowing what her father's business was.

As a matter of fact, he was an undertaker, but the girl was a bit sensitive on this point, so she made up her mind not to gratify their curiosity. When unduly pressed on the point she answered:

"He's a southern planter."

This was quite within the bounds of truth and completely threw the inquisitive one off the track.

The retort of a well known actress to a similar question about the occupation of her father, who was a letter carrier in her old home, was not inferior in finesse to that of the Dixie girl.

It was when she first began playing in London. Some one asking what business her father was engaged in, she sweetly replied that he was "a man of letters."—Pittsburg Leader.

At 4 in the Morning.

The hour of 4 a. m. has something mysterious about it. Cocks crow, people on the brink of death give up the ghost, every one who is asleep sleeps sounder, and even the watchful sentry can't always keep his eyes open. At this hour people are in their weakest state, and if life is just on the flicker it is not surprising that it goes out. Many a man's life has been saved by a spoonful of ammonia administered just when the clock strikes 4. The period of deepest sleep varies from 3 to 5 o'clock. An hour or two after going to bed you sleep very soundly, then your slumber grows gradually lighter, and it is easy enough to waken you at 1 or 2 o'clock. But when 4 o'clock comes you are in such a state of somnolence that you would take no notice of the end of the world.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Why Some Members Regret Reporting Out of Anti-racing Bills.

BITS OF PERSONAL GOSSIP.

The Bill Drafting Department a Valuable Branch That Comparatively Few People Know Exists—Hard Work of Assembly Elections Committee. Grady and Oliver.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

Albany, March 18.—Excitement over the anti race track betting bills is intense, and the ultimate fate of these measures is once again the topic of widest discussion. The action of the assembly codes committee in reporting out the measures unamended, as opposed to that of the senate codes committee, gave a new aspect to the situation. The senate committee reported out the bills amended to take effect on Sept. 1, following the general though unwritten rule in the New York legislature in regard to all code amendments. The assembly committee overturned the rule owing to the unusual nature of the circumstances attending the bills.

It is safe to say that a majority of the members of the legislature are regretful that the bills came out of the committees, for now they will have to go on record in one way or another either for or against them and, owing to the division of public opinion on the

SENATOR FULLER OF KINGS COUNTY.

[Senator Charles H. Fuller is a Democratic representative from Brooklyn. He is able and conservative and a member of the leading senate committee, that of finance, and is also on the committee of privileges and elections.]

subject, are certain to suffer in popularity no matter which way they vote. But the public clamor over the bills made it practically impossible for either committee to shoulder the responsibility of throttling the measures even if a majority of the members of either of them were so inclined.

The Direct Nomination Bill.

Rumors are afloat around the capitol that the governor's direct nomination bill will not be reported out of either the senate or assembly judiciary committee. The bill, which was introduced in the senate by Mr. Travis of Kings and in the assembly by Mr. Green of Kings, was prepared under the direct supervision of the governor and his legal adviser, Mr. Sanford. It is permissive and not mandatory in form. It is believed by many members of both houses that certain provisions in the bill are not practical or possible of satisfactory execution when put into actual effect.

The general belief is that the governor is so strongly in favor of the bill that if it does not come out of committee he will send an emergency message to the legislature. In that case a motion will be made to discharge from consideration of the bill whichever committee is then holding it back. It is on this "motion to discharge" that a lineup will occur on the bill.

A Dried Apple Bill.

Another of Senator Travis' bills is in part as follows:

Section 185. No person shall buy for resale, sell, expose or offer for sale as and for evaporated apples any evaporated apples intended to be used for food or for consumption by any person other than standard evaporated apples.

Sec. 186. Evaporated apples containing not more than 27 per centum of water or fluids as determined by drying for four hours at the temperature of boiling water shall be considered standard evaporated apples for the purpose of this act.

Sec. 187. No person or persons shall sell, offer or expose for sale apples, pears or peaches as and for New York state grown apples, pears or peaches if they were not grown or produced within the state of New York, nor shall they brand or label the package or barrel containing such apples, pears or peaches as New York state apples, pears or peaches if they were not grown or produced within the state of New York. Any person or persons packing or repacking or causing apples or pears to be packed or repacked to be sold upon the markets shall pack or repack or cause them to be packed or repacked in such a manner that each separ... packings or barrel shall be packed ... antially uniform without intent to ... the purchaser. Any person, per... corporation buying from a grower ... which are packed in pack... as marked or labeled with ... grower who causes such ... pears to be repacked in the ... or barrels or who uses the ... or barrels for the packing ... or apples or pears shall ... from each package or barrel the ... thereon. But the fac... ing of such package or barrel is not prohibited by this act.

Sec. 188. The term "barrel" when used in transactions of purchase or sale of apples, pears or quinces shall represent a quantity equal to 100 quarts of grain or dry measure and shall be of the following dimensions: Head diameter, 17¼ inches; length of stave, 28½ inches; bulge, not less than 64 inches outside measurement. If the barrel shall be made straight or without a bulge, it shall contain the same number of cubic inches as the barrel above described. Any person or persons making, manufacturing or causing to be made or manufactured barrels for use in the purchase or sale of apples, pears or quinces or any person or persons packing apples, pears or quinces in barels for sale or selling apples, pears or quinces in barrels containing a less quantity than the barrel herein specified shall brand said barrels upon each end and upon the outside, conspicuously, in letters one and one-half inches in length with the words, "Short Barrel."

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

For Reform in Stock Selling.

The anti bucket shop legislation is attracting considerable attention, and interest in it was augmented by the recent statements of President Roosevelt on the subject. In the assembly Mr. O'Brian of Erie and Mr. Wagner and Mr. Cuvillier of New York have introduced bills on the subject. Mr. Cuvillier is very anxious that his bill be given precedence over Mr. O'Brian's, and the race between these men is a spectacle worth witnessing. At a recent hearing before the assembly codes committee two firms operating chains of stock and grain brokerage houses in middle and western parts of the state had a representative appear and argue that Mr. O'Brian's bill would put out of business legitimate firms. Mr. O'Brian, however, contends that only "bucket shops" will be affected.

The Bill Drafting Department.

A highly important department of the legislature that few people not connected in some capacity with the capital know anything about is the bill drafting department. The amount of time and money this branch of the lawmaking machinery saves the state is incalculable. Any member who desires to introduce a bill or a resolution can get the most expert advice and instruction free of charge. The men in the department know exactly what to do in every imaginable case and just how to do it.

Legislators who submit their preliminary drafts of bills to the department have an advantage over the independent worker, for when the department draws a bill there is seldom occasion to amend it as to form and even as to subject matter. The department experts have at the finger tips references and information that would otherwise consume possibly days of research to obtain and construe by introducers of measures. Robert Cummings, head of the bill drafting department, is said to be one of the leading experts in the country on drawing bills. A well known senator said a day or two ago, "Cummings can detect a 'joker' in a bill as quickly as a well trained pointer dog scents a quail." The department also prevents many a foolish piece of proposed legislation from being introduced by producing court decisions, etc., bearing on points involved.

"Seeing New York."

The assembly committee on privileges and elections is thankful that there is a contest over the seat of Greenberg of New York. Any New York member whose seat is contested is cherished with fond devotion and affection by this committee. Why? Not because the committee thus is given work to do, but because the committee is "forced" to visit New York frequently in order to determine the correct count of the votes. These visits to New York are paid for by the state, and thus the committeemen have opportunity to spend enjoyable week ends in the big city without cost to themselves. As most of the committeemen are each year chosen from more or less rural districts, the holidays, it can be realized, are something worth while.

Of course the result of the contest over Mr. Greenberg's seat will not be decided until about the end of the session.

"Warhorse" to Retire.

Senator Grady of New York, the Democratic leader in the upper house, says that he will retire from politics soon, not intending to run again for the senate. Senator Grady has grown gray and worn in the role of "the warhorse of the Democracy." He has a country place at Mamaroneck, N. Y., where he will spend most of his time after leaving politics.

Jimmy Oliver Still Active.

"Paradise Jimmy" Oliver will probably not run for assembly again. He and Senator Grady can ill be spared by the minority, owing to the long service in the legislature, which has given them highly advanced education in lawmaking matters. Oliver, formerly minority leader, is over seventy years old and is becoming quite feeble. He could not stand the strain of another campaign, his friends believe.

Oliver, like Grady, is no respecter of persons. He sometimes says what he wants to say without thought of how much he may hurt somebody's feelings. On one occasion a prominent young member was in the midst of a speech that Oliver objected to. Oliver stepped out of his seat and seated himself beside the orator, who felt highly complimented and proceeded to "cut loose" with renewed vigor.

Suddenly Oliver rose and said: "May I interrupt the gentleman? Will he give way for a moment?"

Whereupon the young man said: "Certainly. I am only too glad to yield the floor for a few moments to my distinguished colleague."

"All right," answered Oliver, who at the top of his voice exclaimed: "Young man, I want to inform you that the police are downstairs looking for you. Go down and give yourself up!"

The speech that irritated Mr. Oliver so thoroughly ended then and there.

Local and Personal

Mr. N. L. Whitaker has resigned his office as secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and Attorney A. T. Jennings has been selected as his successor.

Miss Katherine Casey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Casey, has graduated from a Denver, Col., training shool for nurses.

Mrs. A. B. Church has received painful injuries as the result of being thrown from a cutter in which she and Mrs. Dolbear were driving.

Mr. Carl Chiler of West Monroe has announced his candidacy for the office of Sheriff. Mr. Chiler was a native of Granby and is one of the best known Republicans in the county.

Senator Francis H. Gates is a candidate for the State Senatorship from the counties of Madison, Chenango and Otsego counties. It will be interesting to learn how deep down in the barrel the Senator will dig this time to insure his election.

A five generation family with Mrs. Lewis Johnson as great-great-grandmother, Mr. Newton Johnson as great grandfather, Mrs. E. L. Beckwith as grandmother, Mrs. Harry Alexander as mother and little Miss Helen Francis Alexander as daughter, is boasted by Fulton.

The St. Patrick's Day window in J. C. O'Brien's store attracted much attention. It was probably the first time any local store had attempted so elaborate a trim in honor of the saint. The shamrock, the harp and the emerald tint were all therein displayed and with good effect. Decorator Knoffler originated and executed the design.

Garrett Brothers, who have conducted the livery in the Mason barns for some time, have leased the Lewis house barn and will take possession on April 1. Messrs. Garrett came to this city four years ago and opened livery stables. The prophesy was made at that time that their tenure would be short lived, owing to the very stubborn opposition and strong competition which they must combat. But they made a niche for themselves in the public esteem by their splendid service and their courteous treatment of their patrons, to the end that their business has assumed such proportions as to necessitate their securing more commodious quarters. The Times extends congratulations upon their success, to the young men.

On Friday afternoon at three o'clock the members of the Ladies' Bible Class of the Presbyterian church made a surprise visit upon their teacher, Mrs. J. J. Coit, which was indeed a surprise to the popular hostess. Each guest carried her fancy work as well as a dainty dish to be served at the 6 o'clock tea. The members of the committee had made every arrangement for an enjoyable time and their efforts were for a certainty crowned with success. The weather was unfavorable for a picnic but no jollier crowd ever attended a social gathering.

The Only "Merrymaking."

The school record kept by an old time teacher of "No. 6" in a New England village contains at least one item which moved a chance reader to smiles. It is this:

"Special honor badges were given to Flora and Minetta Lovert for the best attendance. During the entire school year they were not once absent to attend any picnic, reunion, excursion or merrymaking, the only exception being the afternoon of May 10, when their twin brothers were ill from the effect of something they had eaten and not expected to live, although they soon recovered."

WILLIAM C. STEPHENS.

A Reminiscence—For The Fulton Times.

The recent death of Mr. Stephens reminds me of days in which he regularly passed and repassed Falley Seminary when I was a school boy there. His home on Fourth street is vividly in memory and his own face and form are as well remembered as those of Principal Griffin himself. I thought him one of the most industrious lawyers I had ever seen and though his politics were not those of the majority of the seminary lads, we respected him thoroughly. Living so near old Falley, it was not strange if the fruit on his premises sometimes mysteriously disappeared. It was in the early sixties, pears were ripening and those on a certain dwarf tree, easily seen from the street, were apparently at their best when one night a boy from the City of Washington, in later years a prominent physician of the Capitol, said he would supply the fruit for the evening's repast. He was gone a surprisingly brief time, and on his return, told his story to the effect that the only climbing he had to do was in getting over Lawyer Stephens' fence, for as he graphically expressed it, "Why, boys, I positively felt real mean; there wasn't any work at all; the blanked little tree was so short I positively had to bend over to pick the pears. It didn't seem natural and I believe I'd rather climb to get my fruit."

In the light of later experience, I have wondered at the exceeding good nature and long endurance of the people who resided near the famous brick institution of learning, so long facing the park.

In the Fall of 1868 I returned to Fulton from college to cast my first vote. Having followed General Grant as a soldier, I was anxious to have the privilege of voting for him as a candidate for the presidency. I had taken the precaution of having my father see that my name was properly enrolled as a voter in the town and did not appear, my self, till the night before election day. At the polls I was accosted by Mr. Stephens, who was looking out for the interests of Horatio Seymour, with a question as to my age, evidently thinking I was not up to the voting standard. On my acquainting him with the facts in the case, he remarked that I was surely old enough but, "How about enrollment" and, when shown that my name was properly in place, he permitted me to proceed with my ballot. In the evening there was a great assemblage in Salmon's hall to hear the election returns. Some Readers of The Times will remember that said returns came in fast and furious and all one way, namely the Republican, except that from New York City not a word was heard, a part and parcel of the deep laid plan to steal the Empire State at whatever cost. Some of us would go across the street at intervals to see what the Democrats were doing in their rooms and a melancholy sight they were. Less than a corporal's guard in number, they sat with despondent faces, getting unbroken reports of Grant majorities, except as there would come occassionally a despatch saying, "It looks as though New York City would go for Seymour." Then there would be a great hurrah, but despondency speedily followed and I recall one particularly depressing telegram recording unusual Republican figures, when, in the saddest of tones, Mr. Stephens sighed forth, "Oh, haven't they any Democrats at all, out there?"

All of this was a long time ago and, possibly, is hardly worthy of recollection. It certainly is not to the disparagement of Mr. Stephens for whom I had the highest respect, even honoring, afterwards, his political opinions, knowing him to be perfectly sincere in them. To me he never seemed to grow old: years did not lessen the elasticity of his step. When told, during my last home visit, that he was in failing health I could not realize that he was far past the three score and ten of Bible note. In later years, it was a pleasure to meet him, particularly if we were threading the winding ways of the park, for somehow he brought back to me the time when, heart and fancy free, I looked upon the same scenes in school days.

SERIOUS ACCIDENTS.

On Monday afternoon as Ralph Hall, son of Dr. A. L. Hall, was examining an old revolver a cartridge exploded and the bullet entered his right eye, totally destroying the sight but without penetrating the brain. The young man came at once to his father's office in Oneida street for succor. He was suffering intensely but kept his courage to a remarkable degree. Dr. Hall conveyed him to the hospital and called Drs. Stockwell of Oswego and Wells of this city to the bedside where the eyeball was removed and the bullet discovered therein. At the present time the patient is doing nicely although the loss of his eye is an irreparable one.

Curtis Sheldon, a farmer from Ira, was painfully injured on Saturday afternoon as the result of his team of colts which he had tied to a post in Second street, becoming frightened at the 2:14 train from Oswego. Mr. Sheldon endeavored to hold them by the bits but they broke the halter and dashed madly into a nearby yard, crushing their owner against a nearby house. His jaw bones were fractured, upper and lower, and the entire side of his face was literally crushed to a pulp. He was removed to the hospital in the ambulance where Drs. Hall and Wells attended to his injuries.

George Long of the West Side was working on a derrick for the Fulton Contracting company on Saturday morning when a swinging boom broke and struck him on the head, a bolt fracturing the skull and lacerating a portion of the brain tissue. The unfortunate sufferer was taken to the hospital where he was operated upon by Drs. Fox, Russell and Cusack, the injured membrane being removed. The patient rallied nicely from the shock and the injury and his physician, Dr. Fox, is hopeful that he will recover.

Tuesday morning as Dell Weldon, aged 20, an employe of Commission Merchant George B. Palmer, was feeding the horses in Mr. Palmer's barn he was kicked in the face by a beast sustaining a broken jaw and a rupture of one of the muscles in his leg. Mr. Palmer conveyed his injured employe to his home where Dr. Gladman reduced the fracture and cared for the other injuries.

Readily Signing Contracts.

The former patrons of the Fulton Milk Producers association are rapidly signing their contracts to supply milk at the rate paid last year. The business of shipping milk from the East Side and the West Side stations has been combined, all milk being shipped from the East Side milk station, aggregating in the neighborhod of seventeen tons per day.

Dr. Charles R. Lee is convalescent from a severe attack of grippe.

Ruth, daughter of Editor and Mrs. B. G. Seamans of Pulaski, was operated on for appendicitis last week.

Mrs. Melissa Sparks is now making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Oscar M. Coe, No. 413 Cayuga Street.

It is well worth one's while to view the lower dam from the bridge. The amount of water running over it is stupendous.

Mr. Thomas McNamara sustained a badly mangled hand on Saturday, while employed in the Nestle factory.

Mrs. Charles Bacon suffered a relapse on Wednesday and her physical condition is causing her friends the keenest anxiety.

Ex-County Treasurer Thomas Moore was unable to leave on a contemplated southern trip last week owing to poor health.

The Mason stables in First street have been leased by Dr. E. H. Nodyne, who will take possession on April 1.

Optician W. P. Hillick will, after April 1, occupy the portion of the American Express office formerly occupied by F. T. Huntington with his watch repair work.

The farm house of Thomas Farley, near this city, was totally destroyed by fire early on Thursday morning. A falling stovepipe ignited the flooring. The household furnishing were nearly all saved. There was some Grange insurance.

The Riverside (California) Daily Press of March 4 announces that Mr. R. E. Turner of that city, formerly of Fulton, had recently sold a fourteen acre orange grove for $18,000. Mr. Turner's friends here are pleased to learn of his prosperity.

An exchange strikes the nail on the head when it says: If the farmer's milk checks were held up for so long a time as the country publisher is frequently held up for the amount due on his newspaper subscription, there would be someing doing, we fancy, throughout the rural districts and to the milk buyers as well.

The Eastern Star will hold a Rummage sale in the vacant store in the Lewis block on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Fred Keeler, Mrs. W. F. Hill, Mrs. John Wilson and Miss Alma Richardson and they desire that all who are interested collect articles for the sale at once.

The many friends of the Rev. James Roberts, formerly pastor of the Baptist church, this city, will be pleased to know of his success in the Second Baptist church, Toledo, Ohio, of which he has been pastor for some time. On Dec. 15 a magnificent new church was dedicated and later a three weeks' series of spacial revival services were held therein at which one hundred converts were made, seventy-seven of whom united with the church. At the last communion Mr. Roberts gave the hand of fellowship to fifty-five persons. Mr. Roberts was very successful during his pastorate here.

Mr. A. Petrie of Little Falls was a last week guest of Attorney C. E. Guile.

Mr. George V. Green of Amsterdam spent one day last week with Fulton friends.

Mrs. G. D. Jennings of Cortland has been in Fulton visiting with friends and looking after her property.

Professor and Mrs. F. W. Revels and friends of Syracuse spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Redhead.

Miss Helen Parsons of Oswego Town has offered to donate $500 towards a Syracuse University scholarship, providing some one else will do the rame.

The condition of the First street roadway is wretched, the accumulation of filth from the Winter, mixed with mud, slush and ice, makes it exceedingly disagreeable to cross the street.

Mrs. Leman Candee has returned to her home in Seventh Street after having been several weeks at the bedside of her sister, Mrs. Rushford Vickery in Phoenix. Mrs. Vickery is now gaining in health.

On Saturday, as a son of Mr. Elmer Taylor was delivering ten bushels of potatoes to a First street hotel, he had a half bushel of the vegetables stolen from his wagon. The theft occured while the boy was in the hotel and his wagon stood in the alleyway adjacent to the hotel.

Wednesday evening Mrs. H. S. Orchard invited several of the friends of Dr. Orchard to their home in Buffalo street to help him celebrate, in a fitting manner, the anniversary of his birth. The evening was devoted to music and games and choice refreshments were served.

Republican State Convention to be held in New York City, April 11, 1908. On account of this convention the Lackawanna Railroad will sell round trip tickets, good to go on all trains of April 9th and 10th, returning up to and including April 13th, at the low rate of $8.80. Consult Lackawanna Agent for Pullman reservation or other information.

In another column the Lackawanna Railroad calls attention to their Easter Excursion to New York City, good going on any train of April 16, returning up to and including April 20th 1908, at the low price of $8.30 for round trip. This is a fine time of the year to visit the city. Make your arrangements to go at this time. For any information call on C. L. Davis, agent, Fulton.

A vigorous boom for Francis E. Cullen, the silvery tongued lawyer-orator of Oswego, for lieutenant-governor, has been started. Mr. Cullen addressed a St. Patrick's Day audience in New York city last week and the metropolitan papers spoke of his effort as the most brilliant one of the evening. If Mr. Cullen decides to go into the campaign seriously he will make himself felt by the State Democracy.

Pietro Massaro was last week the recipient of a "black hand" letter, assuring him of his taking off by foul methods unless he deposited $500 in a small purse at a point near this city. Whether the letter is a hoax or was written by some one whose enmity Massaro has incurred, remains to be disclosed by the police department. Massaro reported the threat to Chief Ross and efforts are being made to unearth the mystery.

Dog tags may be secured from City Chamberlain Bogardus.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred L. Forsyth and family have removed to Mr. Orrin Henderson's Rochester street house.

Neahtawanta Lodge, I. O. O. F.

The Fair committee of Neahtawanta Lodge, I. O. O. F., has been given instructions to perfect plans for a mammoth Fair to be given in the Odd Fellows Temple commencing early in November. The committee is composed of Messrs. Frank Sears, William Hinsdale, Thomas Wilson, A. M. Seymour and Fred Wolcott, which is a sufficient guarantee that the matter will be vigorously pushed.

The recently purchased Allen homestead in Oneida street has been converted into an ideal temple and will be occupied on or near the first of April by the Odd Fellows, Canton Fulton and the Daughters of Rebekah. A seventy-five foot extension will soon be constructed at the rear of the Temple which will be utilized as a shooting gallery, bowling alley and perhaps in the not far distant future a gymnasium will be added. The Odd Fellows are the first secret fraternity in Fulton to possess their own club and lodge rooms.

Pool Tournament Closed.

The concluding games in the pool tournament in which during the Winter had participated teams from the Citizens club, the Masonic club, the Knights of Columbus and the Knights of Pythias, were played on Thursday evening. There has been considerable good natured rivalry throughout the contest and the only player who has not met defeat at some ones hands has been Mr. Crahan, who was on the K. of C. team. He had eight games to his credit. The standing of the clubs at the close of the contest, exclusive of some games not yet played between players out of town or ill, follows:

	Games	Points	P.C.
K. of C.	36	3484	96.7
K. of P.	38	3510	92.3
B. P. O. E.	37	3195	86.3
Masonic Club	40	3267	81.6
Citizens' Club	37	2723	73.5

It is not thought that the result will be materially different when the back games are played.

Nursing Mothers and Over-burdened Women

In all stations of life, whose vigor and vitality may have been undermined and broken down by over-work, exacting social duties, the too frequent bearing of children, or other causes, will find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the most potent, invigorating restorative strength-giver ever devised for their special benefit. Nursing mothers will find it especially valuable in sustaining their strength and promoting an abundant nourishment for the child. Expectant mothers too will find it a priceless boon to prepare the system for baby's coming and rendering the ordeal comparatively painless. It can do no harm in any state, or condition of the female system.

Delicate, nervous, weak women, who suffer from frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down distress low down in the abdomen, or from painful or irregular monthly periods, gnawing or distressed sensation in stomach, dizzy or faint spells, see imaginary specks or spots floating before eyes, have disagreeable, pelvic catarrhal drain, prolapsus, anteversion or retro-version or other displacements of womanly organs from weakness of parts will, whether they experience many or only a few of the above symptoms, find relief and a permanent cure by using faithfully and fairly persistently Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This world-famed specific for woman's weaknesses and peculiar ailments is a pure glyceric extract of the choicest native, medicinal roots without a drop of alcohol in its make-up. All its ingredients printed in plain English on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. Dr. Pierce thus invites the fullest investigation of his formula knowing that it will be found to contain only the best agents known to the most advanced medical sciences of all the different schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments.

If you want to know more about the composition and professional endorsement of the "Favorite Prescription," send postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for his free booklet treating of same.

You can't afford to accept as a substitute for this remedy of known composition a secret nostrum of unknown composition. Don't do it.

Four Kinds of Nails.

The members of a primary class in the young ladies' school were ambitious to emulate the members of the senior class, whom they regarded with considerable envy on account of their proficiency in the art of writing compositions. Becoming eager for a like privilege, the five little girls were told that they might tell the world what they knew about "nails."

A half hour was allotted to the difficult task, and all went to work. The first four had nothing unusual or startling upon their papers, but Sadie M., aged seven, was characterized by considerable ingenuity. She took her place with dignity and read without a tremor, "There are four kinds of nails—finger nails, door nails, toe nails and tacks!" and resumed her seat bewitchingly unconscious that she had caused the smile.

—Kodol is today the best known and most reliable remedy for all disorders of the stomach, such as dyspepsia, heart burn, sour stomach and belching of gas. Kodol contains the same juices found in a healthy stomach. Kodol is pleasant to take. It is guaranteed to give relief and is sold here by all druggists.

Neat Little Game.

After tea she brought over his pipe and his slippers.

"John," she whispered tenderly, "do you know my conscience has been hurting me and I have formed a little conscience fund."

"Conscience fund?" asked the big husband in surprise.

"Yes, dear. You see, I have been borrowing a few dollars out of your vest pockets every night for a week, and here is the entire sum."

"Well! Well! You are an honest little woman."

"And, John?"

"Well, my dear?"

"Now—now that I have been so honest, would—would you mind giving me the 'conscience fund' to buy a pretty hat I saw in a window today?"—Boston Post.

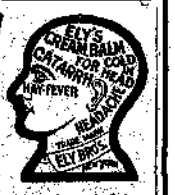
A Powerful Combination.

Tim was a protege of Mr. Blank, a well known Boston lawyer. He was often in trouble, but by personal influence with the courts Mr. Blank managed to have him let down easy, so it became a matter of talk, the Green Bag says, that he did not suffer greatly in being arrested.



"How is it, Tim," some one asked one day, "that you are arrested very often, but never go to jail or pay any fines?"

"It's just this way," Tim replied. "I have Mr. Blank for me lawyer, and what he doesn't know about the law I tells him."

Fruit Grower's Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Oswego County Fruit Grower's Association will be held at the Court House, Oswego, N. Y., March 24th, beginning at 10 A.M. and lasting until 5. P. M.

Prof. U. P. Hedrick, formerly of Michigan and now of the Geneva Exp. Station, will be present to address the fruit growers on the subject of Rejuvenating Old Apple Orchards. He will also treat of general orchard management, spraying, &c. The annual election of officers will be held at this meeting. Everybody invited to attend.

L. J. Farmer, Secretary

Many requests from Catarrh sufferers who use atomizers have caused us to put up Liquid Cream Balm, a new and convenient form of Ely's Cream Balm, the only remedy for Catarrh which can always be depended on. In power to allay inflammation, to cleanse the clogged air-passages, to promote free, natural breathing, the two forms of Cream Balm are alike. Liquid Cream Balm is sold by all druggists for 75 cents, including spraying tube. Mailed by Ely Bros., 26 Warren Street, New York.

Books in India.

In India the printed book is regarded as vulgar if not irreverent, and no devout Hindoo would allow his sacred writings to be contaminated by contact with leather prepared from the hide of some animal's dead body. A leather bound copy of the Bible is for him a remarkable illustration of Christian irreverence.—Churchman
